Lloyd Gets the Word ... Plant Benefits Numerous

By WADE BURKHART

Lloyd Town officials, faced with the possibility of a nuclear power plant being located in their town, journeyed to Waterford, Conn., last week, a town which has an operating atomic plant, and were told that nuclear power plants bring just about nothing but good.

The trip was sponsored by the State Atomic and Space Development Authority (ASDA), which is currently evaluating the suitability of the Lloyd site for a nuclear power plant. Cline Robertson, ASDA director of siting, accompanied the Lloyd officials on the trip.

Among the benefits of the Millstone atomic plants at Waterford, Waterford officials noted, were the use of the site for something they considered a lot less obnoxious than a steel mill or shipyard, $75,000 worth of free dirt for the town landfill, 12 acres leased to the town at $1 a year by Millstone and used for ball fields, and the biggest one of all, money.

East Lyme sits across the Niantic Bay from the power plants on Millstone Point in Waterford. East Lyme residents, according to Waterford First Selectman Herbert Davis, "look across the Niantic and drool at the tax money."

Waterford has a grant list, or total assessment, of $221 million, Davis said, and 45 per cent of that was Millstone. East Lyme residents pay about half again as much in town taxes, which include school tax, as Waterford residents, according to Davis' calculations.

According to a study of the Lloyd site made for ASDA by Mid-Hudson Pattern for Progress, building an atomic plant in Lloyd would have a much greater economic effect. Lloyd's assessed valuation is lower than Waterford's, even excluding the Millstone power plants, and any plant that would be built in Lloyd would be bigger and more expensive than those built so far in Waterford.

Waterford's experience differed in one major economic area from what was predicted in the Pattern study of the Lloyd site. Pattern predicted a jump in service industries because of the plant. Davis and Building Inspector George Phillips said the economic impact of the plant outside of tax money had been nil, with the exception of a few local subcontractors and some local restaurants.

North East Utilities acquired the 450-acre site for the Millstone plants in 1953, and now has Millstone Unit 1 in operation. Unit 2 close to coming on line, and Unit 3 in the building stage. Davis said there was virtually no opposition to the building of the plants, except for that of a few "conservationists."

There has been plenty of opposition in Lloyd, with town voters rejecting the siting of a plant in Lloyd in an advisory referendum June 1, and a previous negative recommendation from the Lloyd Power Plant Advisory Committee.

Waterford town officials pointed out that Waterford was no stranger to atomic power, even before the building of Millstone. Waterford surrounds New London, with that city's activity in nuclear submarine and ship building.

A big population jump has been predicted for Lloyd upon the advent of a nuclear power plant, with the new residents attracted by the low taxes. That has not happened in Waterford, Davis said, "basically because of a hell of an active planning and zoning group."

Janet Polinsky, chairman of the Waterford Planning and Zoning Commission, said the commission kept the growth in Waterford low by being "nasty."

U.S. Census figures show Waterford to have grown only 17 per cent in 1970, compared with 1960, Davis said. He said the towns within a 20 mile radius of Waterford had grown from 50 to 125 per cent in the same period.

Davis, pressed for any negative aspect of Millstone he could think of by Lloyd Supervisor Jon Decker, said the traffic of workers and trucks during construction of the plants was occasionally burdensome, and loudspeakers on the construction site sometimes woke people up at 7 o'clock on summer mornings. He could think of no other bad things about the plants.

The Millstone plants do not have cooling towers, which are proposed for the Lloyd plant; cooling the plant's reactors is done with a once-through system using Niantic Bay and Long Island Sound water. Bill Grant, the first selectman's coordinator, keeps a boat on the Niantic, and said the fishing had "never been better."

Health and safety are not the big issues in Waterford that they are in Lloyd. Davis said of the safety systems in the Millstone plants, "Everything has a backup and the backup has a backup."

Phillips, speaking of the health risks in living near the Millstone plants, said, "It's a calculated risk, but it's so minimal that it shouldn't even be considered."

What Davis calls "a better way of living" for Waterford, provided by Millstone tax money, includes what he called the "best" town schools in the area, increased municipal services of all types, double garbage collection during the summer, and a 31-member police force for a town of 18,000.

The police force buys a new fleet of six cars yearly. "We couldn't do this without Millstone," Davis said.

U.S., Russia Initial 10-Year Commercial Pact

Summit Still Split on Ban

YALTA, USSR (UPI) — President Nixon and Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev disagreed on nuclear test ban terms Saturday and shifted their summit to a sunswet Black Sea villa next door to the site of the historic 1945 Yalta conference.

Maintaining the chummy style of their "personal relationship" summit in spite of the disagreement, Nixon and Brezhnev signed a 10-year commercial pact during a two-hour conference in Moscow's Kremlin, put the test ban issue aside and flew south to the seaside playground known as the Soviet Riviera.

White House aides said the two men would hold almost constant talks on toning down the arms race and possible European troop reductions, as they passed the weekend in a luxurious cliff-top retreat overlooking the sea. Upon arrival, they lunched, resumed their talks, and then separated for dinner and conferences with their aides on today's negotiating agenda.

A Soviet spokesman said the two leaders discussed limitation of underground nuclear testing at the morning Kremlin meeting, but could not agree on terms. Instead, they sent the issue back to technical experts for more work.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler still held out hope for a test ban agreement before the summit ends Wednesday, however, saying "we have five more days to go." He said there would be more negotiation on the subject once the aides report back.

The commercial pact was the fourth pre-negotiated agreement signed during the three-day old summit. Previous accords covered cooperation in energy conservation, housing construction and heart research, and White House sources said agreement to limit defensive anti-ballistic missile installations had been reached in all but minor detail.

Nixon and Brezhnev flew to the Black Sea coast airport at Simferopol aboard a blue and white Ilyushin-62 jet and walked to a black limousine with their arms around each others' waists, smiling and waving at a crowd of Soviet spectators.

Watched by cordial crowds gathered sometimes five-deep along the winding seacoast road, they motored 50 miles along a rugged, flower-scented coastline reminiscent of Nixon's beloved Big Sur region to Yalta and Brezhnev's cliff-top villa at Oreanda, a tropical park that is part of Yalta.

Officials estimated 20,000 spectators lined the route and said this was the biggest welcoming crowd Nixon had ever seen in the Soviet Union. Some onlookers perched on fence posts in fields of yellow marigold and mustard blossoms to get a better view. Farmers laid aside their work in rose gardens and orchards.

What they saw was the first American President to visit this Crimean resort since Franklin D. Roosevelt came secretly in 1945 to conclude terms on the postwar division of central Europe with Josef V. Stalin and Winston S. Churchill.

Brezhnev's villa complex sits right next door to the Livadiya Palace where that conference was held and it is the very height of elite opulence, Soviet style.

Nixon and Brezhnev tucked into a lunch of caviar and smoked salmon at Brezhnev's white two-story stone villa commanding a breathtaking view of the sea from a rocky cliff-top. Thick cypress and acacia forests cling to steep hillsides above the bathing beaches. Thick green lawns hem the villas round. There is an oval swimming pool and a private elevator down the cliff-face to the beach.

Nixon, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and other aides occupied an eight-bedroom buff-colored villa near Brezhnev's white one. Mrs. Nixon had a separate cottage to herself. Mrs. Brezhnev was ill and remained in Moscow.

Nixon's advance men had resisted Soviet plans for him to stay in Yalta because it could be taken as an endorsement of the 1945 Big Three agreements, criticized by some as a Western "sellout." But Oreanda in fact is part of Yalta, not a separate town in itself.

Weicker on White House: We Almost Lost America

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Citing at least 370 legal and constitutional violations by President Nixon's administration and re-election committee, Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., said Saturday that "we almost lost America ... to subversives, terrorists and extremists of the White House."

Weicker, a member of the Senate Watergate committee which goes out of existence at midnight tonight, released a 146-page report to the other members of the panel spelling out his individual views.

"Several years ago many Americans were willing to silently tolerate illegal government activity against militants, terrorists or subversives as an expeditious way to circumvent the precise processes of our justice system," he said. "Though quick, it also proved to be only a short step to using such illegal tactics against any dissenting Americans."

"The result was we almost lost America. Not to subversives, terrorists or extremists of the streets but to subversives, terrorists and extremists of the White House."

Weicker offered 17 recommendations, including making all forms of wiretapping illegal, directing primaries for all federal elective offices, making the attorney general an elected office and establishing a joint congressional committee with complete investigative powers and rotating membership to monitor all domestic intelligence-gathering and law enforcement activities.

"Evidence presented to this committee can and will demonstrate every major substantive part of the Constitution was violated, abused and undermined during the Watergate period," Weicker said.

Meanwhile, Presidential lawyer James D. St. Clair says he believes the House Judiciary Committee will give President Nixon a fair and impartial hearing despite comments attributed to Chairman Peter W. Rodino

Jr. that all 21 Democratic members are ready to recommend impeachment.

Speaking to reporters after a two-day closed-door presentation before the committee, St. Clair said he believed committee members would consider all the evidence fairly and impartially, regardless of the flap that developed over Rodino's remarks.

Rodino was quoted by the Los Angeles Times as telling unnamed "visitors" to his office that all 21 Democrats on the impeachment panel were ready to recommend impeachment but that he was not sure enough Republicans would support it to get the full House to impeach Nixon.

Rodino went before television cameras and interrupted House debate to make a categorical denial of the news report.

Later, ABC newsman Sam Donaldson stated that he had been present at the conversation. He said the Times story "is accurate."

"I didn't cover it because I made the judgment that I was listening to something that under rules was not for publication, but no one said it was off the record," Donaldson said.

"I'm satisfied that the committee members are going to wait until all the evidence is in before they make a decision," St. Clair said.

He also disagreed with White House Communications Director Ken Clawson, who demanded that Rodino resign as a result of the story.

Valley Residents Killed In Car, Cycle Accidents

By TIM SCHUSTER

CATSKILL Two Hudson Valley residents have lost their lives so far this weekend of injuries resulting from motor vehicle accidents, and a number of others sustained injuries.

A Hudson man perished Saturday on Route 9W, Catskill, and a young Ellenville man died Friday near that village when his motorcycle went out of control.

In Catskill, state police at Leeds reported that Frank A. Werner, 25, of Union Turnpike, Hudson, was traveling north on Route 9W at about 1 a.m. Saturday at "an apparent high rate of speed" when his car went over a hillcrest, left the road on the left side and struck head-on into a rocky cliff.

Police said that Werner was pronounced dead upon arrival at Greene County Memorial Hospital reportedly of compound fractures of the skull.

In Ellenville, 21-year-old Kenneth J. Shapiro, traveling west on Route 32 Friday, lost control of his motorcycle about three miles east of the village, slid about 115 feet along the pavement, and struck guard rails, state police reported.

Police said Shapiro was pronounced dead upon arrival at Ellenville Community Hospital of chest injuries after being transported by the Ellenville Rescue squad.

And an Ellenville woman survived an early Saturday morning accident in the Town of Gardiner, even though her car was virtually "cut in half," according to state police at Highland.

Cheryl Orvis, 26, of 5 Mountain Avenue, was traveling north on Route 44.55 at about 6:15 a.m., Saturday when her car moved across the road, leaving the right side and striking several trees.

She was pronounced in "satisfactory" condition at St. Luke's Hospital after emergency treatment for multiple lacerations.

Town of Saugerties police investigated two auto accidents Saturday afternoon, with no serious injuries resulting. They received a call shortly after 1 p.m. to Route 32 (Flatbush Road), where a 16-year-old boy had been struck by a car.

Police said that William Cole was riding with several companions on their bicycles in the eastbound lane when Cole apparently ran into another bicycle's back tires, causing his bike to fall over in the path of an oncoming vehicle.

The car driven by Ronald Amato of RD 4, Box 237, Glasco, struck Cole. He was taken to Benedictine Hospital by Saugerties ambulance where, after several hours in the emergency room, he was finally pronounced to be in "satisfactory" condition. There were no charges against any persons involved.

And at 2:10 p.m., town police in Saugerties were called to the parking lot of Dick's Country Store on Route 212, about 500 feet west of the intersection with Rick's Road.

Police said a car driven by Horton R. Bunt, 74 Dock Street, Saugerties, was moving west on 212 when it left the right side of the road and struck a parked car in the rear.

Anna Ambrosio of New Rochelle was sitting in the parked car, and she was treated and released from Benedictine Hospital after being transported there by Saugerties Ambulance.

Bunt was ticketed by police for driving while intoxicated after he allegedly told them he had fallen asleep at the wheel. He appeared before Town of Kingston Justice Robert Ferrigan and was released in his own custody for reappearances July 3.

Olaf Larsen, 38, Old Stage Road, Saugerties, was listed in "fair" condition at Kingston Hospital following a one-car accident Saturday night on Route 9W in Barclay Heights.

Saugerties Town Police reported that Larsen swerved to avoid hitting a dog, and his car struck a tree. He was taken to the hospital by Saugerties Ambulance. No summons was issued.

And Theresa Zontes, 17, of 19 South Street, Rhinebeck was treated for injuries at Kingston Hospital late Friday night resulting from a slight collision in front of the Port Ewen Firehouse.

Downtown Man Serious After 80-Foot Fall

KINGSTON

Teamwork among several local emergency agencies late Friday and early Saturday may have resulted in saving the life of an elderly Kingston man.

At about 11:30 p.m. Friday, Kingston police received a call that a passerby on Hasbrouck Avenue heard moans emanating from the bottom of the 80-foot cliff.

Investigation revealed that Hugh Roag, 69, of 263 Hasbrouck Avenue had been sitting on the wall overlooking the railroad tracks when he had fallen off, landing in some eight inches of water at the bottom of the precipice.

Fatum's Ambulance was notified and found, upon responding, that a rescue mission was going to be needed. Ulster Hose Company No. 5 was summoned with its hydraulic "patient basket" and lowered it to the bottom.

After almost an hour of work, Roag was finally transported to Kingston Hospital, where he was reported in "serious" condition late Saturday, with several possible fractures.

It was not immediately ascertained how long Roag lay there at the bottom of the cliff, but one spokesman for Fatum's termed him "lucky to be alive ... if someone hadn't heard his moans, he might have been there a lot longer."

All Baskets, and Jeff, Filled

Strawberry picking is a family affair for the Johnsons in upstate Salamanca. The intention was to fill the baskets. Jim and Gary (at rear) went to work with a will, but Jeff did more eating than picking. At last report, all baskets, and Jeff, had been filled.

Handicapped Couple Adopts Children From Thailand

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Carol and Philip Bunin say they couldn't adopt a child in New York City because both are handicapped with cerebral palsy, so they traveled halfway around the world to do it.

After being turned down by adoption agencies in New York, the Bunins made contact with an American doctor in Bangkok who guided them to an institution for mixed-blood Thai children up for adoption.

Four months of paper work later the couple arrived in the Thai capital to pick up their adopted child, 13-month-old Scott Andrew, an unwanted child of an American serviceman and a Thai woman.

"He's very bright and happy, and he has the biggest appetite I've ever seen," Philip said today as Scott Andrew played at his new mother's feet.

The Bunins, who live in Jamaica, Queens, will remain in Bangkok for a few more days because later in the week they will receive a second child, a little girl they already have named Laurie Ann.

The adoptions, already completed under Thai law, become official in New York in December, Mrs. Bunin said, just in time for their 13th wedding anniversary.

"We're going to take them home and have the same frustrations, headaches, aggravations and pleasures as any other couple with children," she happily exclaimed.

Because of his handicap, Bunin, 36, an accountant for the New York City Transit Authority, walks and talks with difficulty. His wife, 33, has trouble walking.

Both have had cerebral palsy since birth and were not considered by New York adoption agencies capable of raising a child.

"I never got over it, because it was so unjust," said Carol. "If we didn't know we could handle it we wouldn't have applied. I try to explain to people who ask that because we're handicapped doesn't mean we feel any different.

We've always loved children and we'll love ours as much as anyone could. I think children realize instinctively when a person has a handicap, and they're very patient," she continued. "I have less trouble with children 2 to 5 years old than the average person because they're so tolerant."

Bunin said the adoption agency in New York had asked them how they would explain to a child later on that he was not only adopted but "why he had to be adopted by handicapped people."

Carol replied that by that time there would be so much love in the family it wouldn't make any difference. But the American agency, she said, thought that wasn't good enough.

Two of Detroit Four Given Seven-Year Terms

By LYNN MULVANEY

KINGSTON

Two members of the convicted "Detroit Four" were sentenced to a maximum of seven years in prison Friday: Peter Fogarty, who was convicted of manslaughter in the shooting death of William Conely of Saugerties was given a maximum of 10 years and Vincent McCarthy who carried out a daring daylight robbery of Banker's Trust Company in Kingston was sentenced to a maximum of three years by Judge Raymond J. Mino in Ulster County Court.

Raymond Hardrick, 31, and Samuel Allen, 31, of Detroit, Mich. were found guilty after trial May 15 of possession of two handguns — a .45 caliber Remington and a .38 caliber Smith and Wesson. They had been arrested with two others, Melvin Lemmons, 33, and Marcella Murphy, 17, also of Detroit, on the New York State Thruway between Saugerties and Kingston, March 28, 1973.

Hardrick and Allen, who were represented by Joseph Torraca, were given indeterminate sentences of up to seven years with a minimum sentence of two and one-third years set by Judge Mino "so the defendants can receive credit" for time already spent in jail.

Both were originally indicted on four counts, possession of more than a pound of heroin and possession of a semi-automatic sub-machine gun, as well as the gun possession charges.

A guilty verdict on the drug charge could have sent the Detroit Four to prison for life but the six-man, six-woman jury acquitted them in May of the two most serious charges.

Judge Mino meted out concurrent sentences to both Hardrick and Allen on the gun possession charges. They were sentenced to the Northeast Reception Center, at Dannemora.

Fogarty, who was originally charged with murder of Conely at the home of Walter and Arlene Dill in Saxton on March 25, 1971, was convicted after trial of manslaughter. Judge Mino sentenced him to an indeterminate term of up to 10 years with credit for time already served in jail and a mental institution.

Fogarty is alleged to have shot the 26-year-old Conely in the back of the head while he was watching television.

G. Thomas Rea, counsel for Fogarty told the court that he would file an appeal.

First Assistant District Attorney Ellen G. Donovan recommended that "due to the gravity of the crime," that Fogarty be sentenced to a state prison.

The 24-year-old U.S. Navy veteran used a .22 caliber rifle in the commission of the crime. McCarthy, the 32-year-old Alexandria, Va. man, who carried out a daring $7,000 daylight robbery of Bankers Trust Company on Wall Street in Kingston last September, was sentenced by Judge Mino to a maximum of three years at Dannemora and a minimum of one and one-third years with credit for time already served. Judge Mino, in passing sentence referred to McCarthy's previous criminal and psychiatric history.

He pleaded guilty earlier this month to robbery in the third degree, over the objections of his counsel, Charles Saccoman.

In court Friday, Saccoman, noting that McCarthy has a past history of emotional problems, also told the court that he is "basically a good man" and that all who know him have a good word for him. He told of McCarthy's having helped quell disturbances in the Ulster County Jail and said that the bank robbery smacked of "The Gang That Couldn't Shoot Straight." Calling it a comedy of errors, Saccoman referred to the fact that McCarthy parked his car in a toll-gated parking lot while he carried out the robbery.

In other action, Karen Sue McKee of Cincinnati, O., the mother of a two and one-half-year-old child was placed on probation by Judge Mino and turned over to Ohio authorities. She is currently on probation by federal authorities in Nassau and Suffolk counties as well as in Ohio. She was indicted for forgery and bail jumping. Her lawyer, Jeffrey Rabin, of Brooklyn, referred to her forging checks here as part of a brief spree, with another individual — an isolated incident in her life.

She was ordered by Judge Mino to make restitution in the amount of $378.78, which she did.

Garrow Sought Help, but...

LAKE PLEASANT, N.Y. (AP) — Robert Garrow and his wife sought psychiatric help for him early last year, "but everybody turned us down," Garrow says.

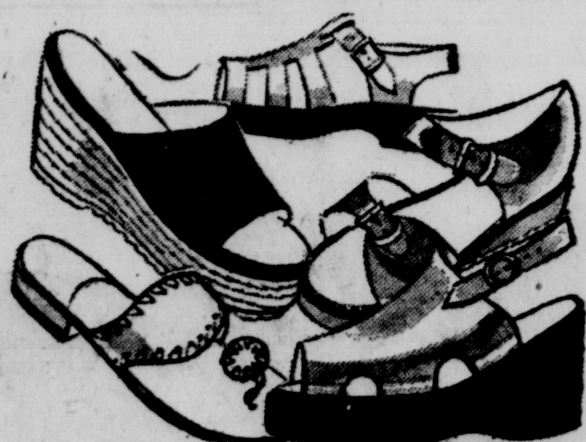

Garrow, convicted of murder Thursday in the stabbing death of a Schenectady youth, admitted three other slayings and seven rapes on the witness stand during his trial. The killings occurred after Garrow said his rejected bid for psychiatric help.

"All these years they just swept me under the rug," Garrow said in a jailhouse interview with Albany Times-Union reporter Stephen Smith. "My last hope was here. One of my attorneys, Francis Belge, said lay it all out, if you know what I mean. You'll get help here. But I didn't. I got buried again."

Garrow, 38, of Syracuse, said he was "ashamed" and "embarrassed" by his disclosures of Philip Dombrowski, 18, of on the witness stand that he killed a camping site in more than a week.

Garrow's conviction was in the stabbing death last July 29 of Philip Dombrowski, 18, of on the witness stand that he killed a camping site in more than a week.

'Lose Those Rainy Day Blues at The YMCA Day Camp'

By CARL GRAHAM

SHOKAN

Summer is here, the kids are home from school, and a rainy day brings the plaintive complaint: "There isn't anything to do."

Mother, you can avoid those rainy day blues and maybe have a few quiet moments to yourself during the day if your youngsters are between six and 14. The Day Camp operated by the YMCA of Kingston and Ulster County doesn't have any formula for preventing rain, but it does have a staff of experienced counselors and a varied program to absorb that youthful energy, rain or shine.

Director Jim Lapak and a staff of 25 operate the camp, set in a beautiful wooded site about three miles east of Route 28. Rustic buildings set among the trees house the necessary camp functions and a man-made lake furnishes the locale for fishing, swimming, canoeing and sailing.

Program Director John Bailey, a Kingston High School teacher during the rest of the year, oversees four senior counselors, each of whom heads an age group of campers. Kathy Boduch minds the Midgets (ages 6-7); Tim Palen jockeys the Juniors (8-9); Holly Heppner supervises the seniors (10-12); and Merry Kaun ramrods the Rangers (13-14).

The children have a voice in what they want to do, depending on their age group. A new lodge, completed last year, houses the program for the Midgets, who usually keep to themselves and who are taken care of by a planned program. Juniors and Seniors have a mixture of required and optional time periods, and Rangers make up their own minds about what particular activity they want to take part in.

The choices offered are just as attractive as the beautiful setting of the camp. Each camper gets one swimming lesson every day, and may swim at other times, too, all under the supervision of counselors with lifesaving certificates. The lake, with a sandy beach and clear bottom, also furnishes a place where canoeists can polish their skills and sailboaters can learn the art in safety.

Campers bring their own lunches and can supplement them with supplies from the camp store. A system of pre-financed exchange coupons prevents the usual loss of coins and bills among children.

The camp is served by five buses, which originate in New Paltz, Port Ewen, Kingston and Woodstock and pick up children along the way to camp. Kids arrive at about 9:15 a.m. and take to the buses again at 3:15 p.m. for the trip home. The routine is varied for Juniors and Seniors, who spend a night at camp during each two-week session.

The camp is set up for a maximum of 200 campers. It begins on the first Monday after school is out and continues through four two-week sessions. Children may attend as many sessions as desired.

The lake also furnishes fishing fun. Youngsters catch small panfish from the shore or from the suspension bridge that crosses one end of the lake.

Other activities include archery, softball, volleyball, soccer, football, hiking, a BB gun range, Indian lore, campcraft and the usual arts and crafts.

There are numerous returnees among the campers, a tribute to the camp's popularity. Fresh Air Fund children from New York staying with Ulster County families mingle with local children. Some children are aided by the "Partners With Youth" program that makes financial aid available for children whose families are unable to meet expenses.

The camp has operated in its present location for the past 15 years after several years at DeWitt Lake. Lapak, a full-time YMCA employee, serves as assistant executive director in charge of building programs during the rest of the year.

"We are accredited by the American Camping Association and the National YMCA," he pointed out. "The kids are covered by insurance from the time they get on the bus until they return."

Counselors, several of whom are former campers, undergo a thorough on-the-job training program before being put on their own. Enrolling in the Counselor-in-Training program, they attend a daily training class and also work under the supervision of an experienced counselor. The CIT program furnishes a manpower pool from which new counselors are drawn.

Projects under way at the camp include winterizing of the recently dedicated Harry duBois Frey Lodge to furnish a spot where groups can take part in winter programs.

Information about signing up children for the camp may be obtained by calling the YMCA in Kingston.

A Look at City Roster for That Dietz Clash

THE GAME—"Guess you guys are gonna be a little short-handed," chortled a county official, mentally dismissing our meager roster of 13 in the aldermen/legislators softball game, slated for Aug. 3 at Dietz.

"But, on the other hand," he said, trying to make us feel better, "Louie DeCicco, (the city clerk) did open it up to ex-aldermen, didn't he?"

Yes he did. Our Louie may be short in stature but he's long on strategy and Louie's maneuver to include ex-aldermen—after all, if we play incumbents, it's 33 against 13—may have been, as the mayor would say, the key to success.

Now when one conjures up the image of an alderman, he might see an old codger, two packs a day, wheezing wreck. And that's just the incumbents. Imagine an "ex-alderman!"

It's true enough that most ex-aldermen are rather long in the tooth but there are exceptions and we shall triumph with same.

City Beat

By HUGH REYNOLDS
Freeman City Hall Reporter

First, there's Frank (Buddy) Jablonski. It is easy to see why Frank Jablonski is called "Buddy." Everyone should have a buddy like Buddy Jablonski. Buddy bears a remarkable resemblance to Little Abner. And while a few of the boys have been known to hoist a beer now and then, Jablonski does it every day, by the kegful, as a deliveryman, of course.

Our other find is Bob Slover, built along the lines of Bud Harrelson . . . Sorry, Bob, Bobby Murcer, Slover's a Yankee fan . . . who up until a few years ago, was one of the better slow pitch players around.

We presume the rules will be slo-pitch because we have as our pitcher, the one and only, "Long Gone" Phil DeCicco. Phil has been bitten by the gopher now and then but only in the friendly confines of Block Park. The real game will be played in Dietz Stadium.

And catching for DeCicco will be Emilio (Junie) Primo. Junie may be somewhat removed from the sport, but his two sons hit softballs over buildings in the Slo-Pitch League. We presume this long-balling ability to be hereditary and that the "old man" still has a few left.

At this point we are beginning to run out of gas but there are still two more worthy of mention, worthy since they both are now playing softball. Again, in the mayor's words, "There is no substitute for experience."

Don Quick may have winter in his hair but there's spring in his legs, at least that's what he tells us. Same for Jack Finch.

Joe McGrane is a fine bowler—shot 700 last year—and it has been our experience that good bowlers are good golfers but that good golfers are generally lousy baseball players. All this means nothing since we don't know if Joe McGrane plays golf, but he does play softball so we're forced to go with the mayor's dictum again.

As for the rest of our crew, Brian Smith is a good golfer so there may not be much help there.

Clarence Stoutenburg and Jimmy Howard are butchers and while they cannot be classified as "hot dogs" (sport talk for grandstanders) we do expect them to beef up our lineup.

John Coffey is a plumber and if nothing else may be able to break into the opposition's lineup. Or even bug them a bit.

If we're looking for a long blast late in the game, we'll call on Gippy Sinsabaugh, the volatile 10th Ward Democrat. Gippy works for Hercules.

Dan Smith is a quiet fellow, but he beat Richie Hoffman last year and Richie Hoffman, according to Richie Hoffman, is one of the better fast pitch softball pitchers around.

Pete Mancuso, in the parlance of our trade, is said to be a good stick. But, alas, it's a swizzle stick. Pete's a bartender. Still, Pete was once referred to as "the stopper" for keeping Ray Garraghan out of his new city hall and so he may be called on to relieve "Long Gone" DeCicco.

The 13th Ward is another one of those father-son deals. Hank Dreiser, the father and the alderman, works at IBM. Ron, the son, lifts weights we think. Leastwise, he lifted one of our serves into the Rondout Creek earlier this season.

There are other ex-aldermen we could think of, of course. There's Bernie Sims, the Alabama flash, said to be great in days gone by. Of course, they play by different rules down there. They still think THEY won the war.

Tommy Davitt has had his three score ten, but no public event would be complete without Terrible Tommy, his straw hat and wild clothes.

Johnny Naccarato may pull up in his gold Cadillac. Can't forget Joe Epstein. He's out of the hospital now.

And you thought we forgot Bobby Gallo. Never mentioned Bobby Gallo, you say. Well, here he is.

Bobby Gallo, as we all know, was a humble flower merchant before branching out into the funeral business. It wasn't easy for Gallo, you understand. Gallo is a ha-ha person as opposed to a boo-hoo person and it was no cinch for him to look sad all the time as required by funeral directors. At best, he looked like he had gas.

But Gallo has persevered and can now summon forth looks that will break your heart. Gallo will be our secret weapon on Aug. 3. He will not play. He will not coach. He will not umpire and he certainly will not broadcast the game with his running mate. We know what Gallo will do. And Gallo knows what Gallo will do. Beyond that, we can only say "we're working on it."

Crawford Called on to Withdraw From Race

The weekly Tioga County Gazette and Times has called on Broome County Executive Ed Crawford to withdraw because of the race for the Republican nomination in the 27th Congressional District, which includes most of Ulster County.

In a June 26 editorial the Gazette and Times called on Crawford to withdraw because he allegedly solicited funds for his Congressional campaign.

Two Binghamton newspapersmen who deal with the county. Clayton W. Coleman, head of the Public Works Department, and Hubert Goodrich, chief of the Purchasing Department, claimed their work on behalf of Crawford was voluntary and had been their own idea. They claimed they had not made solicitations during working hours.

Crawford said he will return contributions solicited by them and ordered all county employees to refrain from soliciting "in behalf of any candidate from a source that has a business or potential business relationship with the county."

Coleman allegedly collected a $400 check for Crawford's campaign from Robert J. Martin, a consulting engineer who later received a $70,000 public works contract from Broome County.

Coleman said the contribution was voluntary and said there was no connection between the contribution and the contract. He said that decisions on hiring consultants are made by the County Legislature, not the County Executive. But it was Coleman who recommended to the Legislature that Martin be hired.

Richard H. Kauf, one of Crawford's opponents for the 27th District Republican nomination, said he would ask the State Attorney General and the Broome County District Attorney to investigate the incident.

Schechter said that this proposal, which first was introduced by Abraham Ribicoff (D-Conn.) 10 years ago, has called the fund raising efforts been passed by a majority of U. S. Senate members from both major parties but has failed to gain sufficient support to be introduced in the House of Representatives.

Crawford said he would not consider making public a list of contributions returned. He said that, if elected, he would vote for passage of the measure, but would actively campaign for its enactment.

Candidate Hits Vets' Problems

BINGHAMTON York State veterans and their families are among the latest of the Democratic nomination victims of Watergate's per-assembly at the Treadway Motor Inn in Binghamton that District, said today that New administration.

Schechter told minbers of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, assembled at the Treadway Motor Inn in Binghamton that among the projects languishing in Washington is one to provide representatives in both houses for New York State a "badly needed, centrally-located national cemetery."

He explained that New York State, with a veterans' population of two million—surpassed only by California's in size—plus another three million dependents of veterans, soon will be without taxes to provide for the burial costs of higher education and members at the State's sole national cemetery, located in Farmingdale.

Schechter said that this proposal, which first was introduced by Abraham Ribicoff (D-Conn.) 10 years ago, has called the fund raising efforts been passed by a majority of U. S. Saugerties Has It All For a Slam-Bang July 4

SAUGERTIES If the Eyes of Texas are upon those in the Lone Star State then certainly it will be most, if not all, all the eyes of the area on Saugerties come Thursday, July 4.

That's the date of the annual Saugerties July 4 parade celebration, and those who have been there before, know it's one of the finest holiday spectacles in these parts.

This holiday celebration, actually starting the night before on July 3, is sponsored by the Saugerties Jaycees and Jaynees with this year's theme on Great Day U.S.A.

And in these days of high prices, it's a comforting thought to know that this two-day Saugerties celebration is free — no charge for the shows and no charge for parking while attending the various events.

Topping the two-day celebration, of course, will be the parade starting at 10 a.m. and the spectacular fireworks display set for about 9:30 p.m. on the holiday night. This super presentation of aerial displays always has been a trademark of these annual holiday feats of the Jaycees.

The two-day events will be kicked off Wednesday night, known as Jaycee Night on July 3.

Some of the highlights for this opening night attraction will include the personal appearances of the 1974 Miss Ulster County Debbie Buchan and the first runnerup Miss Laurie Jayne Yaple.

Also on hand Wednesday night will be the popular Dick Elliot Bertling and the Katch-up band, Xebec with rock and folk music, Kenny Warren and many others.

Wednesday's events at Cantine Field, Washington Avenue Extension, get underway at 6 o'clock.

Everybody loves a parade and at 10 a.m. July 4 the 10-division marchers will step off with Miss Ulster County following up later by presenting awards for the top units.

Featured in the march will be the Saugerties High School Band, the Amerscot Highland Pipe Band, St. Aloysius "Blue Eagles" from Ridgewood, the Kingston Indians, the Continental Cadets of Catskill, the Yankee Doodle Band from Rensselaer, Troop 36 Green Berets, Troop 12 Indians, the Pacemakers Drum and Bugle Corps of Poughkeepsie and the New York Knickerbockers, official band from New York City.

And all this is just the beginning of a fun-filled, action-packed day of events.

Following the parade and awarding of prizes to the top units, there will be a drum corps exhibition, bicycle marathon, baby parade, sensational high wire act by Los Obandos featuring breathtaking performances above Cantine Field at 1:30 and 3:30 and 4:30, a watermelon contest, children's games, where there will be a nominal charge for a two-hour program.

And still more to come.

Other highlights will include a model rocket demonstration, performance by the Lefooters square dance club in the tent at 3 and at the main bandstand at 4:45. Also a sack race, demonstration by the Kingston Aeromodelers at 3:45, a penny hunt, and at 4 the 1st Battalion, 1st Infantry Sport Parachute team from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in a jump to Cantine Field under colorful canopies.

There will be a Kung Fu demonstration at 5:15 and a

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The Postal Service apparently provided President Nixon with a confidential count of the volume of mail going into the headquarters of his Democratic opponent, Sen. George McGovern, during the last two months of the 1972 campaign.

With these figures, a direct mail expert could determine the response, and even estimate the dollar figure McGovern was getting from his fund-raising drive.

The Democratic presidential candidate raised most of his campaign funds through mail solicitation. The contributions went through Washington's 20th Street post office.

We have now learned that the Postal Service on Sept.

5, 1972, began tabulating the volume of mail moving through the post office to McGovern's headquarters. This unusual mail count continued until Nov. 9, two days after the election.

The President appeared to be asking about this mail count on Sept. 15, 1972, according to the White House transcripts. He asked his counsel John Dean about "watching . . . McGovern contributors." Dean assured the President that "we've got a hawk's eye on that."

A moment later, the President mused: "I don't think he is getting a hell of a lot of small money. I don't think so. I don't believe this crap." Then he turned to his staff chief H.R. Haldeman. "Have you had this post office check yet?" Nixon inquired.

"That John was going to do," Haldeman replied. "I don't know."

The transcript doesn't show whether the President ever received this report on McGovern's mail. We have established only that a count was made.

The Postal Service also kept count of the mail going to President Nixon's campaign headquarters during the same two-month period. Our sources suggest, however, this may have been a camouflage. If only McGovern's mail had been counted, the sources pointed out, postal workers sympathetic to McGovern might have become suspicious and tipped off McGovern about the meddling with his mail.

A supervisor of the 20th Street station gave a lame explanation of the mail volume checks. He kept track of the campaign mail, he said, so he could plot future manpower needs. But the volume of mail generated by a presidential campaign, of course, wouldn't be duplicated for another four years.

The present 20th Street postmaster offered a conflicting but more plausible excuse. He said the volume figures were kept to protect the Postal Service from possible complaints. The White House did not respond to our requests for comment.

Meanwhile, Senator McGovern is encountering echoes of 1972 in his fight for reelection to the Senate. The same false charges of cowardice that McGovern thought were laid to rest in 1972 have now been revived in his Senate campaign.

His opponent is a conservative former Air Force lieutenant colonel and Vietnam prisoner named Leo Thorsness. One of his first moves was to bring in an out-of-state consultant, Lyn Nofziger, who was a member of the White House dirty tricks team in 1972.

The veteran, able Nofziger was given $10,000 for example, to try to keep George Wallace off the California ballot in 1972. At least $1,200 of this money was distributed to American Nazi storm troopers, although Nofziger claims it was without his knowledge.

Earlier, Nofziger, as an aide to California's Gov. Ronald Reagan, leaked information to the press about the homosexual activities of two liberal Reagan colleagues.

Now, scurrilous cards on McGovern's alleged cowardice of World War II are turning up in South Dakota. These quote from a discredited John Birch Society article which claims that McGovern, as a bomber pilot, refused to continue on a mission and his plane was flown back by a co-pilot. Actually, McGovern was a decorated war hero.

During the 1972 campaign, John Dean arranged for a contact to snoop into McGovern's service record to check out the cowardice story. But Dean was obliged to report to Haldeman in a confidential memo dated June 16, 1972:

"The party reviewing the file (advised) that there is nothing in McGovern's file which directly substantiates the allegation about his cowardice." On the contrary, Dean wrote, the records showed "the citations for McGovern's decorations, including his Distinguished Flying Cross, and reflects his various promotions during his military career."

There is no reason to believe that Leo Thorsness, a man of solid integrity, has had anything to do with distributing the cowardice cards. A spokesman said: "We don't want that kind of stuff around here."

Nofziger also denounced the distribution of the false charge as "crap." In Memphis, pamphleteer John W. Bigger, who printed the cards, said he had produced tens of thousands of cards in 1972. The South Dakota distribution, he said, was either from an old printing or were reproductions.

Restraint Needed

It is important for Israel to exercise restraint in the Middle East in order not to erode the diplomatic strength of the United States which is trying to maintain its position as middleman while not deserting its special relationship with Israel.

It is time a solution was found for ending the tragic cycle of terror and counter-terror that goes on between Palestinian refugee guerrillas and Israeli reprisal raiders.

Of course there is no justification for the murderous attacks on Israeli villagers, including women and children, which are the standard weapons of the Palestinian terrorists.

There is no doubt legitimate concern and agony by the Israelis in the face of continuing terrorist acts by the Arab guerrillas but if the raids and counter raids go on unchecked they could upset the whole encouraging diplomatic process begun in the Middle East.

It cannot be stated vigorously enough that it is up to Arab and Palestinian leaders to curb the terrorists in their midst. If they now expect Israel to make territorial compromises and move toward a final settlement they must show that they are sincere in negotiations and they do not support the wanton terrorism as the route to solution of the Palestinian question.

Israel's recent air attacks on south Lebanon have given the Soviet Union new leverage in its efforts to score points with the Palestinians and upstage U. S. Mideast peace efforts.

There are also reports that pressures are building up for a U.N. Security Council meeting where a resolution could be introduced to condemn Israel. This would put Washington in a very sensitive position. If the United States votes for such a resolution it would anger Israel. If it voted against the resolution, it stands to lose the leverage and confidence it has so carefully built up with Arab leaders.

Because of the precarious position of the negotiations in the Middle East, it is hoped that Israel will take the broader view, however difficult, to exercise restraint.

Joint Space Mission

About a year hence, astronauts from the United States and the Soviet Union will take part for the first time in a joint space venture. This mission, in which space vehicles launched by the two countries will dock together in an Earth orbit, will be most significant milestone in space exploration.

The undertaking is brought newly to mind by word that the U.S. astronaut team has arrived at the Soviet Space Training Center for a working session with the Soviet cosmonauts involved. Together they will concentrate on training in docking techniques and methods of working in space.

Enter the Bricklin

General Vehicle is not now, and may never be, a threat to the supremacy of General Motors. Still, the advent of General Vehicle and its first production model called the Bricklin is intriguing. This will be the auto industry's first major new competitor since the Kaiser-Frazer venture of the mid-1940s.

While the Bricklin is not a radical departure from cars now on the road, it does have unusual features. Prime among these is a "gull wing" door that opens upward. The snappy two-seater, designed to appeal to the sports car-minded, nevertheless has a special bumper and crushable front end designed to give its occupants more protection than they get in conventional cars.

The Bricklin will not make a major impact on the market right off; the first-year sales projection is 4,000 units, with 30,000 hoped for in 1975. The company's chairman, Malcolm Bricklin, is frank to say that for awhile he'd just as soon stay out of the way of the Big Three and even American Motors.

It will be kind of nice, though, to have a new entry in the passenger car sweepstakes. Especially since Bricklin's mother, Gertrude, will head the firm's consumer complaint department with "unlimited authority, including the practically unheard of power to refund a customer's money or give him a new car if by some chance he gets a lemon." Now, there's a selling point!

By WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY Jr.

With all the diversions of the President's trip to the Mideast, and now his trip to the Soviet Union, we are tempted to lose sight of the arguments now being considered by the courts: on which, conceivably, the future of Mr. Nixon will hang. Or, to put the question less particularly, on which the future of the American president will hang, inasmuch as it is Mr. Nixon's position that he is fighting nowadays not so much for himself, as for the independence of the presidential office.

Concerning this, there is a great deal of hocus pocus. On the whole, the United States has profited from an Executive insulated from the whim of the legislature. But it has not been all good. At worst, it has made American presidents ineffective, and American congresses irresponsible when a President of one party confronts a Congress of another party, it is all too easy to blame each other for acts of national delinquency.

On the whole, it would probably have been better if Congress had overcome President Hoover in 1931, dissipating the Congressional servitude to Franklin Roosevelt that would accumulate two years later.

And, on the whole, it would have been better if President Eisenhower, during his six years as a minority president, had accentuated the paradox and persuaded the voters in 1958 of the dangers in a polarized distribution of power between the Executive and the Legislature. There are bards in American political theory who love it the way it is. In fact it has disadvantages, and the argument now going on proceeds without any theoretical reference to these disadvantages.

Consider. The House of Representatives, seeking to gather material against Richard Nixon, subpoenas certain of his tapes. Richard Nixon refuses to make them available. He replies most courteously to Mr. Rodino, the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, giving him any number of historical examples of Congress refusing to give confidential material to the White House, of the White House refusing to give confidential material to the Courts, of the Courts refusing to give confidential material to Congress — ad infinitum.

Then President Nixon loses a moral thunderbolt, which must have rocked the Democratic liberals on the Judiciary Committee, and their mentors in the Ivy League. Rodino had put it this way in his letter to Nixon: that Nixon's failure to supply the desired tapes would "free (Committee members) to consider whether your refusals warrant the drawing of adverse inferences concerning the substance of the materials, and whether your refusals in and of themselves might constitute a ground of impeachment."

Years ago, the argument used to be on the question whether someone who pleaded the 5th Amendment as a ground for refusing to testify to a Congressional committee could do so without in any way prejudicing the moral or legal case against himself. A few distinguished scholars took the position that taking the 5th entitled the jury (or the Congressional committee) to draw unfriendly conclusions towards the taker of the 5th. By and large, Prosecutor Nixon was on this side of the argument at that time. Those who now charge him with inconsistency may do so too hastily. Taking the 5th Amendment in answer to the question, "Do you now or have you ever belonged to the Communist Party?" is significantly removed from: "Produce the record of your conversations with the Attorney General on April 4, 1972.

Mr. Nixon takes the position that the executive must be the judge of the relevance of the transcript of April 4, 1972. It happens that he has a nice example here — because on another occasion he did give up that transcript, to another investigator, and it turned out to have nothing in it of any conceivable interest to the impeachment committee. But in his formal answer to Rodino, President Nixon quoted the courts as having on one occasion ruled that even allowing comment by a judge or prosecutor on the exercise of a valid Constitutional claim is "a penalty imposed by courts for exercising a Constitutional privilege," and that "it cuts down on the privilege by making its assertion costly."

I happen to think this is mostly flappdoodle, but I think the President has got hold here of an argument the Supreme Court can neglect only at the expense of turning right around on its 5th Amendment argument, and whether it is willing to do this for the sole sake of skewering Nixon on this recalcitrant point, we can only guess; and wait, impatiently, to see.

Nicholas Von Hoffman:

Let Them All Turn Pro

WASHINGTON — For weeks this spring, uncounted numbers of agents, coaches and sports journalists have been disrupting the arboreal tranquility of Petersburg, Va. U.S. Grant could not have made more noise than this mob hot after the body of one Moses Malone, a 6-foot-11-inch high school senior.

The University of New Mexico, that ancient seat of learning where knowledge is revered as in few other places, stationed a man in Petersburg for three months in order to get the young Moses to matriculate at Cactus U., where when eyes grow weary from study they like to play a little basketball. The man was frustrated by a certain Lefty Driesell of the University of Maryland, who crowed to the world that Moses' "Mama wanted him to go to Maryland, and he listened to her."

Mr. Lefty said that Mother Malone was moved by admiration for Maryland's ill-proportioned brick buildings, which give the campus the air of a classical revival penal compound. In all this the National Collegiate Athletic Association's rules governing amateurism were not violated; it being ethical for battalions of recruiters to hector a teenage kid into signing an agreement to play for far lower wages than what the New York Knicks would pay.

Not that there aren't many violations of NCAA rules. "I got $50 a touchdown and $1 a yard," says Jim Kirby of Long Beach State, an institution on indefinite NCAA probation, which deprives it of television revenues and prohibits it from playing postseason games. John Read, a businessman booster for Long Beach athletics is quoted by Sports Illustrated as saying: "I helped Kirby get a loan, but believe me ours was a penny-ante business compared with the big money operations going on in Los Angeles. I know because I'm a member of USC's Cardinal and Gold Club."

Of course all this sneaking and hiding isn't to conceal anything illegal. There are a few charges of cheating on exams, but even that isn't unlawful. The crime such as it is, consists of older men paying younger men to play a game, hardly worth getting worked up over in a time when an outstanding tennis player who didn't turn pro would be regarded as slightly peculiar.

The scandal is the rules themselves, not the routine breaking of them. SI quotes Darrell Royal, the football coach at the University of Texas, as saying: "You're out there trying to sell yourself and your school, and the prospect ain't hearin' a word you're saying. All he's wondering is when you're going to start talking money." "When they get to the bottom of Watergate," Indiana's

Bobby Knight is recorded as predicting, "they'll find a football coach."

It needn't be. The aversion to professionalism is cultural lag, and hanging on to it simply creates messy contradictions.

Per se, there's nothing objectionable about a place like UCLA becoming a farm team and developing stars for the Seattle Supersonics or the Philadelphia 76ers. Nonprofit institutions own many different kinds of businesses for the same reasons that they invest their endowments in stocks and bonds. What's unbearable is making metaphysical distinctions between amateur and pro.

The dividing line should be self-evident. Any team or any player on any team that charges admission or receives revenues from radio or television broadcasting should be defined as professional, and therefore not subject to NCAA regulation. Then all sports scholarships — a strange contradiction in terms — can be abolished, thus allowing chaps like Mr. Moses Malone to play professionally for the University of Maryland while going to school there or anywhere else by paying his tuition out of his salary, as other students with off-campus jobs do.

Such an arrangement has advantages for everybody. The players get paid their true market value; those who pay them are no longer stigmatized for engaging in an innocent business enterprise. Schools are given an economic rationale for closing down money-losing teams, and higher education gets out of what has become a tacky, degrading and undignified bind. Hypocrisy aside, the present arrangement demeans everybody, but especially serious students who see scholarships go to boys whose only academic credential is that they kept growing after their classmates stopped.

Retirement

Editor, The Freeman:
I would appreciate it very much if you would print the following in The Freeman as an open letter to the general public.

I would like to make a few comments upon the retiring of Mr. Mario Marola as Chief X-Ray Technician at the Benedictine Hospital. I have worked under Mr. Marola for the past several years and have learned a great deal from his way of dealing with people. His kindness and understanding of people, young and old alike, always put the patients at ease and his sense of humor came in handy many times. His standards of fairness and decency guaranteed the best possible service to everyone. I am sure that many people in the area served by the Benedictine Hospital would like to join me in thanking Mr. Marola for his fine service to the public and in wishing him the very best of luck and God's rich blessings upon his retirement.

Sincerely yours,
John Simmons

Campaign Spending

Editor, The Freeman:
This writer, along with other Socialist Labor Party members has been handing out SLP leaflets dealing with public campaign financing.

Though the point has been made many times before, it bears repeating. Morality and honesty cannot be legislated as the experience with the 1971 Federal Election Campaign Act offers emphatic reaffirmation of that fact. The Watergate scandals have had no effect. They have resulted in merely a change of tactics.

Watergate is the excuse for steps being taken that constitute a growing menace to the severely curtailed free ballot. Huge government subsidies to the major party candidates will serve to institutionalize the two party system which has no basis in law, no basis in fact and no basis in America's traditional concept of free elections, especially considering there is NO basic difference between the major parties.

My hard earned money is going to the Socialist Labor Party, NOT to any others. I agree with HAMILTON FISH in his June 16 letter in the SUNDAY FREEMAN that: "Most Americans are now cowards."

That's why, whether HAM FISH likes it or not, there will come a time when the majority of Americans will agree with the SOCIALIST LABOR PARTY capitalism has to go and establish Socialism!

Open Letter

To the members of the Democratic Party:
Ulster County, New York.

Criticism is very often resented, especially from one outside of the county, but I hope that it is accepted in the constructive way that it is intended. Several years ago there was talk of dissension within the Democratic Party itself; if anything, it was certainly evident when the Democratic Party nominated a Republican "loser". If I am not mistaken, it was mentioned "on the air" that this man had been asked own political aspirations, its function is ineffective. Remember, "united we stand, divided we fall". The Democratic Party is united for a purpose; why deviate. No criticism is meant for the "nominee"; I never met the man. I am questioning "party loyalty". Democratic Party loyalty. The enigma of it all is that if this man is a "winner", why he wasn't reelected by his own party, or as the paper stated, by the Conservative Party either.

Very truly yours,

Going Up

Editor, The Freeman:
They did it again by trying to get rid of the senior citizens. I don't have to write about all the articles going up — oil, electricity, gas and food; everybody knows that. Now they raised the assessment by $800. Only half of the town knew about that. I don't have to ask how they think we can pay that because it is "none of their business."

This is not only for the senior citizens, but all the town's people of Rosendale are concerned about it. I'd like to know how most of the citizens pay their bills. Perhaps, money in the bank or they open a can of dog food for lunch. This happened already. They call that progress? Another thing, make the questions easier so we don't have to pay $10 to have it done.

N. Y., New England Hail Amtrak Word

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New York and New England lawmakers and other officials were quick to hail last week's announcement by the Department of Transportation that Boston-Chicago passenger train service will be reinstated via upstate New York.

The schedule and the dates of the new services will open will be announced later by Amtrak. Transportation Secretary Claude S. Brinegar said Amtrak is the semipublic corporation which runs most of the country's passenger trains and will operate the new service.

The Boston-Chicago route was dropped by Amtrak when it was formed in 1971.

Brinegar was ordered by Congress to initiate at least one new experimental service in 1974 and one in 1975. In addition to the Boston-Chicago service, Brinegar announced the addition of a second Norfolk to Cincinnati Amtrak route.

Selection of the Boston-Chicago route capped several months of intense lobbying by numerous states and cities which wanted the new 1974 service. Brinegar said the route was selected because it would "serve the largest potential population" of any other prospective route.

New York Gov. Malcolm Wilson issued a statement saying the service "will greatly benefit some 15 per cent of the country's population who live in or adjacent to this most important travel corridor."

The train will run over the old New York Central "water level route" from Chicago to Albany, and the old Boston & Albany to Boston, all now part of the Penn Central. Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., said the train would stop daily at Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Utica and Albany.

In Albany, a spokesman for New York State's Transportation Department said operations would involve the replacement of about 12 miles of track south of Rensselaer, N.Y. The track was removed Brinegar's announcement means that Cleveland, Ohio and Erie, Pa., will regain passenger service for the first time in more than a year. Amtrak briefly operated a New York-Chicago train through Cleveland and Erie, but dropped the train when several states failed to pay their share of the costs under a plan that allowed states to gain passenger service by paying two-thirds of the losses.

Sens. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., and Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., were among other lawmakers who praised the decision to reinstate the route. Brooke said the line will port serve more persons than any other route — 20 million or 10 per cent of the nation's population.

"And no other route would solve one of the worst gaps in the Amtrak system," he added.

Javits said the decision was "the necessary first step in establishing a truly national means that Cleveland, Ohio and Erie, Pa., will regain passenger service for the first time in more than a year. Fischer Drops Chess Crown

NICE, France (AP) — The International Chess Federation today gave world champion Bobby Fischer three months to change his mind and accept its rules for the 1975 world championship.

Earlier, the federation general assembly overwhelmingly rejected demands that the rules be changed to suit Fischer.

In a cable from Los Angeles on Friday, Fischer announced his resignation from the world title he won in Reykjavik, Iceland in 1972, because of a dispute over the championship rules.

But Fred Cramer, who represents Fischer, had said he hoped the matter could be re-solved.

Cramer, a federation vice president, said the resignation was included in a cable Friday to federation president Max Euwe.

Fischer became world champion with a triumph mixture of superb chess and aggressive public relations in a series of games against Russia's Boris Spassky in 1972. He was the first American to gain the world crown since Alexander Alekhine in 1937.

His title defense, under federation rules, is set for next year against a Russian challenger.

BIG BROTHER DETAILS — The Rev. Richard L. Brihn (R) pastor of the Community Church of High Falls discusses Big Brother Organization with Robert Burlarley, president of the Rondout Valley Lions Club. The Rev. Mr. Brihn who is involved in the Dutchess County Big Brother Organization was guest speaker at a recent Lions Club meeting. He explained the organization and told of plans for an Ulster County group being established through the cooperation of the Ulster County YMCA.

Local Death Record, Memoriams

Mrs. Mildred E. Bunse
Mrs. Mildred E. Bunse, 88, of 43 Garden Street, died at the Ulster County Infirmary Friday after a long illness. Born in Kingston, she was the daughter of the late Charles and Harriet Kittle Burzee. Mrs. Bunse is survived by a son, Charles F. Bunse, of Kingston; a granddaughter, Mrs. Kay King, of Kingston; a grandson, Charles (Buz) Bunse, of Ballston Spa. Two great-grandchildren also survive. Funeral services will be held at the McCord-Leahy Funeral Home Inc., 27 Smith Avenue, Monday at the convenience of the family. Burial will be in Montrose Cemetery. There will be no calling hours.

Frederick N. Decker
Frederick N. Decker, 65, of 47 Harding Avenue, died Friday. Surviving are his wife, the former Hyla M. Baker; a son, John F. Decker, of Catskill; and a daughter, Mrs. Linda Hung, of Zena. Twelve grandchildren, several nieces, nephews, and cousins also survive. For 25 years, he was a machinist with Electrol Inc., and then went with his son in the taxi business in Catskill. Funeral services will be held at the A. Carr & Son Funeral Home, 1 Pearl Street, Wednesday at 10 a.m. Friends may call from 3 to 5 and 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday. No burial arrangements were announced.

George H. Messing
George H. Messing of 7 Joy's Lane, died at Kingston Hospital early Saturday morning. Mr. Messing was born at Whiteport, son of Henry and Mary Wadge Messing. He had been a resident of Kingston for nearly all his life. Until his retirement, about seven years ago, he had been employed for many years at Electrol Corp. He was a member of the International Association of Machinists, No. 1562. Mr. Messing is survived by his wife, the former Margaret Storm, and a brother, William H. Messing, of Kingston. Several nieces and nephews also survive. The funeral will be held at the Jensen & Deegan Funeral Home Inc., 15 Downs Street, Tuesday at 11 a.m., where the Rev. Gary Mehl, pastor of Immanuel Lutheran Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Montrose Cemetery. Friends may call at the funeral home Monday from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m. Memorials may be made to the Heart Fund or Immanuel Lutheran Church.

Samuel Basch
Samuel Basch, 77, of Stuyvesant Charter Apartments, died early Saturday following a short illness. A native and lifelong resident of this city, he was the son of the late Abraham and Esther Basch. Memoriam
In loving memory of Lulu Coddington on her 3rd Birthday in Heaven, June 29. We think of you in silence. No eye can see us weep. But many a silent tear is shed. When others are asleep. When we are lonely And everything goes wrong. We seem to hear you whisper, "Cheer up and carry on." Each time we look at your picture, You seem to smile and say, "Don't worry I'm only sleeping. We'll meet again someday." So you who have a loving Mother, Cherish her with care For you'll never know the loneliness 'Til you find she isn't there. LOVING HUSBAND, CHILDREN & GRANDCHILDREN

Happy Gal... 'She's in The Army Now'

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — wanda High School three years ago. It's Pvt. Karol A. Kondratuk, U.S. Army, thank you, and she couldn't have been happier Saturday morning.

After three weeks of trying the pretty 20-year-old from North Tonawanda is in the Army now.

Miss Kondratuk signed up and was accepted earlier this year. Three weeks ago, however, she was notified she was turned down because of defective vision.

Upset at the rejection, she decided to picket the federal building her to try to get Army officials to change their minds again. They did — and she was sworn in Friday.

She said she wanted to join the Army because it said it would guarantee she could continue her career as a commercial artist. She said she had become bored with civilian life and had been thinking about enlisting since her graduation from North Tona-

"But, I knew I wouldn't get that before, but everyone was any action unless I made friendly and a lot of people she may be in for some surprises. She says she looks myself conspicuous," she said, stopped to talk to me."

She left Saturday for basic forward to the Army as "being like a giant Girl Scout camp."

Meyer Lansky Verdict Reversed

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — A federal appeals court has thrown out the contempt conviction of reputed underworld financial leader Meyer Lansky, saying the Justice Department did not give him enough time to answer a subpoena.

Lansky, 72 and ailing, was found guilty last year on a charge of not answering a subpoena issued by a federal grand jury in Miami. He had been sentenced to a year and a day in prison.

The verdict was reversed Friday by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Lansky was free on bail pending the appeal.

The grand jury, probing reports that Lansky skimmed gambling profits from a Las Vegas hotel, ordered him on Feb. 22, 1971, to appear in 19 days. Lansky was in Israel and was not served with the subpoena until March 4.

"When the government requested that the court fix March 11 as the return date of the subpoena, it made compliance by the defendant virtually impossible," Judge Robert A. Ainsworth wrote in the appeals decision.

Ainsworth said U.S. District Judge James L. King should have told Lansky's six-member jury to acquit because the government failed to prove that Lansky willfully and contemptuously avoided compliance.

Lansky had suffered a heart attack and was being treated for stomach ulcers in Israel when the subpoena was served.

Girl Falls to Her Death, Pope Prays Over Body

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — A 4-year-old girl escaped her father's attention Saturday, squeezed through protective railings atop the dome of St. Peter's Basilica and fell to her death. Pope Paul VI went personally to pray by her body and give his absolution.

Vatican officials identified the girl as Maria Pasqua Agostino, the only child of a plumber and his wife who came from Alberobello on the heel of Italy's boot to Rome for a vacation.

The family climbed to the top of the dome which commands one of the most beautiful views of the Eternal City. The external observation post is guarded by an iron railing. Vatican officials said it is customary for supervisors on the dome to caution parents with children but Maria Pasqua squeezed through the iron bars and fell 165 feet to a terrace below while they were not looking.

Vatican officials said efforts to revive her were futile.

Pope Paul sent his top aide, Msgr. Giovanni Benelli, the Vatican substitute secretary of state, to convey his condolences to the family. Later, after an appearance at his window on the occasion of the feast day of St. Peter and Paul, the Pope left his apartment to visit a makeshift Vatican morgue.

The Pope prayed by the body of the little girl and then gave her his personal absolution. He threaded a rosary through her fingers and then spoke with the parents. He asked them to be guests in the Vatican and otherwise tried to comfort them.

Zumwalt Ends Navy Command With Warning

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI) — Standing between the cannons on the Naval Academy steps, Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt Jr. lowered his personal flag for the last time Saturday and relinquished command of the U.S. Navy with a warning that the nation has "surrendered temporarily... the undisputed supremacy at sea."

Zumwalt turned over command to his successor, Adm. James L. Holloway III, 32, saying, "Adm. Holloway, the watch is yours. I pass on to you the absolute authority and responsibility of this command."

Zumwalt himself had considered the challenge of a growing Soviet fleet as the main feature of his watch. In his departing address from the steps of Bancroft Hall, the dormitory in which he lived during his years as a midshipman, he warned: "The consequences of conceding the world ocean to others are simply too serious to be allowed to continue. Squad's Aim

Washington Roll Call

Recent Voting

WASHINGTON, D.C. sonnel, they provide pilots with One bill and two amendments were passed by the House of Representatives during the recent major roll call for the period June 13-19.

The passed bill concerned postal subsidies and was approved, 277 for and 129 against. This bill (S. 411) was designed to delay the effective date of higher postal rates for newspapers, magazines, books and mail from non-profit organizations.

At present, a government subsidy keeps those rates below actual cost. The subsidies were scheduled to expire in 1977 for newspapers and magazines and in 1982 for non-profit mail. The action sets back those dates to 1980 and 1988 respectively.

Congressmen Hamilton Fish Jr. (R-25) and Benjamin A. Gilman (R-26) voted in favor of the bill while Rep. Howard Robison (R-27) opposed.

Extending the subsidies is expected to cost $753 million. The bill now goes to conference.

The House passed, 216 for and 185 against, an amendment to increase by $1.85 million the fiscal 1975 appropriation for Justice Department's Anti-Trust Division.

All three local congressmen voted for this amendment.

It was attached to a bill appropriating funds for the Departments of Justice and Commerce (H.R. 15404) and was later passed and sent to the Senate.

The added money restored funds that the Appropriations Committee had cut from the Administration's budget request.

An amendment to continue the existing ban against the Federal Aviation Administration automating its manned flight service stations AM and FM signals. The bill was passed, 281 for and 120 against.

Congressmen Fish, Gilman and Robison all voted in favor. There are more than 300 flight service stations across the country. Staffed by FAA personnel, they provide pilots with

Stephen May, Officials Meet

State Hopeful Visits Area

KINGSTON State Republican Comptroller candidate Stephen May was in Kingston last week to meet with GOP County Chairman Albert Spada, County Treasurer Fred H. Dubois and Republican Treasurer William Collins to discuss fiscal problems and other Republican campaign matters.

The former mayor of Rochester faces incumbent Democrat Arthur Levitt, a firmly entrenched candidate who May admits will be hard to beat.

"I don't minimize the odds in running against an incumbent," he said, "but I accepted the nomination with my eyes wide open."

Challenges are nothing new to May who supported and worked with former U.S. Senator Kenneth Keating at a time when he was running an "uphill fight."

May feels however that people are looking for a change this year and it is an "exciting year to become involved politically at the state level."

The state is rapidly responding to change, he said, referring to such things as campaign reform.

He feels that Gov. Wilson should run with "a complete team," and that although he is part of that team, May maintains he will have "no trouble" maintaining independence and integrity, especially in view of the climate of Watergate.

The New York State GOP has succeeded because it has "the most intelligent, informed and sophisticated voters in the country," incorporating the Dewey-Rockefeller-Wilson tradition.

As mayor of Rochester from 1970 to 1973, May said the city received the coveted Triple-A credit rating, a significant accomplishment for a metropolitan area in the throes of an urban crisis. His fiscal experience, he feels, will help him in his job of watching the public purse as comptroller.

A lawyer, May addressed the annual convention of the Empire State Association of Accountants earlier at the Fallsview Hotel in Ellenville.

During his opening campaign swing through this part of the state, May, referring to Watergate, said it "could be a blessing in disguise for the American political system."

He said that "in the best self-corrective tradition of the American people, we are in the process of exorcising the evils epitomized by Watergate and launching a new era of openness, candor and integrity in public life."

May acknowledged that "the politics and government a bad name." May noted that "our basic institutions are beginning to do their job."

He said that "in spite of all stresses and strains, the system is working. Our judicial system, through grand juries and the courts, has unearthed the truth and brought offenders to justice. Our free press—the eternal guardian against governmental misconduct and abuse of power, has fulfilled its responsibilities with persistence and courage. And the constitutional processes are under way in Congress."

"The reforming impulse of America is alive again," he said. "Our system is being cleansed and we will emerge as a stronger, more united people as a result of the Watergate trauma," he predicted, adding that the higher standards voters will expect of candidates for public office will result in better people serving in government.

Advice for Retirees

Stretching $$

(Editor's Note: Inflation has hit home for all of us, but particularly those people on fixed incomes, such as retired workers. The following article is the first in a three-part series on How to Stretch Retirement Dollars prepared by the New York State Society of Certified Public Accountants.)

NEW YORK

Recent increases in Social Security benefits, now tied to the cost of living, plus Congressional action to strengthen and protect private pension plans, have improved the outlook for America's elderly.

But in spite of the improvements, relatively few elderly people are so well fixed financially they do not have to watch their pennies.

To help them, the New York State Society of Certified Public Accountants has gathered information about various benefits and options available to persons of retirement age.

The biggest single contributor to the average senior citizen's income is Social Security. For most men and women past working age, the monthly Social Security check goes a long way toward helping keep body and soul together.

You don't have to wait until you are 65 to begin drawing Social Security benefits. You can apply as early as age 62, in which case the benefits will be less because of the extension of time over which they will be paid. Early retirement is advantageous up to a point, the point being age 77; that's when the benefits received by the person who retires at age 65 catch up with and pull ahead of those paid to the age-62 retiree.

Conversely, if instead of retiring early you continue working beyond 65, your ultimate Social Security benefits will increase one per cent for each additional year of work, up to 7 per cent at age 72. At 72 you begin to collect the full Social Security benefits to which you are entitled, even if you go on working.

Many retired persons work part-time to supplement diminished incomes. If you work throughout the year, you can draw full Social Security payments before age 72 only if your annual earnings are $2,400 or less. For every dollar above that your benefits are reduced by 50 cents. Thus, if you earn $3,000, your earnings are $600 over the limit and your Social Security payments are reduced by half that amount, or $300.

If you work only intermittently, the situation is different; then the benefits are decreased only when monthly earnings exceed $200. Thus it is possible to earn much more than $2,400 for work performed during part of the year and still receive full benefits for those periods in which earnings do not exceed $200 per month.

For the self-employed, also, benefits are reduced only for the months in which they perform "substantial services"—a loosely defined term interpreted in each case by the Social Security Administration, which takes into account, among other factors, the number of hours worked. In no case are benefits reduced if you worked fewer than 15 hours during a month.

If a husband and wife both qualify for social security benefits because of their work records, both can work past 65 and earn up to $2,400 each without losing any of the benefits. To do this, however, they must file for benefits with SSA separately. It may be more beneficial for the wife to file for benefits with her husband even though they are each entitled to benefits separately. The Social Security Administration usually will calculate the benefits obtained under each filing method to determine which will yield the higher payments.

Income from pension plans, interest or rents received, royalties, dividends and the like do not affect Social Security benefits. Only earned income can reduce the benefits. The system was set up during the Great Depression and one of its purposes was to discourage people with pensions from holding jobs when so many others were unemployed.

Cobblestone Smorgasbord

PHOENICIA

Friday night smorgasbord at the Cobblestone has once again been resumed by the owner of the popular restaurant on Route 214, Phoenicia, Rolf Alweiler.

The smorgasbord was discontinued about a year ago; but due to many requests for its return, the Cobblestone has once again put on the festive gourmet spread which drew "rave reviews" throughout the Hudson Valley.

Smorgasbord takes place each Friday night from 5:30 p. m. to 10 p. m., with an "eat all you like" policy, to tempt those with hearty appetites. Many dishes from all over the world are being offered, as well as the Cobblestone's own home-baked pastries. Special prices are in effect for children under 12.

Reservations for Friday night smorgasbord may be made by calling the Cobblestone, but walk-in diners are accepted.

CITY STATE ZIP

KINGSTON Heritage Savings Bank has introduced a new Family Money Management service, according to Bank President Joseph F. Brady.

The service is open to anyone desiring private, confidential counseling on financial matters and designed to help an individual achieve financial independence.

The financial counseling will be done privately and confidentially on an appointment basis only. In addition to the financial counseling service, Heritage offers a free Money Management Information Center, with factual brochures on food, clothing, health care, furniture, appliances, transportation, recreation, housing, savings and insurance.

Brady said "we at Heritage are most pleased to offer this vital service, especially during this present era of consumerism. With the cost of living reaching staggering levels, there is tremendous demand and need for the family money management counseling and we at Heritage will provide it . . . free of charge . . . to anyone regardless if they are a customer of Heritage Savings Bank."

President Brady also announced that the Family Money Management Service will be under the auspices of Heritage Vice President Francis Kugelman Jr. Kugelman is a graduate of Saugerties Central School, Albany Business College, the Graduate School of Savings Banking at Brown University and is presently attending the Management Development School at the University of Massachusetts.

Kugelman also is a graduate of the Family Money Management Program at Cornell University and has been the financial counselor for the Ulster County Family Service Center since 1972. Active in the community, Kugelman is a licensed Savings Bank Life Insurance Agent. Anyone desiring financial counseling may contact Kugelman at Heritage for an appointment.

Heritage Savings Bank, organized in 1874, has three offices: its main office at 273 Wall Street, Kingston; its Bonanza Office on Route 9W, Town of Ulster and its Ramapo Office at 253 North Main Street, Spring Valley. Heritage Savings Bank plans to open its Dutchess Mall Office in the new Dutchess Mall Shopping Center, Fishkill in mid-August. With assets of more than $132 million Heritage Savings Bank is presently celebrating its 100th anniversary.

News

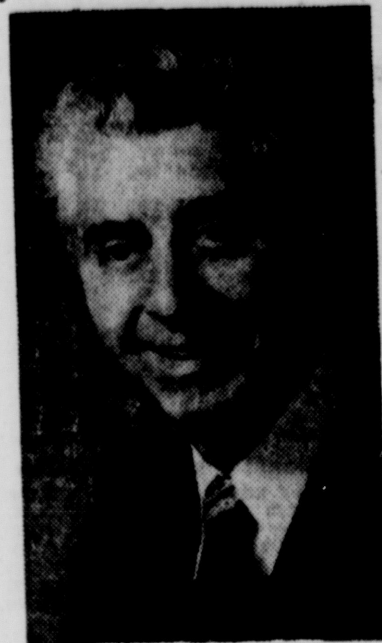

ELKHART, IND.
You can travel and camp in high style with the new 30-foot Elite travel trailer by Blazon Mobile Homes Corp.
This beautiful Elite is a superb combination of luxury and comfort from the plush shag carpet in the living room to the 54-inch VIP built-in bed in the master bedroom.
The spacious window wall with the sliding glass patio door and rich, lined, floor to ceiling draperies highlights the living room. Stylist, velvet overstuffed chairs plus the coffee table and pleated draperies with sheer underlay completes the elegant decor.

The outstanding feature of this unique floor plan is the luxurious, private bathroom with tub, shower and stool that separates the living and sleeping areas.
And complete privacy and comfort are yours in the bedroom. Even your own private entrance in this two-door Elite model.

Mom will love this Blazon Elite, too. The latest appliances are at her fingertips including the stainless four burner range, eye level oven and much more. And there is plenty of storage space with shelves and four drawers in the lavatory cabinet.
Fatum's Trailer Sales, Inc., 731 Ulster Avenue Mall, is the area franchised dealer for the Elite.

Frank A. Byer of 230 Lucas Avenue, Kingston, has been honored by the Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corporation on the anniversary of his 35th year of service.

FRANK A. BYER

Byer, who is special customer representative in the Kingston District, joined the utility on June 10, 1939 as a patrolman, checking power line rights-of-way. In 1941, he was promoted to lineman, and later that year went on military leave of absence.

Returning in 1945, Byer became a serviceman. A year later, he was promoted to Commercial Representative 2/c, and in 1947, advanced to a first class position. In 1955, he was named a special commercial representative, and he has held his present position since 1964.

Byer is a member of the Central Hudson Employees Quarter Century Club.

Ronald E. Long, CLU, manager of the Poughkeepsie agency of Mutual of New York which serves policyholders in Kingston, recently returned from MONY's Managers Seminar in Mexico City.

Long conferred on a new series of life and health products at the five-day conference, and participated in planning sessions with MONY's chief executives. "The focus of the Mexico City meeting," according to Long, "was to explore new trends and techniques of financial planning relevant to today's changing consumer needs. As exciting and beautiful as the setting of the meeting was, I think being away from home gave us a new perspective and helped make for highly informative and practical sessions."

This area is similar to most areas in the experience of MONY managers at the Conference, adds Long, because "our people are increasingly looking for greater flexibility in their selection of life and health coverage." New MONY products and features examined in Mexico City included, according to the insurance executive: a different approach to disability income with loss of income coverage; a combination of life insurance with the equity values of variable annuities called VARA-LIFE; a "Ten Day Free Look" to allow for increased inspection time before a policy is finalized, and a Select Premium Discount for nonsmokers who meet certain build requirements. "This discount, available on many new MONY policies, can reduce the cost of insurance, a concrete response to consumer needs," Long said.

Long was accompanied on the Mexico trip by his wife, Mary. MONY's Poughkeepsie agency is located at 80 Washington Street, Poughkeepsie.

Grand Union Declares Reg. Dividend

Grand Union directors have declared the regular quarterly cash dividend of 20 cents per share on the common stock of the food chain. The dividend is payable Aug. 23 to stockholders of record July 22. Charles G. Rodman, chairman of the board, said the dividend is a reflection of the company's strong performance and its commitment to returning value to shareholders.

Wall Street Chatter

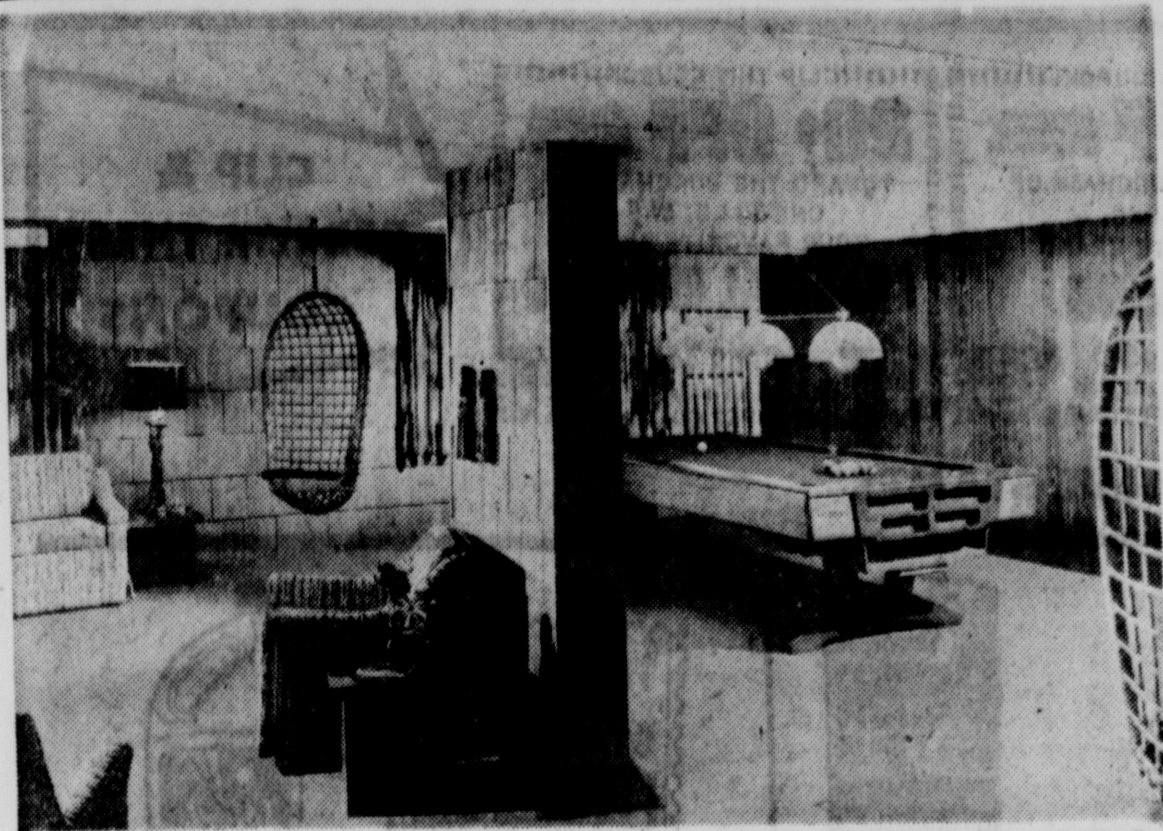

NEW YORK (AP) - "The vice says, The Bridgeport, Conn. firm points to odd-lot shorts, 'usually the most reliable technical indicator of bear market bottoms,' which are far below their peaks at the end of the major market lows since 1957. 'At least for now, there are enough indications that the bear is exhausted and could be about to hibernate for most of the summer,' says Hornblower & Weeks-Hemphill, Noyes, Inc. If the Dow Jones industrial average successfully tests the 850 to 860 level, prices could move significantly higher, the leading stock market indicators currently provides no assurance that we have yet seen the final point and a substantial rally low of the 1973-74 bear could be seen from present market," Wright Investors' Service, it adds.

PLAYFUL, BUT POLITE—The accent is on playful, but polite, privacy in this refinished basement. The functional informality of the new family center is keynoted in the imaginative use of an exterior hardboard siding played against an oak grain hardboard paneling. Both are from Masonite Corporation.

Poughkeepsie Auto Franchise

Mazdas to Friendly Pontiac

POUGHKEEPSIE
Mazda Motors of America has named Friendly Pontiac Inc., of 549 Dutchess Turnpike, Poughkeepsie, as its authorized automobile dealer.

The new Mazda sales, service and parts facility will serve Dutchess, Ulster, Columbia and Orange Counties.

The new firm, known as Friendly Mazda, until it moves into new quarters of its own on South Road, Route 9, will share the facilities of Friendly Pontiac on Dutchess Turnpike, it was announced.

Friendly Pontiac is the authorized Pontiac, American Motors — Jeep Dealer as well as being one of the largest imported car dealers in New York State, selling Fiat, Avin Marina, MG, Jaguar, Rover, Triumph, TVR, Lotus, Saab, Honda and now Mazda.

Dick Verrilli, owner of Friendly Pontiac, says he expects the new Mazda rotary and piston engine cars and trucks to be a volume sales leader. The new Mazda's will be available in 2-door hardtops, 4-door sedans, 4-door wagons and 1/2-ton pickups, all with rotary engines. The coupe and pickup also are available with a 39-mile per gallon piston engine. Power steering, automatic transmission and air conditioning are optional.

Verrilli says Mazda cars and trucks are a beautiful balance between economy, luxury and performance. All models are fully equipped with standards like power disc brakes, radial tires, vinyl seats, tachometer, full carpeting, tinted glass, engine oil cooler, styled wheels, rear window defroster and many more items.

Verrilli has invited the public to come in and inspect the Mazda during the forthcoming grand opening. At the same time, he says, the sales, service and parts department will be open for inspection.

The Friendly Pontiac dealership is open 60 hours a week, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. for parts, sales and service, including Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

$25 Billion Market Time to Improve Home

Indications point to this being one of the biggest years in history for home improvement.

And the reasons are many. Among them being: High interest rates are causing many people to postpone decisions to buy a new home. Instead, they will opt to remodel or improve their present homes.

Increased cost of new housing will have the same effect on many people. They will/may decide to add a room, rather than buy a new one.

A slowdown in housing starts means there is a smaller selection for potential home buyers.

Add these together, and you have a total home improvement market nationally of anywhere from $20 to $25 billion.

Officials of Masonite Corporation, leading manufacturer of prefinished paneling, point to still another reason why home improvement activities are expected to continue to accelerate during the next few years; namely, home improvement projects are easier to handle nowadays.

The average homeowner can tackle home improvement jobs that he wouldn't even consider years ago, because of new products and new techniques which encourage the homeowner to do it himself. Floor tiles and carpet tiles, for example, feature self-sticking backings.

New ceiling systems are easier to install than ever. New adhesives permit faster and easier installation of wall panels; giving a room a new look faster than anything else could.

Tubkits permit the homeowner to re-do a bathroom. Simulated masonry paneling enables the do-it-yourselfer to install a "brick" wall, something he couldn't have imagined 10 years ago.

Home improvement experts point out that there is a large inventory of pre-World War 2 housing units that will contribute to the strength of the remodeling market during the balance of this decade.

An estimated 43 per cent of all U.S. housing units are more than 30 years old, for example, and many of these will be prime candidates for home improvement projects.

Since only 12 per cent of all occupied housing units in the U.S. are less than 5 years old, it is easy to see that there is a large number of American homes that will undergo a facelifting — by necessity or by desire.

Any owner of cash value life insurance has complete control over his investment. In the language of the bond market, he can literally "call" his insurance company at any time, directing that the value be paid to him in cash, or converted into income in a variety of ways.

Consider further evidence of your control: When you purchase life insurance you may select a terminal date for your investment by choosing a form of endowment. Or you may choose a whole life policy where the terminal date can be set by you at any point along the way — and where you have large latitude in how you want benefits distributed.

What other investment can you own and control for a lifetime without danger of losing that control?

City Electric Staffer Is Specialist

KINGSTON
Annette Krum, a member of the staff of Kingston City Electric, 21 Grand Street, has been designated as Home Lighting Specialist by the American Home Lighting Institute.

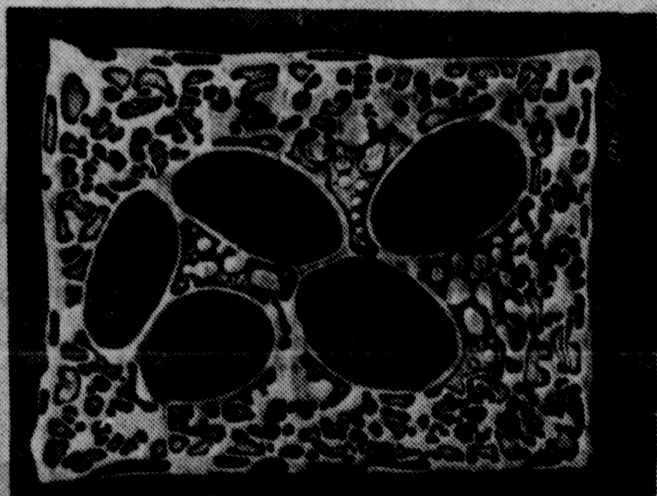

The title recognizes successful completion of an intensive program of study developed by the national lighting organization. The program covers basic principles and applications of planned residential lighting.

In presenting the certificate, Joseph O'Connor, president of the firm, said "We regard this achievement as a significant expansion of professional service to our patrons. It is another step in our continuing effort to make our showroom the community lighting center by professional advice on lighting problems."

Mrs. Annette Krum resides at Schuler Lane, Lake Katrine with her husband Ronald and their 2 children.

MIXED MEDIA EXHIBIT—An exciting mixed media exhibition by Joel and Merrie Zaretsky of West Hurley will open at the Inter-County Savings Bank, 29 Main Street, New Paltz, today, continuing through July 26. Open house is scheduled for opening day of the exhibit from 2 to 4 p.m. Zaretsky, a member of the board of directors of the Woodstock Artists Association, produces his own paintings that create special effects. Another of his new techniques, Plexi-Fusion, involves the fusing of raw pigments into the reverse of a sheet of plexi-glass.

DA Distaffer Sees Key Gal Role

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Merola's Major Offense Bureau from 1948 to 1950 and my grand-uncle, Sylvester J. Ryan, used to be the chief assistant at the Bronx DA's office and is currently the senior judge in the Southern District of New York.

And 25-year-old Barbara Ryan, recently appointed to prosecutor's office for the Southern District of New York for me to go on."

In the Major Offense Bureau, her specific assignment is to deal with "any woman who... would feel more comfortable in speaking to me," but she handles the general run of cases as well.

"I'm here handling anything that comes through," Miss Ryan said. "I have knife-point robberies, gun-robberies, male victims, female victims, male or female defendants. Of course, I do have some cases involving rape."

Outside of that, she said, "I feel my job in the DA's office is just like any of the other district attorneys who tries to see if we can make the Bronx a better place to live, to protect those people who have been victims of crime and to guarantee justice for each case that's put under our control."

Merola's Major Offense Bureau is a year old this month. Miss Ryan is proud of the impact it has had on the legal system in speedy trials.

"We have made an impact, we do move our cases," Miss Ryan said. "Our ideal is to have our case go from the day of arrest to the day of conviction within 90 days. We believe in speedy trials in this bureau."

"Our batting average is very high. Mr. Merola feels, and he is correct... that time generally works against the people and for the defendant."

Miss Ryan explained that an assistant DA in MOB who takes a case is "personally responsible to follow that case through to its final conclusion—be that a conviction or a trial, a plea or an acquittal."

She said she was relatively new to the bureau when she handled her first rape case, which involved three women allegedly raped by the same defendant.

Miss Ryan said she tried to make the women as comfortable as possible, adding "Many women, after this has happened do have a guilt complex about it and it's wrong. There are so many stories going around saying how terrible police officers and district attorneys are to women who have been raped. You have to try to convince them you're on their side."

Miss Ryan said, the defendant agreed to plead guilty to one count of rape in the first degree and "when you get an offer for at least the top count in an indictment, it no sense putting any woman through the ordeal of going to trial when he's willing to take his punishment."

Vacation Drug Warning

Don't Make Hash Out of Trip

By United Press International
Keep off the grass — and all other illicit drugs when travelling abroad. Getting busted overseas could cost you your life.

Hundreds of young Americans already have found out the hard way that foreign countries are often tougher than the United States when it comes to enforcing laws against drug use, smuggling or trafficking.

Vacation Travel News
Section C, Page 9

Recent official figures show that about 900 Americans — most under 30 — are being held in jails around the world on various drug charges.

They include a man and two women, arrested in December 1972, who were sentenced to death by a Turkish court last year for smuggling 225 pounds of hashish into the country from Syria. The sentences were later commuted to life imprisonment and more recently reduced to about 12 years under a general amnesty.

Many foreign countries do not differentiate between the so-called "soft" drugs like marijuana and the "hard" like heroin, and possession of grass or hash can be punished with expulsion, prison terms and heavy fines, up to more than $100,000 in Spain, for instance.

Penalties for smuggling or trafficking are much more severe, ranging up to life imprisonment in Canada and the Philippines and death in Turkey and Iran.

A leaflet published by the U.S. State Department notes that many countries, including Mexico, have no provisions for bail on drug offenses and that pre-trial detention "can be prolonged — in some cases up to a year."

In many countries, the leaflet cautions, drug pushers are also informers who tip off police or customs officials after making a sale. "The pusher . . . collects twice in such cases. He receives money from the buyer and a reward for acting as an informer. Many young Americans have fallen into such a trap."

Americans traveling abroad — except those with diplomatic immunity — are subject to the laws of the country they are visiting. They are not protected by U.S. law and the authority of American consular officials to intervene when a U.S. citizen breaks local laws is limited.

When informed, consular officials will visit the detained American and provide him with a list of local lawyers and will also notify his family and friends of his predicament. The U.S. customs services reported that illicit drugs valued at more than $432 million were confiscated in more than 21,000 seizures during the 1973 fiscal year. That was an increase of more than 7,600 over the previous fiscal year, or a jump of 57 per cent.

No Congress Blame For the Unusual

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress isn't at fault because $70,000 was spent to find out how sweating Australian aborigines smell, or because more than $20,000 was spent to study blood groups of Polish pigs, the General Accounting Office says.

In fact, said GAO, Congress is not directly responsible for these or a number of other seemingly unusual projects funded with federal money.

For instance, there was the $29,361 for an odor measuring machine purchased for Turkey under an Agriculture Department research project; and the Smithsonian Institution's $15,000 study of lizards in Yugoslavia, $6,000 study of Polish frogs and $35,000 look at wild boars in Pakistan. The Polish pig-blood group study also had been undertaken by the Smithsonian.

The GAO comments were in a report to a number of congressmen who had demanded an explanation for projects disclosed in a March 1974 article by James D. Davidson, executive director of the National Taxpayers Union. His article, the GAO said last week, discussed "a number of seemingly wasteful government expenditures."

The GAO, a congressional watchdog agency, studied 35 projects cited by Davidson, confirmed the existence of most and concluded that none were authorized specifically by Congress. GAO did not evaluate the merits of the projects, only identified the agencies that conducted them.

"Based upon our research we found that the examples cited were not line items specifically authorized by Congress but were included in larger appropriations and authorizations of agencies and departments," GAO official D. L. Scantlebury said in a letter to Rep. Robert W. Daniel Jr., R-Va.

Daniel has attacked the expenditures as "foolish programs" and directed particular criticism to the aborigine perspiration study. "No doubt some of this money could have been saved on the project if the State Department had prevailed upon Turkey to lend the Australians the odor measuring machine we purchased for them," Daniel said in a floor speech. The machine was used in an experiment designed to help measure food quality, the GAO said.

The GAO report said the aborigine study was part of a Health, Education and Welfare Department project under a National Institute of Health grant, which, the GAO said, has not been funded since 1971.

The report said the study was "one of 16 subprojects concerned with zoophysiology in Alaska. The purpose . . . was to learn about the adaptation of man to his environment and invited a comparison of the Alaskan Eskimo with the Australian Aborigine and their stress reactions to climate."

Area Students Are Accepted

SCOTIA

Christopher W. May, son of Mr. and Mrs. William May of 9 Barry Lane, Scotia, has been appointed to the U. S. Naval Academy by Rep. Samuel S. Stratton of the 28th Congressional District.

May, an honor student at Scotia Glenville High School, was a member of the varsity soccer and ski teams there. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sanford of 242 East Chester Street, Kingston. May will report to the Academy July 8 for duty.

Peggy Dittus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Dittus of 202 Washington Avenue, Kingston, has been accepted for the September class at the Albany Medical Center School of Nursing. She has received a Prisma Club Scholarship and a Kingston Lions Club Nursing Scholarship.

Area Woman Wants Ph. D. Before Mrs.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Kathie Jorgensen not only shattered rocks upon occasion, she shatters images.

The occupation of geologist calls to mind the picture of a man weighted down with instruments, tramping through the wilds, blasting hillside and gathering mineral samples.

But geologist Kathie Jorgensen is a woman, the only woman geologist employed by New York State. And she spends 90 per cent of her time in her Albany office at the New York State Museum and Science Service.

A gas and oil geologist, Miss Jorgensen is studying the occurrence of natural gas in the Herkimer sandstone of eastern New York. She uses computers to analyze the samples and materials cluttering her office.

She takes infrequent field trips to drilling sites.

Miss Jorgensen, from Hanne-croix in Greene County, started as a physics major at State University at New Paltz, but switched fields when it became apparent that a geologist "has the whole world as a laboratory."

In her concern for natural resources, Miss Jorgensen believes that people are wasting gas and oil "at an alarming rate." She favors better environmental controls. Although convinced that nuclear energy can help ease the drain on energy, she believes that it should be "developed with caution" to protect against "low level radiation pollution."

Miss Jorgensen, 31, is single, and says she would prefer "to get a Ph. D. before getting her Mrs."

Miss Jorgensen's leisure activities also don't fit a stereotype. She enjoys motorcycle riding and driving a Lotus sports car, both of which she repairs with relative ease because of her interest "in all things mechanical."

Although she has not encountered occupational discrimination, she has found that many people have difficulty perceiving a woman as a geologist. While attending a conference recently, she was asked by a hotel registration clerk whether she was "a geologist or a lady," referring to the wives of geologists who had accompanied their husbands.

Miss Jorgensen replied, "I'm both."

Tremper House Topic for Group, Mayor

KINGSTON

The Landmarks Preservation Commission will meet with Mayor Francis R. Koenig to discuss the future of the Tremper House at 3 North Front Street.

The commission met late last week at Statewide Savings and Loan Association on Wall Street to review the Tremper House situation. Exterior work, thanks to a grant of some $45,000 by IBM Corporation, has been completed and the commission is now faced with dual questions of where the money will be coming from for interior work and what future permanent use will be made of the building.

Under a city ordinance passed last year, the building is to be used for a city museum, however, according to Herbert Cutler, chairman of the Landmarks Commission, there has been no commitment from the city concerning the museum.

Cutler also reported that there have been a number of inquiries from persons interested in purchasing the building for use as a private residence, which would not be allowed under present city law.

The commission also wants to talk to the mayor about the administration of the Stockade Ordinance which gives the commission the power of initial approval for any construction or renovation in the Stockade District, an area bounded by North Front Street, Green Street, Main Street and Clinton Avenue.

Under a law passed by the Common Council and approved by the mayor this spring, no building certificates can be issued in the Stockade area without the approval of the Landmarks Commission.

'Red Patches' Explained for Marbletown SC

LOMONTVILLE

The use of "red patches" to be put in windows where there are incapacitated people was explained for the Marbletown Senior Citizens Organization at the June 24 meeting of the Marbletown Volunteer Firemen's Association in the Lomontville Firehouse.

The subject of "Junior Firemen" was discussed and a membership application was shown which includes a place for parents' consent.

Also discussed was a more efficient way of getting in direct touch with the first aid ambulance.

Work will be started this month on the new fire training center. The next meeting will be held July 29 at the Marbletown Firehouse.

Matlack
One-Hits
St. Louis

NEW YORK (UPI) — Left-hander Jon Matlack allowed only one hit—a third inning single by losing pitcher John Curtis—Saturday to hurl the New York Mets to a 4-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

After Old-Timers Day festivities that included appearances by 47 former players, including seven Hall of Famers, Matlack handcuffed the Cardinals and retired the last 12 men he faced.

It was the second one-hitter of Matlack's career. He threw one against Houston last season. Matlack walked three batters, Ted Sizemore in the first inning, Luis Melendez in the second and pinch-hitter Ted Heintzelman in the sixth. Curtis, who hit a line single to left in the third inning, was the only other St. Louis baserunner.

Boosting his record to 6-5 this season, Matlack struck out seven batters, including three in the first inning.

Cleon Jones gave Matlack all the support he needed with a two-run homer in the first inning after Wayne Garrett led off the frame with a single. Garrett hit a solo homer in the fifth inning for the Mets' third run and Jones doubled in the final tally of the game in the seventh to wind up with three RBIs.

Curtis, who went six innings, is now 4-8 for the season.

Orantes Defeats Roche
In Gruelling Five-Setter

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Manuel Orantes, the 12th seed from Spain, Saturday proved that you can't beat match practice when he outlasted Tony Roche of Australia in a gruelling five-setter to gain the last 16 of the Wimbledon tennis championships.

Orantes, a clay court specialist, looked booked for an early exit when he trailed two sets to love, but he pulled himself together and ran out a 2-6, 5-7, 7-5, 6-4, 8-6 winner over Roche, beaten finalist here in 1968.

"Roche tired because he's not used to playing fivesetters," the toothy Spaniard said. "Tennis is at the crossroads. Players must decide whether they want to follow the tournament circuit or play for one hour in league tennis. They can't do both."

Roche, the player-coach of Denver in World Team Tennis, needed 74 hours to complete his second round match against John Alexander because of rain delays. Saturday he played with zip for two sets but then played tired strokes and was unable to capitalize on a fifth game break in the fifth set.

For the first time in a week the sun shone on the All England club which was packed with 26,154 fans but, unfortunately, the tennis did not match the gay summer scene.

Referee Mike Gibson played "catch up" as he tried to clear the backlog of 180 matches, but this meant the fans were denied the opportunity of seeing the higher seeds in action.

Gibson achieved his aim of getting down to the last 32 in both the men's and women's singles, while seventh-seeded Tom Okker of the Netherlands joined Orantes in the round of 16 with a light-hearted 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, 6-3 win over Cliff Drysdale of South Africa.

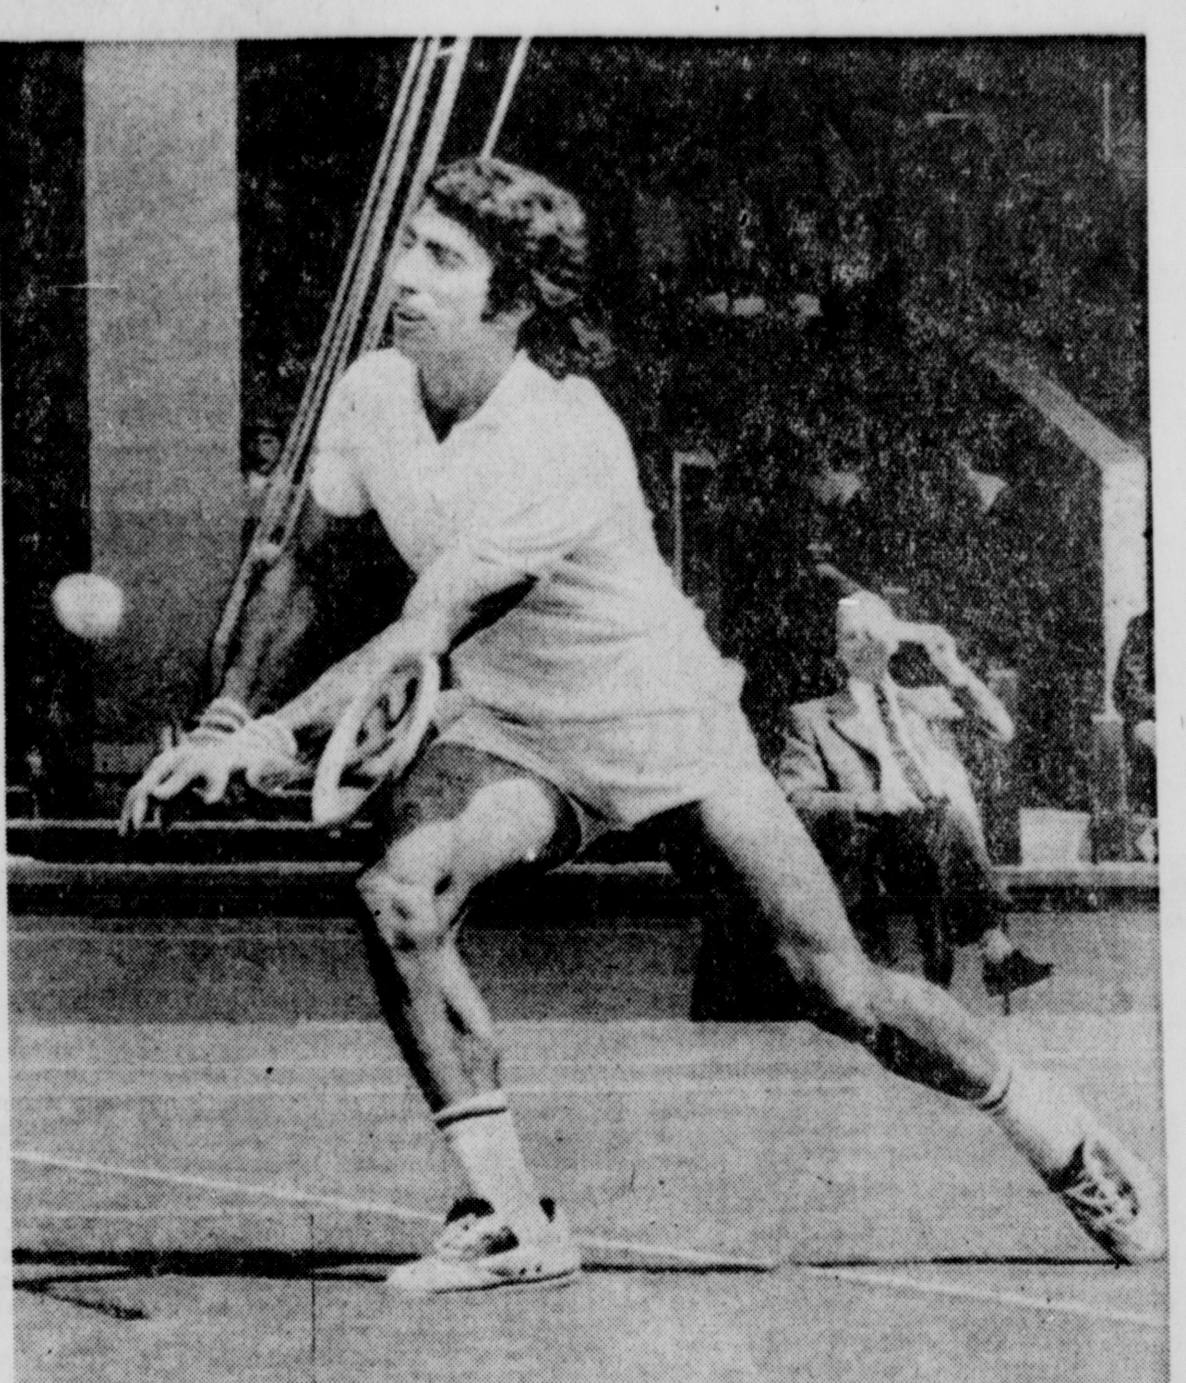

Three American men won their second round matches to bring to eight the number of U.S. survivors in the last 32. Nine girls made it to the third round in the women's singles.

Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., qualified to meet eighth-seeded Arthur Ashe with an 8-6, 6-4, 8-6 win over Germany's Karl Meiler; Dave Stockton of Port Washington, N.Y., turned back Briton Gerald Battrick, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4, while Jeff Borowiak of Berkeley, Calif., beat Neale Fraser, 8-9, 6-3, 8-6, 1-0, the Australian winner of the title in 1960 and now his country's Davis Cup captain, retiring with a muscle pull in his right thigh which hurt when he served.

Six U.S. girls won to join the big three of Billie Jean King, Chris Evert and Rosie Casals in the third round.

Betsy Nagelsen of St. Petersburg, Fla., beat Gail Chanfreau of France, 7-5, 6-3; Patt Bogitan of La Jolla, Calif., beat Brigitte Cuypers of South Africa, 6-3, 6-0; Ann Kiyomura of San Mateo, Calif., beat Marina Kroshina of Russia, 8-6, 2-6, 6-3; Kris Kemmer of Los Angeles beat Sharon Walsh of San Rafael, Calif., 1-6, 6-2, 6-3; Mona Schallau of Iowa City did not lose a game in blanking Natalie Fuchs of France; and Tory Fretz of Los Angeles beat Wendy Turnbull of Australia, 7-5, 6-3.

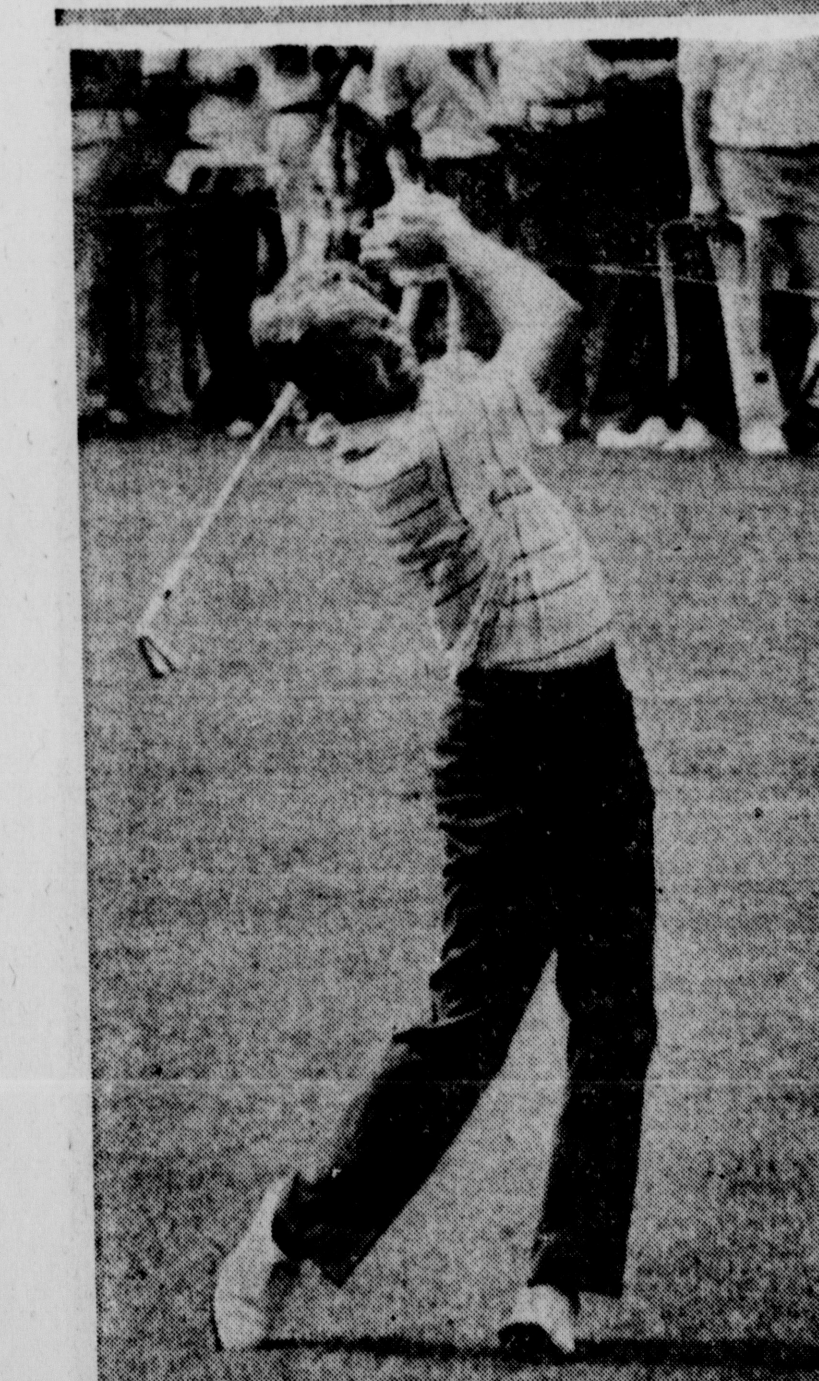

Three seeds, Virginia Wade of Britain, Kerry Melville of Australia and Russia's Olga Morozova also advanced, and with Russia's Alex Metreveli winning in the men's division, the committee continue to bat 1,000.

MANUEL IN ACTION — Manuel Orantes returns ball in match against Australia's Tony Roche Saturday in third round of the men's singles of Wimbledon. Orantes, the 12th seed from Spain, outlasted Roche in a five-set match, 2-6, 5-7, 7-5, 6-4, 8-6. (UPI)

WESTERN LEADER — Tom Weiskopf drives toward the ninth green in the third round of the 71st annual Western Open tournament at Butler National Golf Club in Chicago Saturday. He took a par-four on the hole. Weiskopf holds the third round lead with 212, five strokes ahead of J. C. Sneed. (UPI)

Skala Ahead

MONTREAL (UPI) — Carole Jo Skala of Shingle Springs, Calif., shot a two-under-par 71 to take a one-stroke lead after Saturday's rain-delayed second round of the $60,000 Peter Jackson Ladies Classic.

Judy Kimball of Gonzalez, Tex., shot a 72 and JoAnne Carner of Lakewood, Fla., a 69 to give both two-round totals of 140, one stroke behind Mrs. Skala in the Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Finishing behind Miss Kimball and Miss Carner were Donna Caponi Young of Woodland Hills, Calif., with a two-round 141; Sandra Post of Boynton Beach, Fla., Betsy Cullen of Tulsa, Okla., and Sandra Palmer of Dallas, Tex., with 142; Shelley Hamlin of Fresno, Calif., with 143; Muriel Breer of Nashville, Tenn., with 144; Chris Repasky of Lakeland, Fla., with 144; and defending champion Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., with 144.

Kathy McMullen of Bradenton, Fla., who shot a first day 67 for the lead, soared to a 78 in the second round for a 145 total.

Only 20 of the 63 players who made the cut at 154 are at or below par on the gruelling 6,345-yard Canadian Golf Club course.

One of the pre-tournament favorites, Sandra Haynie of Dallas, was forced to withdraw midway through the second round due to a persistent pain in her arm.

Luc Brien, executive director of the Canadian LPGA, said, "Miss Haynie has had considerable pain in her arm for the past few weeks and it has been even worse this week so she has been allowed to withdraw."

Mrs. Skala, 35, has only one major LPGA tournament win to her credit. In 1973 she won the George Washington Classic at Hidden Springs Country Club in Horsham, Pa.

A violent thunderstorm interrupted Saturday's round and several golfers still out on the course had to take refuge.

"We took shelter in a rain shed and a bolt of lightning came so close to us it wasn't funny," Mrs. Skala said. "Then and there I wanted to run home to my three kids."

Giants and Jets Plan Business as Usual

NEW YORK (AP) — Officials of the New York Giants and Jets said Saturday they plan to conduct business as usual, filling out their rosters with rookies, should the National Football League Players Association carry out its plans for a strike Tuesday.

Andy Robustelli, Director of Operations for the Giants, said because someone is telling them to.

General Manager Weeb Ewbank of the Jets said his club has signed about 35 rookies. "We're trying to sign enough men to be able to play the exhibition season if it gets to that," said Ewbank.

"There could be a lot of vets."

Jet rookies are slated to report July 9 and veterans July 14.

Despite the emergence of the World Football League and the threat of a strike, National Football League tickets remain hot commodities.

Staubach Will Return To Dallas Cowboys

DALLAS (UPI) — Dallas Cowboys and we didn't have quarterback Roger Staubach, any hard negotiations. I negotiated for myself. If someone had gone in for me there might have been some haggling. But I'm happy and the Cowboys have been fair to me."

Cowboy president and general manager Tex Schramm said the club would be trying to sign more veterans to long-term contracts in what is an obvious attempt to slow down the encroachments by the NFL.

"Roger is one of the key men in our future," said Schramm.

"And these type of players are the ones we are going to try to sign. We are going to try to get the veterans we feel are our players for the future under contract."

The Cowboys already have lost running backs Calvin Hill and Mike Montgomery and quarterback Craig Morton to the NFL, as well as high draft choice Danny White of Arizona State.

Weiskopf Leads Western Open Golf by Five

CHICAGO (UPI) — A 16-mile per hour northwest wind turned playing conditions topsy turvy at Butler National Golf Club Saturday and Tom Weiskopf shot a par 71 in the $200,000 Western Open to cling to the lead after 54 holes with 212, one under par.

None of the 78 survivors in the field could break par on the 7,002-yard, par 71 links and only three could equal it, Weiskopf, Joe Porter, who wound up with a 221, nine strokes behind, and J.C. Sneed, who charged from a seven-way tie for 15th place into second. But he trailed Weiskopf by five strokes at 217.

Most of the day only one player was under par for the tournament, Weiskopf, who started one under and parred his first nine holes. He bogeyed the 10th to go even, but then birdied the next two to return to the under par red figures.

Then a string of three straight bogeys put him over par until the 17th hole when he dropped a birdie putt to return to even. Then he confidently stroked home an eight-footer for a birdie on the 18th to go under par again.

Weiskopf blamed his string of bogeys on bad club selection, hitting over the green on two of the holes and into the trees into an unplayable lie on the other.

"I played very well the first nine holes, and I played the last three holes very, very well," he said. "I played the whole round very well except for a couple of club mistakes. I hit the ball solid and kept the ball in play. A 71 was a very good score out there today."

Al Geiberger, even par for the first two rounds and trailing Weiskopf by only one stroke after 36 holes, fell far behind with an 80, for a 222, nine over par.

The five who trailed by two strokes after 36, Tom Evans, Larry Wise, Tom Watson, Bobby Mitchell and Gary Sanders, had similar problems.

Evans, who set a course record with a second round 67, went five over par on his first three holes and wound up with a horrendous 83 for 226. Wise stayed in close contention for eight holes and then slipped to a 79 for 222. Watson shot a 75 for 218, Mitchell 80 for 223, and Sanders 79 for 222.

"Par is pretty good here any time," Sneed said. "I should have been two under but I blew the 16th and 17th holes with three putts. It was my best putting round since I won at Philadelphia and it was fun for awhile. But I'm not driving very well. I know what I want to do, but when I get over the ball I'm chicken to do it. I don't have confidence and I just nurse it around."

Frank Beard shot a 73 to tie Watson for third place and Butch Baird with a 73 and Chuck Courtney with a 75 tied for fifth at 219. Arnold Palmer was in at 220 in a four-way tie while Lee Trevino took an 81 to slip to 227.

With Weiskopf the only subpar player for 54 holes, the chances looked good for the winner of the tournament to be over par for the third straight week. Weiskopf appeared to be the only player with a chance to finish under par and par rounds could be as difficult or to 5 p.m. CDT today and maybe more so today, should the wind change.

The tournament will be on national television from 3 p.m. payoff.

BRL Umpires Claim Foul

Charles J. Tiano, Sports Editor

The Kingston Babe Ruth baseball league may have solved a short-range problem, if it was that, in firing two young New Paltz State collegians who served briefly as umpires this season. The long range effects may last longer.

The collegians—Richard Benson and Mark Stavin—didn't go quietly however and their searing indictment of the atmosphere surrounding the league is something the Babe Ruth officials may have to think about.

"The Kingston Babe Ruth League has trampled over its own code of sportsmanship like a long-hall hitter eager to touch all the bases," Messrs. Benson and Stavin say in a letter-to-the-editor. Over-reaction to a dismissal? Maybe. But let's hear them out and then grant the Babe Ruth League equal time for rebuttal.

With respect to understanding of and respect for the rules, the two umpires say, "As umpires, the personification of the rules, we were constantly disputed on all sorts of calls, out-safe, foul fair, hall-strike . . . everything but the interpretation of the rules.

"This abuse was inspired, encouraged and perpetuated by a string of coaches who threw temper tantrums on the field, disrupted games and in their own words, 'try to get thrown out to shake up the umpires!', who 'cause them to lose games'.

"One manager, a founder and 20-year veteran of Kingston Babe Ruth actually threw a victory away by using an illegal pitcher and was later ejected when his tirades became so distracting that the game's progress had to be halted."

Messrs. Benson and Stavin have something to say about control over emotions and speech. For example, "a star player was ejected from a game for using an expletive in relation to a call made by an umpire.

"The coach informed the eager spectators as to the cause of the player's removal and they (parents and relatives) repeated the term over and over for the benefit of those boys whose on-the-street vocabulary had not reached fruition. This seemed to be the rule, not the exception, although in one game, a player who was ejected for the same reason was brought over by his manager to apologize."

On the subject of developing spirit of co-operation and team play, Benson and Stavin make the pointed observation that "some boys are so dedicated to this 'net that they will offer, at the coach's prompting, to sit out a game in which their limited abilities are surpassed by other ball players.

"Some coaches don't even bother to ask," they add, "Games in which nine, ten or eleven of the 15 boys on the team are the total playing complement are not unusual. This gave the non-players the opportunity to do more constructive things, like shoot off firecrackers and jeer at the umpires.

"All problems in the league must have ended last week when the managerial board voted to fire two of its umpires," Messrs. Benson and Stavin speculate. "In this 'Monday Night Massacre' our competency was not questioned, but rather our no-nonsense attitude during the game which made it less interesting to be managers. The same situation occurred last year, when professional umpires were fired for similar infractions."

"Lacking a union, we have no recourse but to take our case before the National Babe Ruth League and the people," say the umpires. "Fine organizations such as the Kingston Patrolmen's Association, the VFW and the American Legion, among others, provide some of the financial backing for these teams."

"If they feel the league is a positive educational experience, let them continue their support. Concerned citizens, however, have the right to challenge the league's tax-free status, if it is not, in their opinion, living up to its charter," the umpires say.

In their conclusion, Benson and Stavin suggest that interested persons, "check out a game any summer night at six o'clock at Coleman Park, Loughran Park or the stadium and see for yourself."

"Are these boys being helped to develop into real, true citizens," they ask, "With jeering, foul-mouthed, short-tempered victory-at-all-cost coaches as models, we can expect them to turn out any better."

"We're sure the Babe wouldn't like it."

Despite the disclaimer by Stavin and Benson, the question of their competency has to be a factor in this dispute. President Bob Dawkins and the Babe Ruth League board of managers can be expected to have some opinions on the subject.

However, it may not be so easy to fault the two umpires on their pragmatic, and we think correct attitude with respect to the role and behavior of players, coaches, officials and most important . . . the spectators.

Bob Dawkins, the BRL president, is a pretty level-headed young man, who wants the Babe Ruth League to serve its proper function in area baseball. We can't perceive of his accepting the presidency under any other circumstances. He was reared in a fine family baseball tradition and his response to the umpires should be rational and constructive. He's not the kind of guy to duck an issue.

Let's not kid ourselves that these things happen only in the Babe Ruth League. They happen in Little League and every other echelon of baseball. They happen in every phase of our life, business, politics, industry and personal relations. You name the field and it's there.

The win-at-any cost philosophy is a national malaise with its ugly tentacles reaching into every phase of our society. The pressure brought to bear on youngsters to win baseball games is unbelievable in some quarters. You have to wonder . . . is it really worth it?

Beniquez Paces Bosox Victory

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Juan Beniquez belted a pair of home runs including his first major league grand slam and Terry Hughes hit his first major league homer Saturday as the Boston Red Sox banged out 18 hits to wallop Cleveland 12-2.

Beniquez capped the six-run second inning with a bases-loaded blast off Cleveland starter Fritz Peterson and hit er to third and Evans beat the force play attempt at second. Rick Burleson's infield single filled the bases and Mario Guerrero singled home two runs. Tommy Harper walked to fill the bases again and Beniquez followed with his smash over the leftfield fence.

Dwight Evans led off the Boston second with a single. Bob Montgomery hit a ground-

Luis Tiant, who was 1-4 with a 5.44 ERA on May 5 and has won 10 of 12 since then for an 11-6 record, struck out two, walked one and allowed only three hits—including Dave Duncan's solo homer in the fifth—before being lifted after six innings to get the win.

Danny Cater's two-run homer and Rico Petrocelli's run-scoring double gave the Red Sox three runs in the sixth and Hughes hit a two-run shot off Milt Wilcox in the eighth.

Fisk, wearing a temporary cast on his left knee, was flown from Cleveland to Boston Saturday and taken to Hahnemann Hospital where he will undergo surgery this morning to repair torn ligaments.

"We hope he'll be able to play after Labor Day," said team physician Dr. Thomas Tierney. "But he'll be out for at least two months."

Tierney said Fisk was "in a lot of pain but otherwise okay." "He'll be fine after the operation," Tierney said.

Fisk, 26, was injured when Indians outfielder Leron Lee slid home with the winning run in the ninth inning of Friday night's 2-1 game.

Fisk was straddling the plate awaiting a throw from Mario Guerrero when Lee reached home. The throw sailed over Fisk's head as he went down in the collision.

Marshall Sets Mark, LA Wins

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Reliever Mike Marshall set a major league record by pitching in his 10th consecutive game Saturday as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the San Francisco Giants 6-4.

Marshall, who now has appeared in 50 of the Dodgers' 75 games, pitched 2 2/3 innings after taking over for winning pitcher Doug Rau in the sixth. He was lifted with the bases loaded, none out in the ninth and the Dodgers in front 6-3. Jim Brewer came in to strike out Chris Speier. Geoff Zahn then came in, walked Gary Thomasson to force in a run and struck out Ed Goodson, and finally Charley Hough was brought in to get Gary Matthews on an infield grounder for the final out. Shortstop Bill Russell keyed a three-run fourth inning for the Dodgers with a bases-loaded single after Wes Westrum, the Giants' new manager, ordered an intentional walk to Joe Ferguson.

It was the second loss in a row for the Giants since Westrum was named manager Friday replacing Charlie Fox who had resigned. Westrum, the former Giants' catcher and Mets' manager, was a one-time resident of Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

Shamrock Stops McCardle-Leahy

KINGSTON
There's a new leader in the City Six-Pitch B Division race now that McCardle-Leahy has been handed its second straight defeat.

Polacco's, which dumped McCardle-Leahy last week, pitched its way into first place Friday when the Funeralmen were beaten again, this time 3-1 by Shamrock. The idle Polacco's now has a 4-1 record, one less than Shamrock. McCardle-Leahy, and the Daily Freeman, each with 4-2 marks. Perry's is next at 4-3.

In Friday's other games, the Freeman outslugged Anchorage, 17-8; Clausi's surprised Perry's, 12-2; Casa Dina edged Boiceville Inn III, 11-10; and Amato's was nipped by White Eagle, 5-4, in nine innings.

Vince Fisher supplied Shamrock with a gripe and homer good for two runs and Tony Ruggeri offered the pitching power as he held the usually potent McCardle team to just seven hits in the low-scoring upset. Mike Sass had two of the losers' safeties.

Hugh Reynolds, another in the long line of Freeman left-handed power hitters, cracked two singles, a double, and a triple driving in four runs to lead his team over Anchorage. Jon Powers stroked four singles and a double in five trips to add to the winners' 23-hit attack. Billy Reynolds outdueled Bud Bodie on the mound.

A home run by Day Pinkham and three hits by Bill Michaels paced Clausi's over Perry's. Don Hastings homered in defeat.

Casa Dina jumped to a 10-4 lead, was tied when Boiceville scored six in the fifth, then won it with one in the sixth. Pete Altomare and Sam Perry each had three hits for the winners. John Forsythe and John Meehan had three apiece for Boiceville.

White Eagle scratched out a run in the last of the ninth to top Amato's for Tony Turk.

Mickey Walker: Poor Condition

PERTH AMBOY, N.J. (UPI)—Former world middleweight boxing champion Mickey Walker, 72, suffered a setback Saturday in his bout to regain his good health, and his condition was changed from fair to poor.

Walker, who lives in Elizabeth, N.J., was removed from the intensive care unit of Perth Amboy General Hospital Friday and was described then as being in fair condition.

Hospital officials have refused to reveal the nature of Walker's illness.

Walker, elected to the Boxing Hall of Fame in 1955 after a 17-year ring career, fought 13 world champions from welterweights up and beat five of them.

He won the world welterweight title in 1922 from Jack Britton and then lost it to Pete Latso in 1926. The same year he entered the middleweight division and won that title from Tiger Flowers in 10 rounds.

Irish Sweeps . . . English Prince

DUBLIN (UPI)—British horse English Prince, an 8-1 outsider, won the $240,000 Irish Sweeps Derby Saturday during a bomb scare at the Curragh track near Dublin.

An anonymous telephone caller warned a bomb would explode in the stands during the race. A pre-race parade of the 13 runners was cancelled and the stand was cleared of spectators. A police search found no bomb.

A wife and husband team took the first two places in the race.

Mrs. Vera Hue-Williams owns English Prince. Her husband Col. Roger Hue-Williams owns Imperial Prince, the 11-5 favorite who placed second. Sir Penfro, 12-1, took third spot after a stewards' inquiry ruled Mississippian guilty of bumping and moved the horse from third to fourth place.

The winner was trained by Peter Walwyn and ridden by French jockey Yves Saint-Martin.

Cadet Glovers Split

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP)—Two U.S. Military Academy Golden Glovers made the finals in Madison Square Garden. It was the first time cadets from West Point went to the Garden to box. Jerry Johnson of Hamilton, Ohio, won but Al Fracker of Michigan Center, Mich., lost. Johnson, a senior, won the 160-pound subovice title. Fracker, a freshman, lost the 175-pound Open title.

BRAZILIANS WARM-UP

World Cup . . . Sudden Death Stage

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI)—Despite the efforts of its organizers, the world soccer cup has turned into a sudden-death tournament and today's second round matches could eliminate four of the eight surviving teams.

But the other four teams know that victory in the second round will not bring them an automatic berth in the July 7 final.

The new second-round system in which four teams in two groups play on a round-robin basis was intended to replace the knock-out method of quarter and semifinals. By chance, the opening second round matches have set up the old situation.

Today's Group A matches see Holland, the favorite, in action against East Germany in Gelsenkirchen, while Brazil meets arch-rivals Argentina for the first time in a world cup final in Hannover.

No matter what the results, Holland's July 3 match against the Brazilians will provide one of the finalists' Group B matches today

West Germany's problems here with a full-time psychologist who has recommended Chopin before matches to soothe pre-game nerves. Poland, the only team with a perfect record of four wins in four matches, may see the pace it has set itself catch up against the solid Yugoslavs.

The Swedes may prove much tougher than their outsider status suggests because their unconventional defense has only conceded one goal in four matches.

The Yugoslavs at least have no psychological problems because they are the only team here with a full-time psychologist who has recommended Chopin before matches to soothe pre-game nerves. Poland, the only team with a perfect record of four wins in four matches, may see the pace it has set itself catch up against the solid Yugoslavs.

Brazil, the only team which has yet to concede a goal, could ship water against the more imaginative Argentinians who will have Carlos Babington back in midfield after a one-match suspension and strong motivation to defeat their South American neighbors.

NFL Tickets Still Hot Commodities

NEW YORK (UPI) — Despite all those dire predictions of selling problems because of the anti-blackout law, the strike threat, the new league and even the energy crisis, season tickets for National Football League football games still seem to be a hot commodity.

A UPI survey of the 26 NFL teams shows there's only a slight softening in the demand for tickets around the league this year.

Of the 13 teams that sold out all their games last season, 12 of them seem sure to be sold out again this year.

The only question mark team is the world champion Miami Dolphins, who lead the league with almost 70,000 season tickets sold but still have tickets available because they play in the 80,000-seat Orange Bowl stadium.

Some observers have speculated that the majority of teams might be down because the Dolphins are off 10 per cent. What wasn't generally noted is that the Dolphins have sold more season tickets than any other team even though they still have more available because of their big stadium.

As Don Sandefur, the ticket manager for the Denver Broncos who play in the 51,701-capacity Mile High Stadium pointed out, "The blackout isn't going to hurt anyone in a small stadium."

Even the Dolphins are optimistic they'll come close to matching last year's figure when they cut off the season ticket sales at 78,000 and sold the last two thousand on a game-by-game basis.

Ticket manager Mike Robbie noted, "It will work out. We're down a little but almost 70,000 season tickets sold isn't bad. We may have a lot of tickets to sell on a per game basis and there may be a game here and there that will not be sold out. But people will probably buy up the tickets when there's a danger of it not being blacked out."

Under the provisions of the no-blackout rule, a network can televise a game locally if it's sold out 72 hours before kickoff.

Among the teams who've already sold are the Washington Redskins, the Pittsburgh Steelers, the Minnesota Vikings, the Chicago Bears, the Philadelphia Eagles, the Green Bay Packers, the San Francisco Forty-Niners, the Denver Broncos and the Oakland Raiders. The Atlanta Falcons, the New York Jets and the Cincinnati Bengals also expect to sell out all their games.

A Jet spokesman said, "I expect that we'll be sold out by October so Congress can say it didn't bother us. But we've had more of a selling job this year. The signs of a problem are there. We don't have the final figures in yet but we may have to dip into our waiting list."

Cincinnati is selling about the same pace as last year when it sold 50,000 season tickets. It sold the rest of the tickets for 56,000-seat Riverfront Stadium on a game-by-game basis and expects to do the same this year. Atlanta holds back 5,000 tickets on a game-by-game basis but sold them all last year and figures to do it again.

About a third of the teams raised ticket prices this year—about a dollar a ticket—but only two of the teams which sell out every game—Minnesota and Philadelphia—were among them.

One team hurt by the energy crisis is New England. The Patriots sold 56,043—the cutoff basis in the 61,000-seat Schaefer Stadium in 1972 but dropped to about 52,000 last year and are around the 50,000 mark this year. The 25-mile drive from Boston to Foxboro worries some subscribers.

"Many people wrote they were afraid they could not get to the stadium on a Sunday and still get gas," a Patriot spokesman said.

San Diego and Baltimore are two teams quite a bit down this year. San Diego, which sold 36,177 season tickets at this time last year and wound up with 40,341, is at 29,234. Baltimore, which sold 48,000 last year, is now at 36,000. Both clubs had losing seasons last year. Neither club was affected by the blackout because they didn't sell out last year.

Cleveland and New Orleans are running at about the same as last year when they sold 50,000 but both have plenty of tickets available because they play in 80,000-seat stadiums.

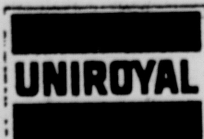

The New York Giants and

Dallas are in special situations. The Giants, who used to sell out every game, have 12,000 tickets available because they're playing at the Yale Bowl while a new stadium in the Jersey Meadowlands is being built. The Cowboys only sell about 30,000 season tickets but that's because season ticket holders have to buy a special bond to help pay for the construction of Teas Stadium.

Of the other teams who aren't sold out, Buffalo has sold 52,000, Los Angeles 44,000, Detroit 42,000, St. Louis 38,000 and Houston 28,000. Kansas City has plenty of tickets available but the exact figures weren't available.

The Los Angeles figure is disappointing because the team sold 50,000 tickets last year and made the playoffs. But in the league as a whole, the ticket situation hasn't changed that much from last year when a record 10.7 million tickets were sold.

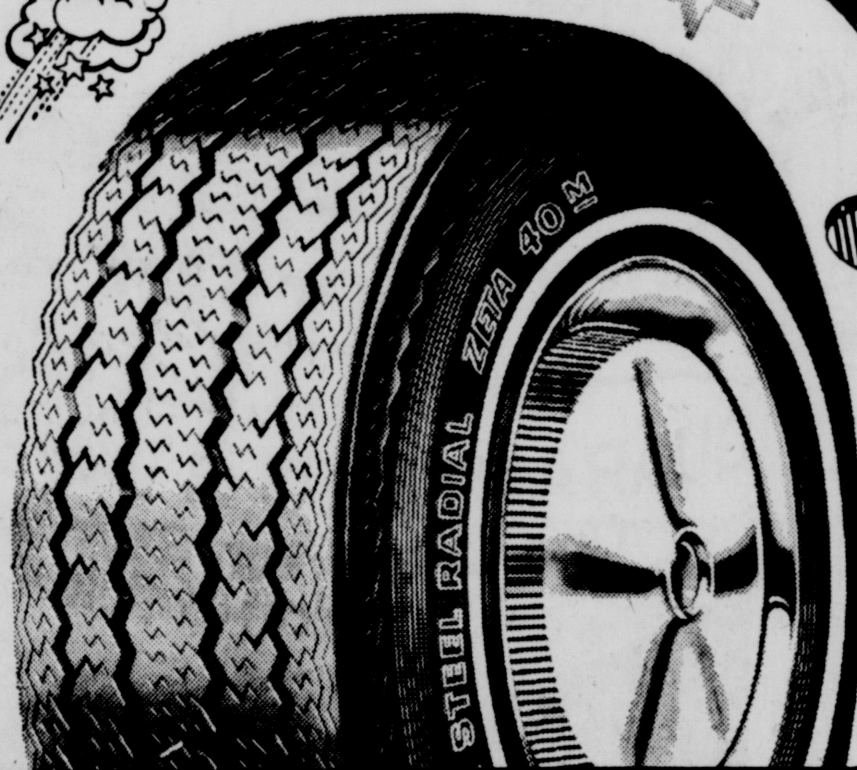

Now all the owners have to do is reach an agreement with the players so the games will be played.

Braves Home

KINGSTON

A pair of tough opponents await the Kingston Braves Sunday in one of the Hudson Valley Rookie League's home and away "semi-doubleheaders."

Kingston will travel to Carmel for a 2 p.m. contest then return to Dietz Stadium to greet the Newburgh Atoms at 8 p.m. The Braves are 1-1 after a delayed start and will have to work to stay at .500 for the weekend. Carmel, which is in the Northern Division with Kingston, won three of its first five games this year. The Atoms are undefeated after three games and lead the Southern Division.

Charlie Moore and Bob Marz will draw the starting assignment against Carmel. Tom Gallo is slated to go in the nitecap against Newburgh.

Suppose They Held a Tourney and Nobody Came?

By IRA MILLER

UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Some of the touring golf pros yawning their way to all that big money may be in for a big surprise soon.

One of these weeks they're going to stage a tournament and nobody's going to come.

When that happens, they'll have no one to blame but themselves.

There was a hint of things to come a couple of weeks ago when they held the U.S. Open just up the road from here at Winged Foot and thousands of tickets went begging.

Even at $10 a pop, those tickets usually sell, especially in this big, golf-conscious metropolitan area. The reason they didn't this time may be that people have lost interest in the golf tour, where so many guys now are making so much money so easily.

At Winged Foot, the biggest gate attraction was a 44-year-old has-been named Arnold Palmer. Palmer's role in building up the tour is legend—but now it's years past his prime, and he's still the only man everyone pays to see.

They had hoped that Johnny Miller, with the golden hair on his head and gold in his pockets, would be a name around whom the tour could draw for years, particularly with Palmer in decline, but Miller admits he's bored and "drained" after only a year at the top.

"All that success has taken the drive out of me," he says. "I don't care if I don't make another penny this year."

Miller's attitude, anathema to a Palmer or a Jack Nicklaus, is common among the young men coming to the top on the PGA tour.

"I may have gotten lazy because I've had such a good year," says Hubert Green, the No. 2 money winner behind Miller.

"I never go into any tournament feeling I'm gonna win," says Buddy Allin, No. 6 on the list. "Only one guy a week is gonna win. Why all this emphasis that you've got to win? I've got other problems that are bigger than a golf tournament."

A look at a couple of statistics may explain why people like Miller, Green and Allin feel the way they do.

Miller, who's 27, has earned $204,750 on the tour in 1974. Green, 27, has $157,465. Allin, 29, has $117,840. Arnold Palmer wasn't even on the tour until he was 25 years old. When he was 27, he had barely surpassed $20,000 in career earnings. It took Palmer the first six years of his career to make what Johnny Miller made in the first six months of 1974. What Palmer did in the '50's paved the way for the easy money of the '70's. "If it wasn't for Arnold Palmer, I wouldn't be here now," Tom Watson says candidly. Watson, 24, already is a winner of nearly $200,000 in his brief career even though he hasn't won a tournament yet. Palmer earned $42,608 in 1958, the first year he led the touring pros in earnings. Last year, it took more than that just to qualify for the top 60 to retain an exemption from qualifying for weekly tournaments.

The money the pros shoot for increased steadily from just over $1 million in 1958 to a record $8.6 million in 1973. This year showed the first decline, with a shorter schedule, total purses of $8.3 million, and a new gimmick designed to assure worried promoters of a top-calibre field—the designated tournament.

Two of the three designated tournaments already have been held and while they achieved their purpose of making sure all the top players showed up and played, they hardly were memorable. The winners were two obscure players, Rod Curl Palmer, in the twilight of his career, because even Nicklaus, and Bob Menne, neither of whom ever previously had won a tournament on the PGA tour, caught on as the attraction.

The new U.S. Open champion is an admitted anonymous man, Hale Irwin. He says his title won't change him.

Who does that leave to sell the tickets? Still only Arnold Palmer, in the twilight of his career, because even Nicklaus, and Bob Menne, neither of whom ever previously had won a tournament on the PGA tour, caught on as the attraction.

There are plenty of promoters for tournaments and sponsors for the telecasts. The real crunch won't come until people start to stay away in significant numbers. And that is likely to come about sooner than anyone realizes if the men on top remain "drained" and "lazy."

Grand Circuit at Goshen

GOSHEN — Trotters Starlark Hanover, Armbruo Ouzo, and Journalist, and pacers Nevele Bret, Handle With Care, and Joanna's Time, to Goshen for five afternoons with its array of top flight stables from all over the continent.

The major stake races boast some of the most impressive names in racing this season:

Starlark Hanover, the fastest, richest, and winningest two-year-old of 1973, will start in Monday's Coaching Club Trotting Oaks which will have a purse of some $12,000.

Nevele Bret, purchased as a yearling for $77,000 in 1972 and campaigning out of Stanley Dancer's stable, will be revved up for the Orange County Cup on Friday along with 17 other colts whose owners have kept up their stake payments.

Bill Haughton is expected to bring one of harness racing's biggest attractions, Handle With Care, into Thursday's Ladyship Stake.

Jockey Mary Bacon Is Familiar With Many Crises

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor
OCEANPORT, N.J. (UPI) — Mary Bacon had a couple of hours yet before she'd have to leave for work.

For her, work was the ninth race at nearby Monmouth Park.

That's when she'd ride her next mount, Ballet Russe, a four-year-old chestnut colt by Northern Dancer.

Right now, Mary Bacon was far more interested in a daughter clear of the disaster area, closed the door of the bathroom and that took care of "Suzy, what in the w-o-o-r-l-d do you think your're doing?" she called out, plainly exasperated. "Look what you've done! Now you've gone and stuffed up the toilet bowl."

Mary Bacon is used to much bigger crises. She didn't let this one throw her. She did what any sensible mother would do. She steered her five-year-old occupies with her daughter here she didn't fit any of these descriptions.

She looked instead much more like a remarkably attractive young mother. Harassed a little, maybe, but striking nonetheless.

"You ask me what I want to do with my life, what's my ambition?" she said. "My ambition is to raise a good daughter. That means more to me than winning a Kentucky Derby. I'd like to win the Derby, but Suzy comes first. I ride because of her. She doesn't live on air. She goes to a private school, needs clothes, needs a lotta things. That's why I ride horses. I enjoy that, but also make a living at it."

For five years, blonde, 26-year-old Mary Bacon was married to Johnny Bacon, another jockey, and although they were divorced two years ago, they're still close.

"We call each other all the time," she said. "Johnny called me the night before last. We were in the same world and on the same train of thought when we were married. You get a lotta husbands and wives who are in two different worlds. All she can talk about to him is what happened at the beauty parlor and at the PTA meeting, and all he can talk about is what happened at the business luncheon or in the office. I think Johnny and I had a good marriage. The big reason for the divorce was this racing rule which says a husband and wife are one, and the same. They can't testify against each other or claim a foul against each other."

Did that really cause the divorce?

"Well, I didn't really have any choice," said Mary Bacon. "My career is important to me and I'm sure Johnny's is to him. We got the divorce so we could continue riding. Now we're just two jockeys, not husband and wife anymore. It was a case of either being a wife or a jockey. When I lose I get a little discouraged and think I should be a wife, and when I win, I'm glad I'm a jockey."

Mary Bacon loves horses. She has been riding them since she was five and has been hurt badly by them, but that hasn't changed her feelings any.

Three years ago, she was unconscious for six days after a spill at The Meadows in resented Mary Bacon, Robyn Mary Bacon. "I sometimes Smith and the relatively few think they forget I'm a girl. I other female riders. They guess the press has made me a character or something. I course and Robyn Smith lies. That's typical of what the press says, and the press is wrong."

MULTI-TITLED—In her six years as professional jockey, Mary Bacon has heard herself called "Queen of the Turf," "Little Miss Get-It-All," and "The Toughest Broad You'll Ever See On A Horse." She is shown (L) in a 1973 photo and (R) after finishing behind the leaders in the mud at Monmouth Park. (UPI)

UCWGA Splits Field In County Tournament

Having found the split shift experiment in 1973 too cumbersome, the Ulster County Women's Golf Association has decided to split the field for its 1974 championships. It was announced by Nina Werbalowsky, the association's publicity chairman.

Play will start simultaneously at the Rondout Pool, Golf and Tennis Association in Accord and at Stone Dock Golf Course in High Falls on Wednesday, July 31, and Wednesday, Aug. 7.

Half the field will tee off at each of the testing links and then switch courses on the second tournament day. Starting times are 8 a. m. Rain dates for the 36-hole stroke play contests are Aug. 1 and Aug. 8.

The new format was announced by Mrs. Thomas Davenport of Stone Dock, the tournament's general chairman, following a planning meeting at Rondout.

To qualify for the competition, a woman must have an attested handicap of 35 or less and reside in Ulster County. The entry fee is $25.25. Playing tickets and donation tickets at $12.50 are available at all member clubs through club delegates to the county association.

Deadline for entries for the tournament is July 15.

Champions will be crowned in both net and gross divisions, with the low gross scorer recognized as Ulster County Woman's Champion. The prizes will be awarded following play at the Rondout clubhouse.

The eight member clubs of the county association include Rondout, Stone Dock, Sawyerkill, Woodstock, Granit II, The Twaalfskill Club, Wiltwyck and Shawangunk Country Club.

Other members of the tournament committee are: Mrs. Jack Baker, Stone Dock, membership chairman; Beth Aaron, Granit II, prizes; Mrs. M. Richard Davenport, Wiltwyck, pairings and scheduling chairman.

Mrs. Oscar Johnson of Rondout is the handicaps chairman; Mrs. Seymour Werbalowsky, Wiltwyck, year.

publicity; Mrs. William Barrett of Rondout, the association president, serves as ex-officio member of all committees.

Association officers are: Mrs. Barrett, president; Mrs. Thomas Davenport, Stone Dock, vice president; Mrs. Arthur Evans, Sawyerkill, secretary; and Beth Aaron, Granit II, treasurer.

The Association, whose goal is the further advancement of golf combined with good sportsmanship and friendly competition, donates a portion of its proceeds to charity each year.

Even Villagers Object To the Palestinians

ARKOUB, Lebanon (AP) — "All we want is to live in peace and for the government to get the guerrillas out of our area," said one of the villagers here in south Lebanon.

But five years ago the Lebanese army tried to bring the Palestinians under its control and couldn't do the job. An agreement to coexist resulted, and the government does not deny that there are thousands of armed guerrillas in the country, with the concentration heaviest in the south.

They seem well established in Arkoub, a village two miles from the Israeli border.

Half a dozen young Palestinians in fatigues suddenly appeared in the village and ordered foreign correspondents on a government tour of the region "to leave at once."

One noisily pulled back the bolt of his AK47 Soviet automatic rifle and placed a bullet in the breach.

"You can't order people about, this is Lebanese territory," protested the Ministry of Information official with the newsmen.

"Yes, but this is a military area," the guerrilla retorted. Then he and his companions walked away and disappeared behind a house heavily damaged by shelling.

The Lebanese government and the Palestinian leaders in Beirut deny Israel's charge that the terrorists who have been making suicide raids into Israeli towns and settlements in the past three months come from villages and refugee camps in Lebanon. They say these guerrillas are based in Israel.

"Look at this fence, not even a bird would be able to get through it, let alone a group of grown men," said a Lebanese army lieutenant pointing to the Israeli-built barrier along the border.

It consists of a first line of multiple barbed wire coils, piled on top of each other, backed by a 10-foot-high fence of thick wire netting.

A wide military road, patrolled day and night by the Israelis, runs parallel to the fence up and down the steep valleys, cutting through fertile orchards and fields.

There are also "enough mines and other booby traps on the other side to blow up a whole army..." the lieutenant added.

Artillery shells could be heard echoing along the deep valleys scoring the flanks of massive Mt. Hermon. The Bib-

Oral Cancer Death Rate Still High Despite Improved Methods

CHICAGO (UPI) — The death rate from oral cancer has not dropped since 1950 despite improved methods of treating cancer, according to a Chicago oral surgeon.

Dr. Daniel M. Laskin, editor of the Journal of Oral Surgery, said the problem lies in failure of Americans to recognize oral cancer in its earliest clinical stages.

Laskin, who heads the College of Dentistry at the University of Illinois Medical Center in Chicago and is in charge oral surgery at Cook County Hospital, said that with early recognition, the cure rate for oral cancer is significantly higher.

He said one study showed that the cure rate—meaning the five-year survival rate—increased more than 45 per cent when diagnosis of oral cancer was made before it spread to other parts of the body.

"It isn't necessarily the doctor's fault for not recognizing the cancer," Laskin said. "It's usually the patient who may not seek care or not notice the signs."

"These... observations are particularly distressing when one realizes that 85 per cent of oral cancers are either visible directly, or indirectly with a mirror, and that 11 per cent of those not visible are palpable on careful clinical examination."

Laskin cited statistics that he said seem to show that women take better care of themselves. Of 7,600 deaths from oral cancer in 1973, men outnumbered women by a ratio of about 5 to 1. Women also had a higher cure rate than men in cancer in all parts of the oral cavity.

"I don't think anyone really knows the answer to this, but the impression is that women are more conscious of the oral cavity and the facial area," Laskin said. "There is nothing physically different about women to account for the difference."

Laskin said that only about 3 per cent of all cancer is oral cancer, but that almost half of those who contracted the disease in the oral cavity died from it.

Red Tide Survey Intensified

SANDY HOOK N.J. (UPI) — The red tide creeps slowly along the Jersey shore each summer — an ugly mass of reddish-brown organic material in a usually bluish ocean.

Biologists move to take water samples, swimmers stay out of the Atlantic Ocean for fear of irritations and municipal officials worry that the organisms will force the closing of their beaches.

This year, state and federal environmentalists, concerned about the toxic effects of the matter called a "bloom", are working to detect the material and find a way to stop it.

"The red tide is generally a population explosion of . . . organic material that inhabits the ocean," says John D. Mehoney, a biologist with the Sandy Hook Marine Laboratory. "It grows with the right combination of pollutants and warm weather — we're not sure just exactly how."

Last summer, Sandy Hook State Park was temporarily closed to bathers when the mass of reddish water seeped into the area. And the organism, though not toxic to humans, caused skin, eye, ear, nose and throat irritations to swimmers along the entire Jersey shore.

"There are many varieties of the organism, but only a few are known to be toxic," says Mehoney. "There is much work to be done in the area of finding out just why the population explosion occurs."

That research is being conducted by the state Department of Environmental Protection's (DEP) Bureau of Water Pollution Control.

A special monitoring system has been set up at five key water locations around the state where biologists monitor the level of water pollution every two weeks to determine the amount of nutrients or pollutants in the water and if it will create a "bloom" of the red tide.

"We get chemical and plankton data during the winter months which gives us a good picture of the organism and we can determine when a red tide will start," says Frank Takacs, the DEP's principal biologist. During the summer months, the DEP monitors the ocean water by boat and plane to spot the red matter as well as taking periodic water samples.

"We don't want the beaches to be closed, that's why we are intensifying our survey," says Takacs. "This is the first year we have systematically taken samples of the organisms and we hope to find some preventative measures eventually."

Takacs says varieties of marine life can be affected by some varieties of the red tide. "There are certain species forms that remain toxic to fish and shellfish," He says. "For instance, if a Massachusetts monitoring lab knows that a variety is moving toward New Jersey, we know in advance to warn fishermen about it."

But even those varieties of organisms which affect marine life that are eaten by persons will cause only throat and stomach irritations.

"Basically our job is to monitor the organisms and clear up the confusion of people who think the red tide is dangerous," Takacs says. "It really isn't. It's only an irritation."

Takacs says no researcher has yet discovered a way to Market inflation

Price your family into a lucky-lack house

In the 27 years we've been in business, we've proved to thousands of people that we can give them a larger, better home for their money. You too can have a home worth thousands of dollars more than you pay for it if you're willing to do some of the finishing work yourselves—or supervise it.

We'll mortgage it for you. Because we believe in our homes and in the people who buy them, we put up the money.

No big down payment. Banks want up to 30% down. That can be discouraging. We ask for just a fraction of that.

Custom-designed.

You've got your own ideas about what's important in a home. Take any one of our 78 basic models and modify the plans to suit yourselves.

It's your investment.

A home is more than a place to live, it's probably the biggest investment you'll ever make. Make it a wise one.

Hunt Back as Witness Monday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The first day of testimony in the Ellsberg burglary trial presented fresh glimpses of E. Howard Hunt Jr., who said he proposed the crime, and Dr. Lewis J. Fielding, the Beverly Hills psychiatrist who was his victim.

They were witnesses in the conspiracy trial of John D. Ehrlichman, formerly President Nixon's top domestic assistant, and three others charged with violating Fielding's civil liberties. The trial resumes Monday with Hunt returning to the witness chair.

Fielding, whose office was burglarized over Labor Day 1971 in the White House "plumbers" effort to get medical information about Pentagon Papers defendant Daniel Ellsberg, is a bald man who spoke and gestured slowly and deliberately.

He provoked laughter from the audience in Courtroom 6 and even from presiding U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell. "If I appear apprehensive, it's only because I am," Fielding said as he began his testimony.

Fielding said he is a physician-psychiatrist who is a certified psychiatrist and neurologist. He has practiced for 25 years and has no receptionist or nurse in a "modest" two-room office. He said he treated Ellsberg intensively between 1968 and 1970 and "nine or 10 times" since.

Fielding said two FBI agents came to him in the summer of 1971 to get information about Ellsberg—"medical, of course," he said, quoting one of them.

When the FBI agents pressed him—"What's your decision, Doc?"—he turned them down on advice of his lawyer. A few weeks later, on the Saturday evening of Labor Day weekend, he was summoned to his ransacked office by Beverly Hills police who assured him the burglary was pulled by persons after drugs.

At one point, Fielding told of speaking with a good friend, Ephraim Martinez, and a cleaning woman about the break-in.

"That's the most interesting part of the whole thing," Fielding began. "Martinez told me a rather strange story."

Defense lawyers objected. Gesell, not smiling this time, sustained the objection, and the audience never heard the tale.

Hunt, the author of 40 spy novels and a CIA agent for 21 years before joining the White House as a consultant attached to the "plumbers" unit, continually used stilted language and what he called "intelligence jargon."

"I have no current recollection of that mention," he said on one occasion.

Explaining how he got disguise material from the CIA in advance of the break-in, Hunt referred to "pocket litter." Gesell asked what that was, and he replied, "courtesy cards, library cards, things normally found in a billfold—theater stubs."

Some Small Talk, Then . . .

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The House Judiciary Committee has been given another tape transcript in which the President refers caustically to bombing in Vietnam and the reason for moving the 1972 GOP National Convention to Miami from San Diego, the Los Angeles Times said Saturday.

"The bastards have never been bombed like they're going to be bombed this time . . ." the President said on the tape, delivered to the committee by James D. St. Clair, Nixon's chief impeachment counsel.

The Times said it acquired Friday the transcript of an April 4, 1972, conversation between Nixon, his former chief of staff, H.R. Haldeman, and former Attorney General John Mitchell.

The conversation opened with small talk, and in part, continued about Vietnam and the ITT-owned Sheraton Hotel in San Diego.

P. . . Try and get the weather, damn it, if any of you know of any prayers say them (unintelligible) weather. Let's get the weather cleared up. The bastards have never been bombed like they're going to be bombed this time, but you've got to have weather.

M. Is the weather still bad?

P. Huh! It isn't bad. The Air Force isn't worth a—I mean, they won't fly. Oh, they fly, but they won't—see our Air Force is not . . .

H. It's the strangest thing—in World War II they flew these bombing runs all the time and they couldn't see a thing.

P. I know.

M. But they were doing a different type of bombing then.

There was more comment about flying and Mitchell asked the President if the Navy pilots were as bad.

P. Oh, they're better, but they're all under this one command. It's all screwed up.

The President then referred to the Air Force pilots as a "lot of brave guys" and said they would hit something when the weather cleared up.

The conversation shifted to plans for the 1972 Republican National Convention in San Diego where the Sheraton Hotel would be one of the centers of activity and the fact that it might be politically embarrassing because the hotel is a subsidiary of the ITT-Sheraton Corp. There had been disclosure that ITT-Sheraton had pledged up to $400,000 to help finance the convention.

In the conversation, Nixon asked what reason could be used for moving the convention to Miami.

M. The cost and the uncertainty of the availability of the facilities.

H. There's a real question as to whether they can do the construction . . .

M. That's correct. And the arena out there is owned by two Canadians and they're just acting tougher than hell.

P. All Canadians are tough.

There was talk about the reaction of San Diego residents to a switch.

M. So if the only negative factors that I see in the change . . .

P. Is the admission of guilt in ITT, right?

M. Well, I think that that will go by the boards.

P. Maybe that's better than just having the damned story rehearsed again.

Maria Peron Takes Helm

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Juan D. Peron's wife Saturday took over the presidency of Argentina from her 78-year-old husband, who has been confined to his residence by illness for the past two weeks.

The 43-year-old Mrs. Maria Estela Peron, the vice president, is the first female president in the Western Hemisphere.

Speaking on national radio and television said her husband has "recognized that his state of health impedes him, until his recovery, from directly attending to the administrative needs of the government."

She reported that Peron "has resolved to delegate the exercise of the presidency of the nation to the vice president."

"Carrying out his wish, I have assumed on this date the presidency of the nation," Mrs. Peron declared.

Mrs. Peron, who was sworn in at the presidential residence Saturday morning, said she would serve "under the guiding inspiration" of her husband.

Appearing with the cabinet and the heads of the armed services and the supreme court, she said in a filmed address, "I demand the solidarity of all Argentines. I beg God for his protection."

Mrs. Peron cut short a European trip to return home Friday.

The heads of the three armed services sent messages to their units pledging respect for the constitution.

This was taken as support for Mrs. Peron's assumption of power as is provided in the constitution in case of illness of the president.

His third wife, Mrs. Peron met the Argentine leader in 1956 when he was living in exile in Panama. She was then a 25-year-old cabaret dancer known as Isabel Martinez.

Peron was confined to the presidential residence June 17. Peron's doctors said Friday that he was suffering from bronchial and circulation problems that demand "absolute rest and medical assistance to cover any eventualities."

They said he has been "suffering for the past 12 days from a bronchial infection that because of its intensity has had repercussions on his old central circulatory problem."

Medical sources said the reference to the "old central circulatory problem" meant the bronchial infection had affected his heart.

Peron admitted to having suffered a heart problem shortly after he returned to Argentina last June after almost 18 years in exile.

Previous government announcements said Peron was suffering from the flu.

National Ups Steel Price

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — National Steel Corp. followed the lead of other major steelmakers Saturday in announcing an average of 5 per cent price increases for some of its products effective Aug. 1.

The Aluminum Co. of America said it planned to hike prices on a "broad range of mill products," possibly as early as Monday.

The nation's three biggest steel producers, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem and Republic, announced price increases in the past week.

National Steel said its price hikes were due to higher costs of tin, labor and raw materials. The company also said it would institute a new freight policy which calls for a maximum of $5 per ton freight absorption on its tin mill products, effective Aug. 1, and adjust the costs of various extras upward.

At the same time, a $7 per ton surcharge on tin mill products will be discontinued.

The Alcoa spokesman said the company had not yet determined the percentage of its price increases but that they would affect about 50 per cent of its shipments.

Rival Palestinians in Clash

By United Press International

Fighting between rival guerrilla groups inside Palestinian refugee camps in Lebanon has left 20 dead and 18 wounded, a pro-guerrilla newspaper said Saturday.

Lebanese Prime Minister Takiyeddin Solh went to Damascus Saturday for talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad aimed at coordinating strategy in the face of Israeli reprisals against the guerrilla strongholds in Lebanon.

The highest estimate of casualties in the guerrilla clash Friday—almost 40 dead or wounded—came from the Beirut newspaper Al Moharrer, which is sympathetic to the guerrilla cause.

The most conservative estimate, by the Al Anwar newspaper, reported six persons killed and many wounded. The shootout, between the Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command, continued sporadically for eight hours.

The General Command wants war against Israel for the liquidation of the Jewish state.

Manson Case Lawyers Indicted

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Vincent Bugliosi, who prosecuted the Manson family, and a defense lawyer in that trial were indicted for perjury Friday in the latest round of a three-year campaign by Superior Court judges to find out who violated a gag order by talking to a reporter.

Bugliosi, who has run unsuccessfully for district attorney and state attorney general since the trial, said through an attorney he is "shocked and outraged" by the indictment.

The charges by the county grand jury are related to the complex running legal struggle by Los Angeles Times reporter William Farr, who spent 46

Earth Rumbled Like Galloping Horses

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — "The earth began to rumble like when thousands of horses gallop on the range. I felt myself sink up to my waist. Something hit me on the head, and I lost consciousness."

That was all Mauricio Forian, a Colombian peasant, remembered of a massive Andean landslide Friday that authorities said killed more than 200 persons.

Gen. Jose Jaime Rodriguez, Colombia's Civil Defense director, said Saturday that 50 bodies had been recovered and 100 persons hospitalized. "We'll never know exactly the number of victims of this national tragedy," Rodriguez said, but "if the information we possess is correct, we would calculate the number of dead would rise to more than 200."

Rescue workers were digging for bodies under the threat of more slides, beneath shifting masses of rocks and mud. Rodriguez said the avalanche, about 95 miles east of Bogota or the road to Villavieja, buried more than 20 vehicles, including six loaded buses.

Communications with Villavieja, capital of the state of Meta, remained cut off Saturday.

DAY AT THE RACES — Ted Kennedy, 12, son of Sen. Edward Kennedy, passes through the crowd at the Irish Derby at the Curragh, County Kildare on Saturday. On vacation, the youngster was hospitalized in Dublin because of mild side effects of drugs he had been taking to prevent recurrence of bone cancer that led to amputation of his leg. Doctors decided Saturday that he was fit enough to resume his holiday. (UPI Telephoto)

Army, Police Rule in Ethiopia

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — The army and police, seeking arrested and formed a special ministerial commission to negotiate with the mutinous troops, police and militia units. Western diplomatic reports said Emperor Haile Selassie was considering moving from the capital to a palace at Debre Zeit 25 miles to the south. But broadcasts by the military stressed loyalty to the Emperor.

Army units took over two radio stations in the city Friday and seized other strategic points, including the international airport, Saturday.

The army, supported by police and militia, announced an 11 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew "until the peaceful completion of the movement which started in February" when widespread trouble first began.

The army said it would continue to take "all the appropriate measures aimed at the unity of the nation" until the country was purged of former high government officials accused of corruption. Unconfirmed reports said at least four ministers in the current government had been detained by the troops. But Western diplomats said the current action was aimed primarily against members of the pre-February regime who so far have not been brought to trial.

The diplomats said the army, by controlling the capital and dictating terms to the beleaguered civilian cabinet, was in virtual control of the country.

American Designer Show Accents Sex Appeal

WOMEN'S PAGE EDITOR
HOTEL PLAZA NEW YORK, N.Y. — Fashion editors have been making the rounds these past two weeks getting previews of what women will be offered by designers and manufacturers for the 1974 Fall and Winter seasons.

Canadian designers unfolded their show first in Montreal, Canada, and this was followed by the New York Couture Group in New York City and Men's Fashion Association preview in Spring Lake, N.J.

This past week it was the American Designer Showings at the Hotel Plaza in New York featuring such name-designers as Bill Blass, Adele Simpson, Leo Narducci, Oscar De La Renta, Geoffrey Beene, Jerry Silverman, Trigere, Mollie Parnis, Jim Baldwin and Estevez. There were many more in the show organized by Eleanor Lambert, the "dean" of fashion previews.

During the week, there was a special Salute to Fifth Avenue's 150th Anniversary. Fashion editors were treated to a box supper at the Museum of the City of New York, were greeted by Mayor Abraham D. Beame and took a motorcade down Fifth Avenue to view special displays. It's been a very busy two weeks.

Eleanor Lambert gave the Fall 1974 Forecast saying: "Nostalgia American style is quite different from the backward glances of other fashion centers. Ours has very little to do with the way clothes were in the 1920s, '30s, '50s, or on the Russian steppes. To American designers, what's vital is that Sex Appeal lives again on Seventh Avenue," she said.

The collections shown in the American Designers Press Week vividly revive the happy time when a woman and a beautiful dress made an instant love match — irresistible to each other and together irresistible to a man, Lambert stressed.

Largeness and layers, the common denominators of Fall fashion everywhere, were not ignored by the American designers, but theirs is a lighter touch with more choice of weightless fabrics.

Two other significant and arresting aspects of the Fall American designer collections are the beautiful and masterful interplay of as many as five textures in a single costume and the use of one beautiful color (or no color) all the way from head to heel. Nothing could so effectively write "finis" to the incoherent era of dress than these expert harmonies of the surfaces: hat perhaps in felt or knit, the coat possibly in leather, mohair or tweed, the dress in thin jersey or wool chiffon, plus handbag, stockings, shoes and gloves (gloves are back), all perfectly matched by the designer's eye. The "color" is generally the designer's variation on a skin-flattering neutral such as ivory, cream, pearl grey, platinum, pewter, or the subtle greige of staghorn, antler or tree bark.

There is no such thing as "the" American length. Neither is there "the" outline, or "the" erogenous zone. The silhouette may be enormously full and wrapped, with raglan or dropped shoulders, as in the new steamer coats and swirling capes, or slim and slinky, as in other wrapped coats, slender suits and clingy evening dresses.

The use of bias cuts, pleats, shirring and drapery is strategy with one aim: to emphasize the female curves. No taut or cinched line exists anywhere. Armholes are deepened, shoulders soft, establish a set length, they did show their outfits in mid-calf or ankle length for evening with day skirts ranging from the center of the knee-cap to mid-calf. The latter was usually shown with boots. So if you have a lot of mini's — use them at home.

All the skirts shown this week are full, cut on the bias (usually), with gores or the new front-gathered dirndl line. As for colors — some designers have used vivid colors as basics and all have spiked their clothes with bright red. Of one thing we can be sure, all the shows have established black for evening wear. Other shades include the pale neutrals, brown, shades of wine and eggplant along with loden green, mauve, rose and lilac.

If you love fabrics, 1974 Fall and Winter is just right for your tastes. The designers were clever in using the lush fabrics and keeping prices down by eliminating such things as buttons, buttonholes and trappings. They have really avoided run-of-the-mill materials carrying over many themes to leather and suede.

There are some exceptions. For the really SUPER FORMALS, women will be wearing a lot of beading and rhinestone embroidery in brilliant Art Deco motifs. There are also many metallic stencilled fabrics and sequin embroidery.

Designers have also used a lot of ostrich feathers, lace and fur, the latter at the neck and wrists. To sum up, fashions for the 1974 Fall and Winter seasons offer something for everyone. Even the designer Estevez has come up with great styles for the gal 5'2" and under and with curves. His collection was originally made for Eva Gabor.

If you are one who worries about the length of your skirt, we can report that while American designers did not

Friends of Historic Kingston Attend Annual Social Here

The Annual Social Meeting of Friends of Historic Kingston was held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Weber, 28 Green Street. William Daron, a past President of "Friends" turned over the gavel to new President Edwin M. Ford, on behalf of E. Robert Johnson, who was absent due to illness. Other officers are Mrs. Allan Hanstein, Vice President, Mrs. Avery Lete Smith, Secretary, B. Paul Scogna, Treasurer.

Mrs. Kenneth Davenport reported that the Kiersted House, long a project of the Friends, has been sold to Mr. and Mrs. Derek St. John of Accord, who will continue the restoration of the house. Mr. and Mrs. St. John commented that they "plan to restore it faithfully." Mrs. Davenport specially thanked members of the organization who worked on the project: William Daron, W. Anderson Carl, Herbert Cutler, E. Robert Johnson, B. Paul Scogna, Jerry Leatherman, Norman Risdal, Mr. and Mrs. William Davenport, Mrs. Avery Lete Smith and Mrs. William Landisman.

Mrs. Thomas W. Reynolds reported on the walking tour and announced that all guides and hostesses will be dressed in costume for the regular walking tours that are held on the third Thursday of each month through September and for Fall Festival in October. Mrs. Reynolds, Mrs. Weber and Mrs. B. Paul Scogna then modeled and explained the costume that guides and hostesses will be wearing. Fall Festival is planned in cooperation with the Chamber of Commerce and the Uptown Businessmen Association. Special tours of 25 persons or more may be arranged by phoning Mrs. Reynolds.

Assisting Mrs. Weber with refreshments were: Herbert Cutler, William Daron, Mrs. Henry Parker, Mrs. Florence Shea Ludlow, Miss Barbara Balber, and Miss Sue Weber. Attending the meeting were: Mrs. H. F. King, Mrs. Viola Van Steenburg, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Scogna, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Leatherman, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Risdal, Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Fredenberg, Mrs. Thomas W. Reynolds, Mrs. Raymond Rignal Dr. and Mrs. Avery Lete Smith, Mrs. Henry Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Ford, Mr. William Narey, Mrs. Florence Shea Ludlow, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sturges, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Davenport, Mrs. Herbert

Summer Dance Classes Opening In Woodstock

Dance classes for children and adults will be held during July and August at the home of Judith Moncure Bachrach, creative dance teacher on the staff of the Woodstock Montessori School.

For the past two years, Mrs. Bachrach has conducted classes in her own studio and at the Woodstock Children's Center. The Wednesday morning summer classes will be for boys and girls 2½ to four years of age and five-six year olds. Girls 7-12 will attend classes on Thursday morning and adults in the Modern Dance class will attend sessions Wednesday nights. Classes begin July 3.

Mrs. Bachrach is a graduate of Bennington College. She and her husband recently performed at SUNY, New Paltz and Ulster County Community College with other area dancers. The instructor is looking forward to presenting an informal children's dance concert featuring her pupils the end of August.

Detailed information may be obtained by contacting Mrs. Bachrach at her Woodstock residence.

LIQUID BLACK polyester chiffon for this deep V'd surplice top dinner dress with full bell sleeves and a floating dancing skirt is from the Jerry Silverman Fall 1974 collection designed by Shannon Rodgers. Approximate retail price is $18 and it was previewed in the American Designer Shows this past week at the Hotel Plaza in New York City.

BLACK AND WHITE WOOL is also taking a popular turn. Anyone wearing this will be collecting compliments. By Adele Simpson, it is a black and white wool blend tweed dress. The designer has bordered it in black and throws a matching shawl around the neck. It's that total look from her 1974 collection.

Donna Karan for Anne Klein and Company, showed the most graceful of gowns with narrow straps and low U (not V) necklines both front and back. They featured it in brown nyesta and teamed it with matching cape. Day-time luxury was the message for fall from Bill Blass. He showed a tweed coat in grey beige tones trimmed with golden amber fox. The outfit was complete with a jersey skirt and alpaca blouse and scarf.

Should a Mother Be Guilty for Working?

By JOANNE AND LEW KOCH
(Note: Today's column is written by Joanne)

Guilt is an occupational hazard of employed mothers. Some of us find it very difficult to reconcile the pressing needs of mind and budget with the emotional needs of our children.

Some of this guilt is unavoidable. There will be times when both the children and the boss demand our attention. But there is a great deal of unnecessary guilt experienced because of misconceptions we mothers have about working — vague notions that kids wouldn't have problems if mom were always home, that they become delinquents only because mom is on the job in the office instead of in the kitchen, that the child of a working mother has a diminished self-esteem.

Lois Hoffman, professor of psychology at the University of Michigan, has been studying the effects of maternal employment of children for over 15 years. In a pamphlet available from the University of Michigan (Ann Arbor, Mich. 48104), Professor Hoffman gathers together the important research of this topic and gives a clear and surprisingly guilt-free concept of the working mother.

Most of the confusion about the effects of the mother's employment on the child has to do with the differing needs of young children and school age children. An 8-year-old may thrive with a working mom whereas a 2-year-old may be deprived by that arrangement.

The school-age child whose mother works all day is not likely to be harmed, according to Hoffman's research. In some cases the child's self-esteem and sense of responsibility will be enhanced if the mother works.

According to a 1970 study cited by Hoffman, "The effect of maternal employment was to raise the estimation of one's own sex; that is each sex added positive traits usually associated with the opposite sex — daughters of working mothers saw women as competent and effective, while sons of working mothers saw men as warm and expressive."

If there is a social stigma in the community about working mothers — as is the case in certain lower class populations — the mother's employment could suggest to the son that father is at worst an economic failure, at best less capable than other fathers. But in a majority of families studied, the sons of working mothers came to view their fathers as more nurturing, not less competent. Unless there are other serious family problems, the working mother with school age children who has a reasonably satisfying job and is able to arrange adequate supervision of her children is not increasing the chances of her children becoming delinquent or emotionally disturbed. If her children are adolescents, the working mother may be helping them and herself to a better adjustment to their independence and separation from home.

The Red, White and Blue Tradition for July 4th

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

For a bang-up celebration of the Fourth of July this year, start July 2 and continue through July 8, covering all historical bases.

The Continental Congress approved the resolution of independence from Britain July 2, drafting the Declaration July 4. The declaration was not, however, read publicly until July 8. Observers of these first years have left reports of a "festive and uproarious celebration of the first anniversary in Philadelphia spread to other cities and states."

Although the massive community turnouts are not the massive affairs they were 50 or even 25 years ago, the tradition is still strong among Americans of a day of freedom and feasting on some of the most typically American foods, from hams to hot dogs, from homemade pies to watermelon and ice cream.

Grand Slam Frankfurter Roll

Split a loaf of French bread the long way, butter it with garlic butter and toast lightly on grill. On the bottom half arrange sliced tomatoes, sliced onions, sliced cucumbers, franks which have been split and grilled, and mayonnaise. Add cheese if you like. Top with the other half of the loaf. Cut through in thick slices the round way. Serve with radishes and green onions.

Early in day, cut required number of franks into one-inch pieces. Put each piece of frank on a pick; top with a pickled onion. Make barbecue sauce. Refrigerate all till needed. To serve: Stick picks with franks into a small head of cabbage. Set on tray. Reheat barbecue sauce; make cheese sauce. Arrange in bowls near franks. Dip franks into sauces.

Barbecue Sauce

One-fourth cup vinegar
One-half cup water
Two tablespoons sugar
One tablespoon prepared mustard
One-half teaspoon pepper
One and one-half teaspoon salt
One-half teaspoon cayenne pepper
One thick lemon slice
One sliced onion
One-fourth cup butter or margarine
One-half cup catchup
Two tablespoons Worcestershire
One and one-half teaspoon liquid or powdered smoke (optional)
In saucepan, mix vinegar, water, sugar, mustard, pepper, butter. Simmer, uncovered, 20 minutes. Add Catchup Worcestershire, smoke; bring to boil. Makes about one and three-fourths cups.

Zippy Cheese Sauce

In double boiler, place one-third cup milk, one-half pound sliced process cheese. Add dash of cayenne or liquid hot pepper seasoning, or a little minced onion sauteed till tender in butter. Heat, stirring, until blended and smooth. Makes about one and one-third cups.

Chinese Dragon Franks

One-half cup brown sugar
Two tablespoons corn starch
One-eighth teaspoon cloves
Two tablespoons onion chopped fine
One can (13 and one-half ounces) pineapple chunks.
One cup pineapple juice
Three tablespoons soy sauce
One beef bouillon cube
One pepper cut in one-inch square pieces
Two carrots cut in thin strips
Eight all-meat franks cut in bite-size pieces
Brown franks in butter. Set aside, mix in saucepan onion, brown sugar, corn starch, and cloves. Add pineapple juice (if not one cup, add water to make one cup), vinegar, soy sauce and bouillon cube. Cook, stirring frequently, until mixture is thick. Add franks and remaining butter, carrots, peppers and pineapple chunks to sauce. Simmer 15 minutes only. Serve over rice or Chinese noodles. Makes 6 servings.

Black Forest Barbecue

For 6 people, take 12 bratwurst and slice them down the middle. Mash one-half pound of liverwurst and combine with 2 tablespoons of grated onion, one-half cup of sour cream and a dash of Tabasco sauce. Stuff the bratwurst with this mixture, brush with mustard and roll two each in foil. Cook in the foil on the grill for 12 to 15 minutes, turning them twice during the process.

Ball Park Chowder

Four all-meat franks
One can cream-style corn
Three slices West Virginia bacon
One car milk
Dice bacon, and brown until crisp. Drain on paper towel. Cut franks into one-fourth inch slices and brown lightly in bacon drippings. Pour corn and milk in a saucepan. Add frankfurter slices, three tablespoons bacon drippings and diced bacon. Simmer 10 minutes. Makes four servings.

Peach Fuzz

One-fourth cup sugar
One-third cup water
One-fourth cup light corn syrup
One tablespoon lemon juice
One-fourth teaspoon grated lemon rind
One-half cup gin (four ounces) optional
Two tablespoons lime juice
One tablespoon maraschino cherry juice
Two medium ripe peaches, pitted, cut-up
10 ice cubes, crushed
Stir together sugar, water, corn syrup, lemon juice and rind in small saucepan. Bring to boil over medium heat and boil five minutes. Cool. In blender container place lemon syrup, gin, lime juice, cherry juice, peaches and ice cubes. Blend on medium speed of snow. Serve in chilled glasses with Maraschino cherry and peach slices on a skewer, if desired. Makes four drinks.

Blueberry Funny Cake

Two cups blueberries
One cup sugar
One tablespoon lemon juice
One-fourth cup butter
Three-fourths cup sugar
One egg
One and one-fourth cups sifted cake flour
One teaspoon baking powder
One-half teaspoon salt
One-half cup milk
One teaspoon vanilla
One unbaked nine-inch pie shell
Make a blueberry sauce by putting blueberries into saucepan and adding one cup sugar, lemon juice and a tablespoon of water, if the sauce is too thick. Stirring gently, heat mixture until it is simmering and sugar is completely dissolved. Let cool to lukewarm while preparing cake batter. For cake batter, cream butter, add three-fourths cup sugar and cream thoroughly. Add egg and mix well. Sift flour with baking powder and salt and add alternately with milk. Add vanilla. Pour batter into unbaked pie shell. Gently pour lukewarm blueberry sauce over the top. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven for 35 to 40 minutes or until cake tests done.

Pineapple Ginger Punch

Two cups light corn syrup
Six cups pineapple juice, chilled
One teaspoon ground ginger
Two quarts quinine water, chilled
Three cups light rum or vodka, (optional)
Ice cubes, lime slices
In a 6-quart punch bowl mix light corn syrup and pineapple juice until well blended. Stir in ginger, quinine and rum. Add ice cubes and garnish with lime slices. Makes four quarts without liquor, makes 4 1/2 quarts with liquor or 32 1/2 cup servings.

Blueberry Luv

Two cups soft bread cubes
One tablespoon butter melted
Two eggs, well beaten
One-fourth teaspoon nutmeg
One teaspoon cinnamon
One-half cup sugar
One-half cup water to soften bread
Two cups blueberries, rinsed and drained
One-fourth cup brown sugar
One-fourth teaspoon grated lemon rind
Mix all ingredients, except blueberries, brown sugar and lemon rind. Put mixture in greased shallow 8-inch baking dish. Add blueberries. Sprinkle with brown sugar and lemon rind. Bake in 400-degree oven for 35 minutes. Serve with pitcher of milk. Makes four servings.

Stuffed Beef Roll for Holiday

Pasta parties help stretch the food dollar. In planning a menu for a large family or for a number of guests consider serving spaghetti with a different twist. Top the pasta with a stuffed beef roll — 1 1/2 pounds of ground beef makes eight servings. Top with a tomato sauce and serve with a large salad and fresh fruit for dessert.

Spaghetti With Stuffed Beef Roll

One egg
Tablespoon prepared mustard
Salt and pepper
One half cup beef bouillon
One and one-half pounds ground beef
One-half cup fine dry bread crumbs
Four carrots, halved and cooked
One and one-half cups sliced celery, cooked
One-half cup chopped parsley

Two slices bacon, diced
One-half cup chopped onion
One clove garlic, crushed
One tablespoon dark brown sugar
One-half teaspoon thyme leaves
Two cans (eight ounces each) tomato sauce
One cup water
One pound spaghetti
Two tablespoons salt
Four to six quarts boiling water

Beat egg in large bowl with mustard, 1 teaspoon salt and 1/4 teaspoon pepper. Add bouillon, beef and bread crumbs. Mix until combined. Turn onto large sheet of waxed paper. With moistened hands pat into a 14 x 10-inch rectangle. Arrange carrots and celery over the meat; sprinkle with parsley. Roll up jelly-roll fashion, peeling off waxed paper while rolling. Place seam side down in shallow roasting pan. Seal ends of roll. Bake in 350-degree oven 1 hour. Meanwhile, prepare spaghetti sauce. Brown bacon in large saucepan over medium heat; remove with slotted spoon and set aside. Add onion and garlic and saute in drippings until lightly browned. Pour off excess fat. Stir in sugar, thyme, tomato sauce, 1 cup water and bacon. Bring sauce to a boil, reduce heat and simmer 5 minutes more. Brush some of sauce over beef roll during last 10 minutes of baking period. Keep remaining sauce hot to pour over spaghetti. During last 15 minutes of baking time, cook spaghetti. Gradually add spaghetti and 2 tablespoons salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander. Serve spaghetti with sliced beef roll and sauce. (Note: Allow meat to stand 5 minutes for easier slicing.) Makes 8 servings.

Vegetable-stuffed beef roll and spaghetti serve many guests.

Colorful Bars And Pinwheels

Red and White Pinwheels

One-half cup (one stick) butter
One cup sugar
One-half cup firmly packed light brown sugar
One egg
One teaspoon vanilla extract
One tablespoon vanilla extract
One tablespoon milk
Two cups sifted all-purpose flour
One teaspoon baking powder
One-half teaspoon salt
One teaspoon red food color
One-half teaspoon peppermint extract
One-half cup finely chopped nuts Cream butter; gradually add sugars and beat until light and fluffy. Beat in egg, vanilla and milk. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together; gradually add to creamed mixture. Divide dough in half; add red food color and peppermint extract to one half. Leave other half plain. On waxed paper roll white dough to measure 18 x 8-inches. On waxed paper roll red dough to measure 16 x 8-inches. Invert waxed paper with red dough over white dough; peel off waxed paper. Sprinkle with nuts; press in slightly so they stick to red dough. Roll from long side as for jelly roll. Chill 1 hour. Cut rolls into 1/4-inch slices and place on buttered baking sheets. Bake in a preheated 400 degree oven, 8-10 minutes. Remove to wire rack to cool. Yield: approximately 5 dozen cookies.

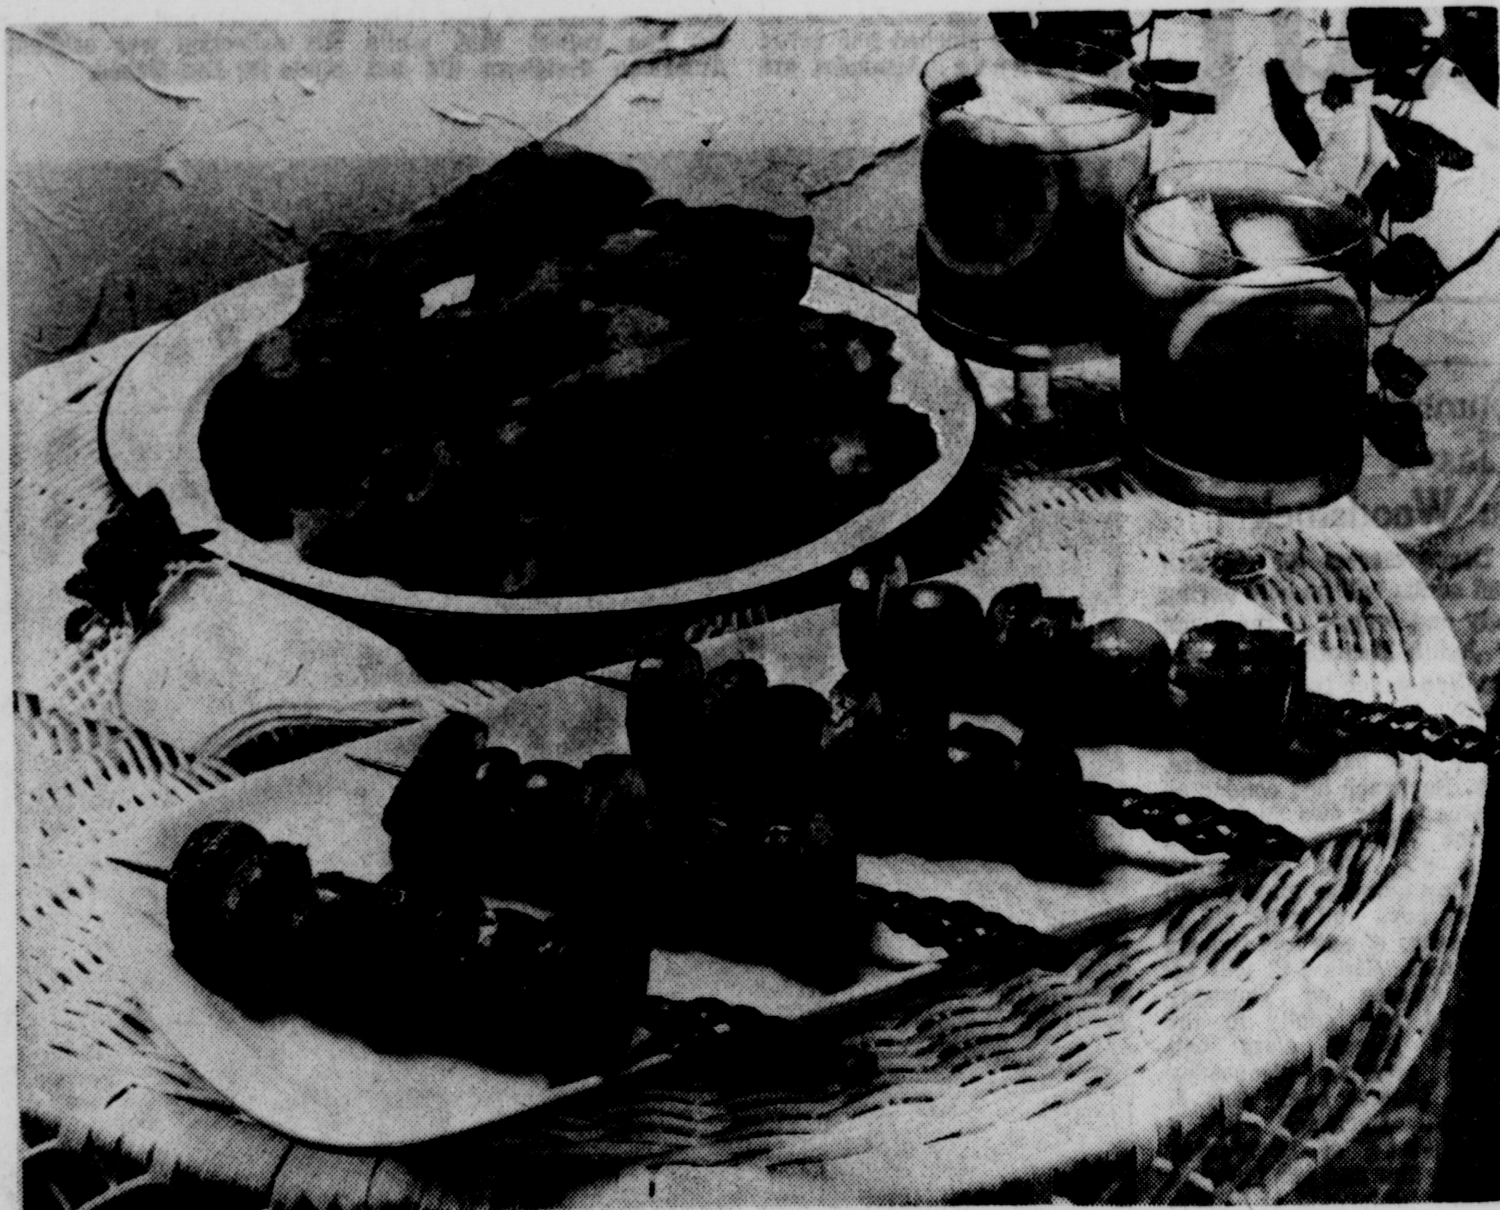

Creamy Cherry Bars

One-half cup (1 stick) butter
One-half cup firmly packed light brown sugar
One cup all-purpose flour
Two packages (Three ounces each) cream cheese
One-half cup cottage cheese
One tablespoon maraschino cherry juice
Three-quarter teaspoon almond extract
One-third cup chopped maraschino cherries
One-half cup chopped pecans
One-half cup flaked coconut

Cream butter; gradually add sugar and beat until light and fluffy. Gradually add flour. Pat dough evenly over bottom of an 8-inch square baking pan. Bake in a preheated 350 degree oven, 15-20 minutes. Meanwhile, beat cream cheese, cottage cheese, cherry juice and almond extract in a small mixing bowl until light and fluffy. Fold in cherries; spread over first layer. Combine pecans and coconut; sprinkle over cheese filling. Bake 15-20 minutes. Remove to wire rack to cool. Yield: 24.

GREAT HOLIDAY DESSERT

CURRIED RIBS AND VEGETABLE KEBOBS

Barbecue Favorites With a New Twist

Barbecues are probably one of America's best-loved institutions. Their popularity never fails!

Barbecues are easy on the hostess since the man of the house usually takes over as chief cook for the day. Equip him with a large chef's apron and all the tools. He'll be in his glory as he tends the ribs. Prepare cool salads and a light dessert ahead of time, so when guests arrive you can join the party.

One essential for a successful barbecue is a good fire. Make sure you have enough coals to last throughout the grilling period. And, don't rush the fire! Begin cooking only after the coals turn ash-gray. Once the food is on the grill, if the fire appears too slow, knock the ash off the coals with a long-handled fork or spatula. If your fire is too hot, raise the grill or move the food to the edge of the fire.

Ribs are always a favorite for outdoor cooking. Give yours a deliciously unique touch with a spirited curry sauce. The secret ingredient is applesauce. It blends so well with curry and gives a delightful fruity accent to the ribs. Blue Bonnet Margarine, the modern spread, adds rich flavor to this and all basting sauces.

Kebobs are another example of traditional barbecue fare, and these individual Vegetable Kebobs are the ideal complement for Curried Spareribs. Zucchini, mushrooms and cherry tomatoes make a pleasing combo.

Try these tempting recipes at one of your first barbecues this year. A big success is guaranteed, and the cook-out season will be off to a terrific start.

Curried Spareribs

Four pounds spareribs, about 6-inches long and cut into 2 rib pieces
One large onion, quartered.
One-half teaspoon peppercorns
Water
One tablespoon curry powder
One tablespoon minced onion
Two tablespoons margarine
Two-thirds cup applesauce
One-half cup water
Two teaspoons salt
Two tablespoons lemon juice

Combine spareribs, quartered onion and peppercorns in Dutch oven or large saucepot. Add enough water to cover. Bring to a boil over high heat. Reduce heat; simmer about 1 hour, or until ribs are fork-tender. Remove from liquid. Refrigerate until ready to grill.

In a small saucepan, saute curry powder and minced onion in margarine for one minute. Stir in applesauce, water, salt and lemon juice. Simmer mixture 5 minutes.

Arrange ribs in single layer grill about 10-inches from hot coals. Brush with part of the sauce mixture.

Grill, turning and brushing often with remaining sauce, until ribs are glazed and well-browned. Makes 4 servings.

Vegetable Kebobs

Two small zucchini, cut in one-half-inch slices
Twelve cherry tomatoes
Twelve small whole fresh mushrooms, stems removed Six (seven-inch) metal skewers
One-quarter cup (one-half stick) margarine
Two large cloves garlic, crushed
One-half teaspoon oregano leaves
One-quarter teaspoon salt
Generous dash white pepper
Cook zucchini until almost tender. Alternate 2 zucchini slices, 2 tomatoes and 2 mushrooms on each skewer. Place on broiler rack. Set aside.
Melt margarine in a small saucepan. Stir in garlic, oregano, salt and pepper. Brush on kebobs. Broil about four-inches from heat, turning once and basting, about 4 minutes per side, or until vegetables are tender. Makes six servings.

Here Come the Radiant June Brides

MRS. ROBERT WILLIAM DUBOIS
(Doralyn Kay Wike)

(Reynolds Studio)

Immanuel Lutheran Church, Kingston, was the setting for the wedding of Doralyn Kay Wike and Robert William DuBois on Saturday, June 15. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Gary L. Mehl. Charles Brand, organist, provided wedding selections.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Wike of West Hurley and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth F. DuBois of Troy.

Escorted down the aisle by her father, she selected a white gown of Chantilly lace fashioned with a high neckline and Renaissance sleeves. The flared skirt was encircled with a ruffle and featured a chapel length train. Chantilly lace bordered the cathedral length mantilla. She carried a white lace-covered prayer book with a cascade of white roses, lilies of the valley and baby's breath accented with white satin streamers tied with lilies of the valley.

Miss Valerie Bergenn of West Hurley was the maid of honor. Her white organza gown with lavender embossed flowers over white underlining had lace accenting the V-neckline and puffed sleeves and featured an apron effect. Lavender velvet ribbon outlined the Empire waistline and in the back formed a bow with long streamers. She wore a lavender picture hat and carried a colonial bouquet of lavender carnations and baby's breath.

The bridesmaid was Miss Debra DuBois of Troy, sister of the bridegroom. Her gown was identical in styling to the maid of honor's with maize accents and picture hat. Her colonial bouquet was of maize carnations and baby's breath.

James Oberlander, Amherst, Mass., was best man. Ushers were Larry O'Loane, Rochester, and James Wike, brother of the bride, West Hurley.

A reception was given at the home of the bride.

The former Miss Wike, a 1971 graduate of Ontario Central High School, is attending Syracuse University School of Journalism where she will be a senior in September. Her husband, an alumnus of Troy High School, graduated from Syracuse University in May, 1974, where he majored in photojournalism.

The couple will reside in Syracuse.

Martha VanDeman Weds Carl Scholl Jr.

Martha Gwyn VanDeman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. VanDeman of Hollywood Hills, Fla., became the bride of Karl Scholl Jr., Tampa Fla., Saturday, June 15 at St. James in the Hills Church, Hollywood, Fla. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Karl Scholl, 123 Wrenham Street, Kingston.

The Rev. Norman B. Feaster officiated at the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore her mother's wedding gown of white dotted swiss. A short veil served as her headpiece and she carried a bouquet of pink and white roses with orchids.

Betsy VanDeman of Hollywood Hills was maid of honor for her sister in a yellow dotted swiss gown. She wore a corsage of daisies.

Attendants were Barbara Reiss, Hollywood, Fla.; Janice Thompson, Jacksonville, Fla.; Carol Rosenberger, Gainesville, Fla.; Terry Roberts, Sandra Heathfield, both of Tampa, Fla. They wore alternating yellow and green dotted swiss gowns and carried baskets of daisies.

James Stevens III, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Poughkeepsie, was best man. Ushers were Peter Popejoy, Hollywood, Fla.; Thomas Lewis, Clearwater, Fla.; Trevor Elmquist, Steven Specht, Michael Ruhman, all of Tampa, Fla.

A rehearsal dinner and pre-wedding breakfast was hosted by the bridegroom's parents at Holiday Inn, Hollywood, Fla. A reception was given by the bride's parents at Hollywood Lakes Country Club.

The bride earned her BS degree this year from University of Southern Florida. She is a member of Chi Omega, Mortar Board and Delta Kappa Sororities and is listed in Who's Who in American Colleges.

Her husband, a 1971 alumnus of University of Southern Florida with a BS degree, holds the office of owlman in Chi Omega fraternity. He is employed as a dispatcher at Ploof Transport Company, Tampa, Fla.

After a wedding trip to the Bahamas, the couple will reside at 11500 Summit Boulevard, Apt. 42-B, Tampa, Fla.

Geipel-Mortensen Marriage Vows Exchanged Recently

MRS. BRADLEY T. MORTENSEN
(Linda Ellen Geipel)

(Lakeside Studio)

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Geipel of Saugerties announce the marriage of their daughter, Linda Ellen of Albany, to Bradley T. Mortensen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Mortensen of 52 Shadow Wood Way, Ballston Lake.

The Rev. Thomas Powers of St. Theresa of Avilla Church in Albany officiated at the ceremony Saturday, June 22 at St. Catherine Laboure Church, Lake Katrine. Mrs. James Sweeney provided wedding selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a polyester organza gown styled with a high neckline, Empire bodice and Camelot sleeves. Appliques of Venice lace motifs trimmed the bodice, hemline and matching chapel-length train. A Camelot cap of matching lace held her two tiered chapel-length veil. She carried a colonial nosegay of white roses, white daisies, and baby's breath accented with blue daisies.

Mrs. Rodney Chando of Kingston was matron of honor in a pale blue, polyester, semi-fitted A-line gown fashioned with a V-neckline and short sleeves. Variegated floral trim accented the neckline, bodice and cuffs. She wore a tiara of blue and yellow daisies and carried a colonial nosegay of miniature carnations, blue and yellow daisies, and pink roses.

Attendants were Barbara Mortensen, Becky Mortensen, sisters of the bridegroom, Ballston Lake; Mrs. Richard Green, Albany; Mrs. Robert Geipel, sister-in-law of the bride, Greenbelt, Md. Their gowns and tias were identical in styling to the honor attendant's and they carried nosegays of blue and yellow daisies and miniature carnations.

Ben Mortensen of Houston, Tex., was best man for his brother. Ushers were James Viscera, Boston, Mass.; David Reh'ock, New York; Robert Hansen, Montreal, Canada; Robert Geipel, brother of the bride, Greenbelt, Md.

A reception was given at Holiday Inn, Kingston. The bride, a graduate of Kingston High School and Albany Medical Center School of Nursing, is employed as head nurse at Albany Medical Center Hospital.

Her husband, an alumnus of Montville High School, Oakdale, Conn., and Northeastern University, Boston, Mass., is employed as an auditor for Continental Can Company in New York City.

After a wedding trip to the Caribbean, Mr. and Mrs. Mortensen will reside in Albany.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®

...it tells you how

Cooks who've mastered the art of baking their own whole-wheat bread soon want to graduate to waffles, biscuits, cupcakes and other recipes that call for whole-wheat flour. Sooner or later, that takes them hunting for the secret of do-it-yourself graham crackers... and here's the recipe recommended by San Francisco Examiner Food Editor Helen Civelli Brown:

Stir together two cups of whole-wheat flour, one cup enriched white flour, one teaspoon baking powder, one-half teaspoon baking soda and one-fourth teaspoon of salt.

Then cream together (until fluffy) one-half cup of shortening, one cup of packed light-brown sugar and one-half cup of granulated sugar. Add one teaspoon of vanilla extract and then blend in the flour mixture and one-half cup of milk (a little of one, then a little of the other and stir well after each addition).

Chill the dough overnight, divide it into quarters and roll each portion out on a floured surface until it forms a rectangle one-eighth-inch thick. Trim the dough into a five-by-fifteen-inch rectangle and trim that, in turn, into six rectangles measuring two and a half by five inches. Mark a line down the center of each piece of dough with a fork... and score a pattern of holes on the squares with the fork's prongs.

Bake the crackers on greased baking sheets in a preheated 350-degree oven for 10 to 12 minutes, or until they're crisp and their edges are browned. The recipe makes about two dozen double crackers.

To get seven other whole-wheat recipes and instructions for the use of a small kitchen grain mill, send 10¢ and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope to THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®, in care of this paper. Ask for Reprint No. 75, WHEAT FOR MAN.

By JOHN SHUTTLEWORTH

Last year, for the first time since U.S. and Canadian farm families started moving to the city, the rural-to-urban exodus was reversed. That is, in 1973, more individuals traded the hectic pace of big cities for the relative peace and quiet of small towns and family farms than the other way around. Probably even more folks would have done so, if they have been sure they could make a living "out there where the air is cleaner and the neighbors still say 'howdy'."

Such a worry needn't bother you, however, if you're really determined to build a better life for yourself in a small town. Self-employment opportunities are now burgeoning "in the sticks."

One old-but-new business enterprise that every small town needs these days—at least to hear Sharon and Gary Holmes tell about it—is a bicycle shop. Then again, maybe the Holmes have been prejudiced by the success of their bike store in Independence, Kansas (population 12,000).

And why is a bicycle shop a good bet for a small town? "Because," says Gary, "a bike boom is underway. In 1972, two-wheelers outsold automobiles for the first time in modern history... and someone has to market and service all those millions of machines. Besides that, it's very satisfying to be a dealer in non-polluting transportation."

"There's also a great deal of satisfaction to be derived from selling really top-quality bikes—which are usually available only from specialized shops in the big cities—to folks in the country who would otherwise be forced to purchase second-rate machines from a chain store."

According to Gary, it doesn't take a great deal of capital to launch a bike business. "Sharon and I began on $3,500 and probably could have gotten by with a little less. Whatever your initial grubstake, though, we think it's best if you don't borrow the money. Today's interest rates could easily make the difference between success and failure."

However large or small the financial foundation on which you base your new veloped empire, the Holmes advise that you pay particular attention to the location of the enterprise. Look for a town with a population of at least 10,000 and spend a little extra time, if necessary, making a favorable deal for a storefront right in the center of the business district.

"Our first building, which was small and rented for just $60 a month, was only two blocks from the main intersection in Independence. Since that's a short distance by city standards, we assumed we were 'downtown'. To the local people, however, our place was on the outskirts of the community and we had very little walk-in business until we moved to a roomier, better-located shop... which, by the way, costs us a monthly $125."

You can find wholesale suppliers of bicycles and bike accessories by thumbing through the Yellow Pages of every major city in your area (the local telephone company should have these directories in its main office...)

A few supply houses that the Holmes couple especially recommend are Gitane Pacific in Hawthorne, California; Alpine Distributors of Fort Collins, Colorado; Beacon Cycle Supply out of Milwaukee, Wisconsin and D-I-N Industries, Inc. in Mountain View, California.

If you begin a bike shop with $4000, Gary Holmes says you should set $500 aside to cover the first two months' operating expenses. Reserve another $200 for initial advertising. An investment of $1,500 to $2,000 should buy 17 to 21 medium-priced 10 speed bicycles and about $400 will purchase enough parts and accessories to put your store in operation. Keep the rest of your capital handy for the placement of the "special" order or two that just might walk in the door during the first weeks you're open.

And don't forget to allow about $100 for tools! A set of metric wrenches, some adjustable wrenches and a few screwdrivers are basic, as is the equipment for repairing bike tires. Then there are the gadgets (ask your wholesaler) made especially for removing a 10-speed's rear gear cluster, etc.

For a crash course in bike mechanics, the Holmes favor a copy of the $3.95 book, "Derrailleur 5, 10 and 15 Speed Bicycle Repair" (From XYZYX Information Corporation, 21116 Vanowen, Canoga Park, California 91303.) The also point out that some distributors hold regular repair "schools" for their dealers.

"You'll find it well worth $25 a year to belong to the National Bicycle Dealers Association, 29025 Euclid Avenue, Wickliffe, Ohio 44092," adds Gary. "Your membership will bring you a service rate book and a listing of bicycle and parts suppliers all over the United States. By all means, join!"

Sharon and Gary Holmes won't say exactly how much their bike shop pays them in money, but they're obviously happy with the business in more ways than one. "We feel that a good part of our income is measured in the satisfaction of meeting the people who ride bicycles... and in being able to work hard at something we like in quiet, peaceful surroundings."

So there you have it: a young couple who has made today's bicycle boom finance their way to the good life in a small town. Maybe the Holmes' example holds the key to your future too.

For a more complete explanation of how Sharon and Gary Holmes established their bike shop, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope to The Mother Earth News, in care of this paper. Ask for Reprint No. 179, "Small-Town Bike Shop."

Hassle Over Hazards of Aluminum Wiring for Homes by Do-It-Yourself Installers

By MARGARET DANA
(United Feature Syndicate)

With all the talk these days of the energy crisis and the barrage of leaflets for consumers on how to save electrical energy, it is astonishing how little most people really know about electricity or the wiring in their homes or work-places. Even more alarming is the growing trend toward do-it-yourself electrical repairs or installations considered "simple."

One phase of this situation is illustrated by the current hassle over aluminum wiring in electrical work. During last April the Consumer Product Safety Commission held hearings on the hazards of aluminum wiring for the home and the testimony was the most confusing batch of contradictory statements anyone could imagine.

Points brought up by some included the lack of use of good standards for installation, the unreliability of the wire fastenings at terminals, the tendency of the wire to heat and spread that heat when insulation was poor and the fact that few homeowners or tenants understood the hazardous difference between copper wire and aluminum wire.

One Fire Captain in California testified he considered it a more serious problem than smoking in bed, as a fire hazard. The mayor of a city called for a national ban on aluminum wiring for electrical installations in homes.

But then the other side testified that there was no special risk from the use of this wire — that its hazards rose from poor installation methods.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission has given the National Bureau of Standards the job of studying this situation intensively and so far their rating is "No special risk" if properly installed. The Aluminum Wiring Association agrees. And the National Association of Home Builders says that to ban aluminum house wiring would be disastrous for consumers because not enough copper is available to substitute for aluminum — and copper costs a lot more anyway.

The plain fact seems to be that unless aluminum house wiring is put in to conform with the National Electrical Code, it can create a fire hazard.

Unfortunately too many of our states, cities and towns do not have a law which meets the provisions of the Model State Law for Inspection of Electrical Installations. So there are electricians and do-it-yourselfers who figure that house wiring is simple, needing no special standards or official inspection when the work is done.

Recently I talked with L. E. LaFehr, vice president of the International Association of Electrical Inspectors. The most important point he made is that electrical inspectors should be trained and independent persons who meet the requirements of the Model Electrical Law and can make sure that all installations of electric equipment shall be reasonably safe to persons and property and in conformity with the provisions of the Model Law, etc. The one thing the informed experts are vigorously against is self-certification of an electrician.

This brings us back to the original problem — that not enough communities have this safeguard working for them. It is accepted by most electrical experts that certain types of aluminum wiring are perfectly safe and practical for outdoor wiring whether on the telephone poles or in underground trenches. Even with these, an unqualified, uninspected electrician could make a mistake which could provide a disaster.

Where do we start to correct this invisible problem?

First for all of us, wherever we live, is to find out exactly what the state, city or township requirements are for this safety, and how well the regulation is being administered.

The votes of citizens in any area have a lot of to do with the establishment of electrical safety rules and their daily use.

The State of Colorado, for example, has a law which many experts feel is a Model Electrical Law. The lawmakers in other states might do well to get a copy of this law and check out its provisions.

But the first thing to recognize and promote is the fact that unless aluminum wiring is installed in a house or building according to recommended procedures, it is a hazard.

If your house already has aluminum wiring — and many do — have a qualified electrical contractor check to see if it was installed properly and safely. If one of your switch-plates for a lamp, heater, or other appliance heats up — get that checking done fast.

I'd like to hear your experiences and opinions on this, and they will help us get one more family hazard corrected.

Timely Answers for . . . The Consumer's Question-Box

By MARGARET DANA

Q: As part of our family plan to reduce our food costs we are growing quite a lot of our vegetables. We plan to freeze some for winter use, but I cannot find directions for freezing tomatoes. Can you help?

A: The U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) April bulletin says explicitly, "Don't try to freeze raw tomatoes because they change flavor, color and texture, becoming limp and watery." Canning tomatoes or making them into a sauce which can be frozen appear to be the only ways to keep tomatoes ready for next winter.

Q: I think research and reports have been done about the safety of school buses. Where could we get a copy of such a report?

A: Two years ago the Secretary of Transportation announced Highway Safety Program Standard No. 17, "Pupil Transportation Safety," designed to protect some 20 million children who are bused to school each day. It was developed by the Department of Transportation's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration in cooperation with the states. Request a copy of the May 5, 1972 issue of Department of Transportation News or other information on the subject from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, Transportation Department, Washington, D.C. 20590.

Q: After reading your column about miniature gardens that can be made even in just a sunny window of an apartment, I am dying to learn more. We'll be in retirement soon and in a city. I have pots I can use, but I need directions. How do I go about it?

A: A minigarden for vegetables is not only fun for all ages but very productive. USDA to agricultural research plant scientists say you only need a container of some sort — a good size pot will do — some synthetic potting soil from a nursery or florist, and some fresh seeds (don't use last year's seeds.) In a 10-inch pot you can grow a miniature tomato like the "Tiny Tim" variety. Follow seed package directions, add fertilizer as advised and keep watered and in sunshine. Nature will do the rest.

Q: I am wondering if you can help me with a big problem — moisture in my home. Last winter lots and lots of moisture froze around the insides of my windows. The house is about 30 years old and I think well-built and heavily insulated. I put on new storm windows on the north and still get moisture inside. I have been keeping a dehumidifier going night and day and cannot get the humidity below 60. No one I've talked to seems to have the answer. I would appreciate any help you can give.

A: Although general standards for house construction require vapor barriers in the walls to prevent excess moisture, condensation on windows is a problem that vapor barriers will not help. Installation of storm windows will cause the inner window to be warmer and less likely to act as a condensation point. Placing exhaust fans in bathroom, laundry and cooking areas reduce water vapor and help to keep windows free of water in cold weather. Attic and cellar or crawl space ventilation will also help to prevent condensation on windows.

Q: I am interested in finding a good vocational school but don't know what questions to ask, in choosing one. Can you suggest a good guide?

A: Write for a free copy of "Guide to Choosing a Vocational School," Catalog No. 2498, from the Consumer Information Center, Public Documents Distribution Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009. It also discusses correspondence courses under the G.I. bill.

Q: My daughter's apricot tree is loaded with fruit. She does not want to can or make preserves of all of it. Where can she get directions for drying apricots in the home kitchen?

A: Drying fruit is a specialized, time-consuming process. Contact the Home Economist of your County Extension Service, listed in your telephone book government offices. Very probably the home economist can direct you to reference material and give pointers especially tailored to food processing in your area.

Q: Several of us in my community want to be independent which we retire. Even if some of us are handicapped, we would like to find ways to live at home and not in an institution. You have written often about what people can do to help themselves — can you recommend a reputable guide that offers suggestions and plans for independent old age?

A: I have just reviewed a new practical and innovative pamphlet, "After 65: Resources for Self-Reliance," by Theodore Irwin, published by the Public Affairs Committee, a non-profit educational organization. It covers many areas of outlook for the elderly, emphasizing independence and self-reliance. You will find exciting pages on opportunities to serve or work, and ideas on leisure-time learning. Facts about in-home care, meal services, senior centers, legal assistance, etc. are included. Send your request with 35 cents per booklet to: Public Affairs Pamphlets, 381 Park Ave. South, New York, N.Y. 10016.

A FORUM ABOUT MATURE WOMEN

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

What resources are open for two ladies, both in their sixties? Both are too old to work and their savings are practically gone. One cared for an elderly mother for many years; the other a sick husband.

H.H.

Dear H.H.:

Either one of these women may be entitled to social security benefits as workers or as widows, if they are 62 or older. Chances are that if they were entitled they are already receiving benefits. If they are 65 or older and without means, they may be entitled to supplemental income under the new Federal SSI program. In either case, your local social security office can help answer questions, either in person or by telephone.

If these women are without social contacts, most cities and towns have citizens centers with activities and excursions, usually sponsored through community organizations and churches. If they reside in a small community where such programs do not exist, perhaps you might take the initiative and start a program where younger parishioners reach out to help the older ones.

Separate Bedrooms

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

I recently visited an old friend I hadn't seen for many years, although we corresponded regularly. She's 58; her husband is over 65 and still employed. They married late in life and still have children at home. Their house is small and they're cramped for space. Yet I was amazed to find they sleep in separate bedrooms. Does a man that age lose interest in sex? Or can you think of another reason?

F.L.

AFFECTIONATE HUSBAND

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

Do men get silly in their later years? My husband, 68, embarrasses me by hugging and kissing our daughters-in-law whenever we see them. They feel that a peck on the cheek would suffice — that's obvious to me — my husband continues to act like Casanova. Believe me, he isn't. Is there anything more I can do so he'll get the message?

M.W.

Dear M.W.:

Apparently you have given him the message and he isn't reading it correctly. Maybe your daughters-in-law will have more success in time. You're embarrassed but they're the ones with the problem.

SMALL BUSINESS

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

We are two women, both 62, on social security. We want to start a small arts and crafts business but we can't afford to do so unless we know it will be profitable. Can you advise us?

N.W.

Dear N.W.:

You're asking for a prediction, not advice, an impossible task on the scanty information furnished. Contact the federal government's Small Business Administration (see your phone book). Your local library or crafts association — if there is one — will also be a good source of information. If there is a market for your products in the community, you may well launch a profitable enterprise. Many retired people have done so. Good luck.

SISTER-IN-LAW'S PROBLEM

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

My father-in-law is over 80 and bedridden. His daughter has let me know in a hundred different ways that she thinks I should pitch in and help her take care of him. I can't. I have a large family and my own elderly mother who is ill and needs constant attention. Is my father-in-law my responsibility?

D.Y.

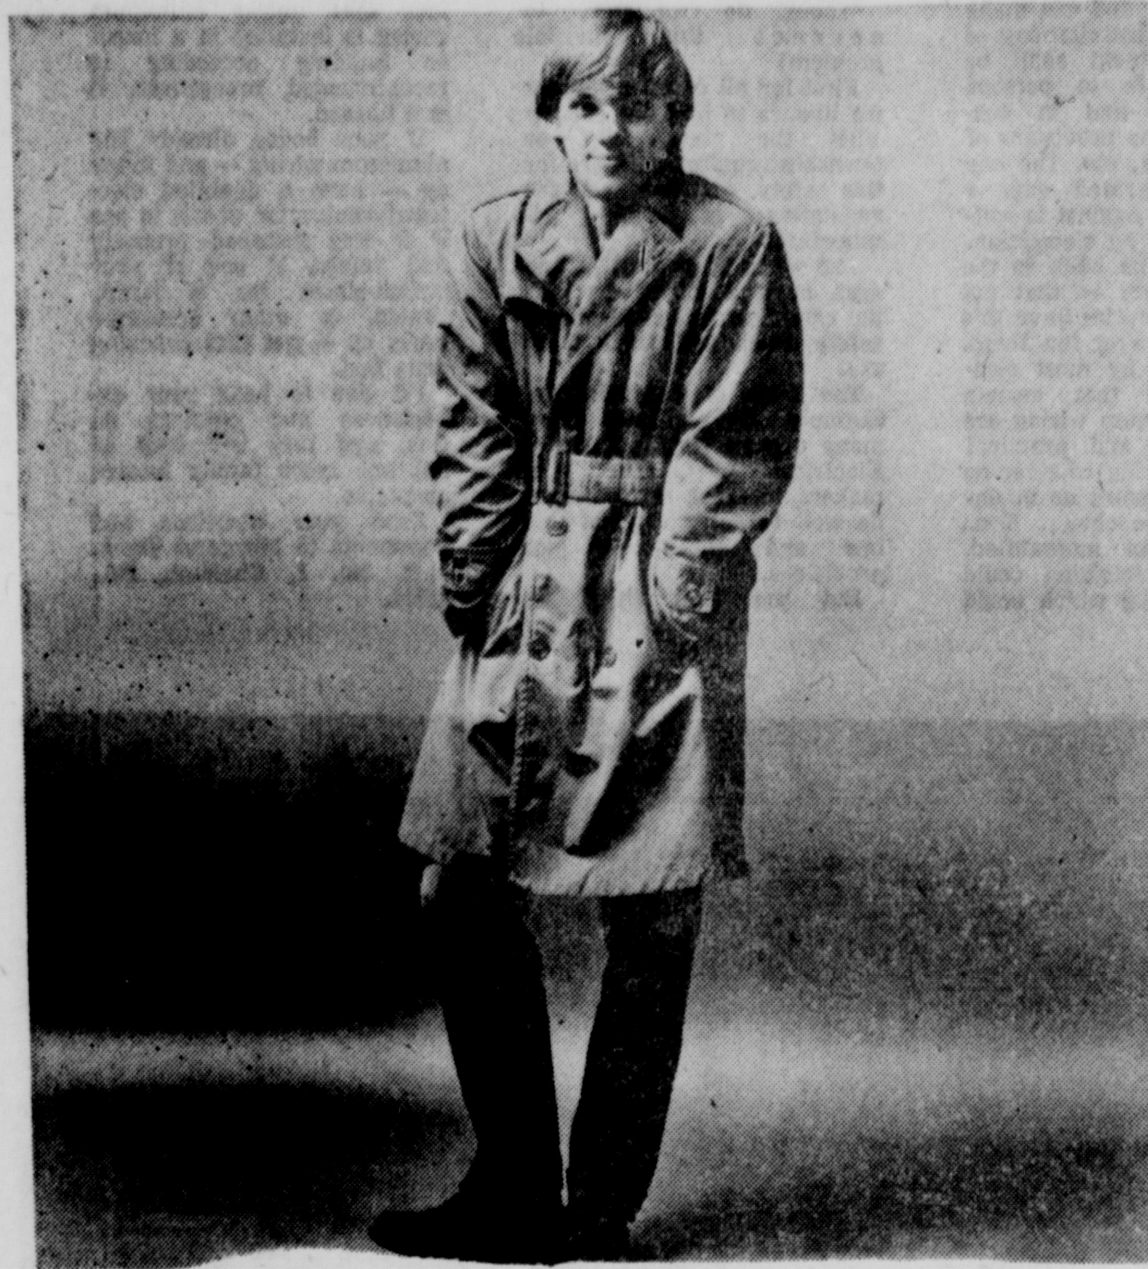

Dear D.Y.:

If you had the time to lend a hand occasionally to free your sister-in-law of her tiring duties, it would be a kindness. But you are not obligated to do so. Perhaps your husband could financially help ease the burden of caring for his bedridden father.

Have you a problem as a mature woman, or with one? For advice write Margaret Brookfield, Information Center on the Mature Woman, 515 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022.

After a Fashion

Self-Harmony, Not Success Counts for Richard Thomas

RICHARD THOMAS: AN UNTYPICAL FASHION POSE.

By MARIAN CHRISTY

NEW YORK — "French-made suits make your butt stick out," intoned waspish Richard Thomas in a markedly uninnocent, non-country-bumpkin way. The assessment of Paris designs is punctuated with a broad grin.

Outspoken Thomas, the beloved John-Boy of "The Waltons" of television fame, is a supersophisticated 22-year-old bachelor who's a devotee of London-designed clothes by Turnbull-Asser because they don't unnecessarily accentuate the derriere. Otherwise confident Thomas thinks his has to be downplayed.

Best-dressed Thomas, who has modeled for Seventeen magazine giggles at the semi-vague possibility of a Cosmopolitan nude centerfold, and insists he's not a fashionable man. "But," he adds contradictorily, "this shirt cost $50 and that's really outrageous, isn't it?" The grin is reduced to a smile of complacency. He's wearing a status symbol.

The one Thomas signature — other than the butterfly bow ties which he refuses resolutely to disguise or eradicate — is the big black mole on his left cheek. Once he auditioned for an important role and the gruff man-in-charge said the part was his if — big if — the "goddamn blemish" were removed.

"I found the suggestion positively obscene," says Thomas who hastily dashed out of the office then and, frankly, wants to drop the subject now. "It's terribly offensive to ask anyone to change himself," he says independently.

The actor's parents — Mr. and Mrs. Richard Thomas III who run the New York School of Ballet — are strict Southern Baptists who equate a healthy body with a robust spirit. The father weighs 134 pounds — a minuscule personal statistic he has held for years. For years he taught his son that a highly toned body cultivates a sharp mind. The thought is indelibly imbedded: "To feel fat, even a little fat, is to harbor lingering feelings of inadequacy," he says.

When he's home in Hollywood, balmy temperatures and a poolside lounge chair are more mesmerizing than disciplinary calisthenics: "You just sit around watching the clouds sail by and think about books you're never going to read because it's too much of an effort to hop into an auto and drive the freeway to get to a book store!" he singsongs. "Los Angeles has a subtle way of cutting down on your initiative."

Thomas's recently purchased home is an ivy-covered Tudor decorated with authentic Sheraton antique furniture, circa 1820-1840. "You've got to figure that if it lasted that long, it's made well," says Thomas who underplays the large financial investment.

The house has one fascinating quirk which reflects Thomas's own sense of being an earnest doer. Every room contains a desk. "People don't write enough," he says about the come-on. "People must sit down and write." Thomas has a book of John-Boy poetry (Avon) to be released in September. He refuses to quote a line from it. "I want to wait for its full impact," he says. It's one of those given dismissals to which should be added the fact that there's a John-Boy line of overalls in the offing.

On the beauty of poetry: "It is concentrated emotion. You've got to distill intricate harmony, rhythm and truth into a few lines. If a poem has true superiority, it is constantly revealing."

His favorite poet is Ezra Pound. A loosely translated Pound line — "I can't remember it exactly" — is that the power of money separates the bride from the bridegroom. "That's simultaneously simple and deep, isn't it?" he asks.

Obviously, Thomas — who went to Columbia University and majored in Chinese everything — is a mystic. The art he collects (mostly by Leonard Baskin) is heavy on drawings and paintings that portray famous Greek mythological figures which are half-human, half-animal.

What is the allure of such paintings? The question causes him to cringe. The immediate admonishment is pointed. "Can't you see," he says as if talking to someone blind, "that man isn't static? That there's a definable congruousness between man and beast? That man is so complex and so dependent on nature that he is inextricably a part of it?"

When Thomas was 6 years old, he starred in a road company of "Damn Yankees." His parents danced in the chorus and he belted out the song, "Ya Gotta Have Heart." The enthralled audience gave him an ovation. Superlative applause didn't startle him. On the contrary: "It was a little like getting into my first pair of long pants," he says. "Applause seemed a natural response."

On himself and his idealism: "If I lost everything tomorrow — the image, the money, everything — I'd still be wholly in tune with myself. Happiness and worldly success aren't particularly synonymous. If one is fulfilled in one's endeavor — that's very nice. But it isn't everything." The Thomas self-promise has never been put to the test but the determination is there, "just in case."

Girls pursue John-Boy with flattering regularity. One female has not become a standout in his life because: "I'm after companionship, not a wife." It's dead wrong, he says, to hunt for certain predetermined qualities in women because too many nice people are eliminated from one's sphere. "I like to be surprised," he says about potential dates. "If you look for a quiet woman, you can be sometimes very disappointed that there's no important feedback. You realize you've sort of boxed yourself in." Once in a while, Thomas says he feels strong physical attractions and: "I take a good, long, cold shower. It's very good for temptations of the flesh," he says with a grin.

Despite the exterior bravado, Thomas has had to deal with downturns and dead ends in his career. Like all other creative people who seem a channel of creativity, he has known the sting of rejection. But he never sits around and complains — that's an impetuous bungle that adds insult to injury: "It's tiresome, boring and fatiguing to listen to laments," he says. "I've been taught to buy a book and read rather than bemoan one's current fate." Thomas, a man not without ego, says his saving grace is his active brain. Ideas, concepts, fast-moving thoughts zoom through his mind with such rapidity that sometimes he imagines he's actually accomplished something he merely thought about. "I digest things mentally," he says. "And I forget about the physical part of doing."

Thomas is asked to face the question of just how much self-pride constitutes conceit? "Actually I'm very superstitious about pride," he says. "I'm gratified with my success and I have faith in my inner resources. But the word 'pride' sounds a bit snobby and complacent. Pride means you're better than everyone else. That's a self-defeating thought."

Nephew's Advances Get an 'Aunt-i' Response

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a nephew (my sister's son) who is 48, and has been divorced three times. He's always been quite a ladies' man. Very handsome, but something of a fortune-hunter. I've heard I've seen him perhaps half a dozen times in his adult life. (He lives in New York and I live in Canada.)

I lost my husband last year, and suddenly this nephew started writing me the loveliest letters. I answered each one, thinking how sweet of him to be so attentive to his old aunt.

Then came a letter saying:

"May I come and visit you? I have something important to talk to you about." I thought maybe he'd found a ladyfriend and wanted to bring her out to meet me, so I wrote back: "Don't keep me in suspense, but please give me a hint."

In his next letter came the shock of my life. He wrote, "Now I can finally confess how I feel about you. I've always thought of you as a woman — not as an aunt, but I never dared to let you know." He closed with: "I want you. I need you. I love you."

Abby, I am 71 years old.

Dear Abby

and couldn't possibly think of this nephew as anything but my sister's little boy. How can I put an end to this without insulting him outright?

DEAR AUNTIE: Tell him that you're flattered by his "confession," but you don't feel the same way about him. And if he still wants to visit you, put him up at a hotel. You don't need a handsome, fortune-hunting ladies' man as a house guest. He probably walks in his sleep.

DEAR ABBY: For years I have wanted to trace my family as far back as possible, but I don't know where to begin. My forebears came from Ireland. Do you know of any agency in the United States or in Ireland with whom I could communicate to inquire?

HOPEFUL IN BOSTON

DEAR HOPEFUL: Call yours "the luck of the Irish" — I think I can help you. My column in the Sunday News, Northern Ireland's largest circulating Sunday newspaper and one of my colleagues there specializes in tracing Irish family histories. The information you seek is available for a small fee. Write to: Family Tracing Services, 33 North Circular Rd., Belfast 15, Ireland.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 33-year-old happily married woman. I used to have a beautiful figure. (In high school I was 38-25-36.) After nursing three babies, I lost my bust. Now I have to wear a padded bra to look presentable. Nobody except my husband and a few very close friends know what I'm really like.

I wanted so much to be firm and filled out again that I made an appointment with a plastic surgeon. He explained all about silicone implants, and I can hardly wait to have it done, but something is holding me back.

Would such an operation be considered deceitful, and therefore sinful in the eyes of the Lord?

HOLDING OFF

DEAR HOLDING: Your clergyman can tell you what the ruling in your church is concerning reconstructive plastic surgery, so ask him to "fill you in" before you ask the doctor to "fill you out!"

CONFIDENTIAL TO: "GRAMMARIAN" at N.Y.U.: All right, have it your way. That picture ain't me, and it ain't I. It's a Picasso. Satisfied?

TUNBRIDGE WARE

Whenever eighteenth and nineteenth century tourists or visitors returned from a visit to Tunbridge Wells in Kent, England, they usually brought home a piece of Tunbridge Ware. This distinctive, highly decorative type of wooden ware was first produced during the closing years of the seventeenth century, and soon became popular as a gift or tourist item — much of it finding its way to North America.

The production of Tunbridge Ware required considerable skill. Highly decorative wood mosaics were made by gluing together solid blocks and slender rods of different colored woods and then sawing off a thin slice.

This cross section was then applied to various wooden articles as a veneer. Vertical and horizontal wood grains were skillfully contrasted to provide interesting and pleasing effects.

Tunbridge Ware was copied in North America. Skilled amateur and professional woodworkers alike crafted many thousands of pieces in the same tradition. Much of it is mistaken today for the original.

This unique ware turns up in antique shops, shows, auctions, bazaars and even garage sales. Prices are usually moderate, especially considering the skill and workmanship involved in producing such fine creations.

Heloise Offers Helpful Household Hints

GREASY BACON WATER

Dear Heloise:

Since I have no exhaust fan in my kitchen, I don't like to fry bacon and smell up the house. So I always put the bacon on a rack and place the rack in a pan of water and cook under the broiler. That's not new, I know . . .

But my problem was how water. After testing, I found that if I let the pan sit and cool to room temperature some of the grease would congeal and I could pour it through two thicknesses of paper toweling cupped in the sink drain.

When the water is all out of the pan, I lift the paper to weling gently, squeeze slightly and then throw the whole thing in the plastic-lined garbage can, and wipe the rest of the grease out of the pan with more towels.

Julia Switlick

Dear Heloise:

In household chores, ranked A to Z, I rate a so-so middle. But I'm perplexed, I must confess pondering this riddle.

Why do friends forget to call when my house is sparkly clean?

They only drop in, unannounced, when I'd rather not be seen!

Dear Heloise:

When you buy the 27" x 40" diapers, fold them over (in half) and stitch along the selvedge edge. They are open on the other two sides so they dry quickly, but amazingly they stay folded and save the extra "first" folding time.

Chicken cooked in the same onion oil comes out yummy!

I tried using tablets and toothpaste with no luck. Then I used baking soda and they not only felt wonderful but all stains came off.

Doing the Right Thing

By ELIZABETH L. POST

Dear Mrs. Post: I was divorced from my husband several years ago. It was a bitter divorce and we do not speak to each other, but our children have remained on good terms with him, and are also fond of his second wife.

As my ex-husband is getting on in years and is in very poor health, I would like to know whether I should be prepared to attend his funeral and also, should I go to the cemetery?

Mrs. Miller

Dear Mrs. Miller: For your children's sake if for no other reason, you should attend the funeral. You should also go to the cemetery if you are specifically invited. Otherwise, attend only the funeral service, and sit far enough away from his present wife to avoid any awkwardness which would only add to everyone's unhappiness.

Dear Mrs. Post: I have a silly question, but it has come up several times lately and I would like to know the answer.

When you go to a restaurant with a date and he stands in the line to pay the cashier, how do you go about taking some of the little mints that are offered in a bowl by the cash register? Do you ask your date to take some for you, or stand in line with him, or what?

Connie

Dear Connie: Wait close to the register as the people in front of him pay and leave. When he reaches the cashier, just step up beside him and help yourself to the mints.

Dear Mrs. Post: My niece is to be married this summer. She is being married in a Catholic church by a priest from another parish. She would like to know if it is proper to invite the priest who is marrying her to the reception, and if so, should she invite him personally, or send him a formal invitation with a response card? She would also like to know whether or not she should invite the pastor of the church, even though he will not be performing the ceremony. Should the priest or priests be invited to the rehearsal dinner?

She is also going to have photographers following her around all day. Is it proper to have place settings for them at her formal wedding dinner? Your advice would be greatly appreciated.

Mrs. E. B.

Dear Mrs. B.: It is always thoughtful to send an invitation to the clergyman who marries the couple, and your niece should, in addition, tell him that she hopes he will come to the reception after the wedding. It is not necessary to enclose a response card with his invitation. The pastor of the church need not be invited unless it is the bride's own parish and he, as its pastor, is her regular priest.

If the priest who is performing the ceremony is coming from out of town, or is a relative or close family friend, he should be invited to the rehearsal dinner. Otherwise, that is not necessary.

The photographers should not be seated with the guests, but should have a separate table where they may be served a dinner, too.

Dear Mrs. Post: Recently we attended a private party given by friends at our local country club. One of the regular club employees was on hand to assist guests in parking their cars. My husband refused to tip him, saying that it was not correct to tip employees at a private club. Incidentally, we are not members of this club. Were we right not to tip?

Mrs. Mitchell

Dear Mrs. Mitchell: Most private clubs do not expect their employees to take tips, but even so, outside guests sometimes feel that because they are not members and do not contribute to an annual bonus, they should tip. However, it is not necessary unless the fact that everyone else is tipping suggests that it is routinely done.

Members who use their club for a private party should make arrangements with the club manager to recompense regular club employees who have extra work because of the party.

Church—Change Not Collapse

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tol-

large number of American

Roman Catholics, according to a new study by the National Conference of Catholic Bishops,

"At the very least," the study said, "many would say that for a large number of Catholics,

the influence of secular society —and all that implies, for good as well as ill—counts more heavily than the influence of the Church.

But the study, prepared for American bishops in preparation for the world-wide synod of bishops this fall at the Vatican, also stressed that the church in the United States was not collapsing. The paper was presented as an overview of trends and did not include statistics.

"American Catholicism is changing, not collapsing, and while a period of change is not a time for complacency, neither is it a time for gloom," the study said.

It added that a large community still existed in the American church "for whom Catholic beliefs and attitudes do continue to hold a position of centrality."

Yet it said the emerging question for the Catholic community in the United States is whether that community will continue to derive its fundamental beliefs from Catholic Christianity "or whether its beliefs and attitudes will be drawn more and more from the secularistic, humanistic value system of the society around it."

"Many Catholics are tolerant of abortion in at least some circumstances, reject official church teaching on means of family limitation, have a divorce rate not markedly different from that of other

Americans, and regard most social issues very much as their non-Catholic countrymen do.

"It would be an exaggeration at the present time to say that such Catholics have rejected the Church," the study said, but it added that it appears

"Catholic beliefs and values no place in their lives that they did in the lives of their parents and grandparents —and may have done in their own lives in years gone by."

Slovak Pilgrimage

Slovak-speaking pilgrims will make their annual visit to the National Shrine of Our Lady of Martyrs, Auriesville, today.

This year the pilgrimage leaders are four Jesuits in exile from their native

Czechoslovakia, now under Communist rule. The three priests and one lay-brother make their home in Cambridge, Ontario, Canada, and conduct parish missions and spiritual exercises for Slovak-speaking communities throughout that country and the United States.

The Rev. Stefan Sencik, S.J., was a student at Louvain University, Belgium, when the Communists overran his homeland in 1948. The Rev. Jozef Svec, S.J., was a missionary in Zambia, Africa, for 15 years, and the Rev. Vincent Danco, S.J., served four years on the staff of Vatican Radio, Rome. Brother Jozef Hnilica, S.J., is the brother of the exiled Slovak bishop, the Most Rev. Paul Hnilica, S.J., who headed last year's pilgrimage to the Shrine.

Since none of these religious is allowed to function publicly in his own country because of Communist regulations, they are serving on the American continent.

The three priests will be available to people wishing for the sacrament of penance or for counselling in their own Slovak language, on the pilgrimage Sunday at the Shrine.

Formal religious services will begin at 2 p.m. with the Way of the Cross, followed by a procession with the Blessed Sacrament in the Coliseum, ending with the pilgrim Mass at 4:15 p.m. Father Svec will give the sermon at the Mass.

The Rev. Thomas F. Egan, S.J., Shrine director, said the pilgrims from Slovak parishes in five eastern states are making the pilgrimage. He invites non-Slovak families and groups to join this pilgrimage to demonstrate solidarity with the Christian Church behind the Iron Curtain and to pray for religious freedom in all Communist countries.

Synod Action

HEMPSTEAD

The 168th General Synod of the Reformed Church in America, meeting last week, elected the Rev. Raymond Rewerts, pastor of the Fifth Reformed Church, Grand Rapids, Michigan, as president and titular leader for the coming year. Rev. Rewerts served during the past year as vice president of Synod.

Elected vice president was the Rev. Bert Van Soest, pastor of the Pompton Lakes, N.J., Reformed Church.

In other actions, the Synod, which is the policymaking body of the 225,000-member denomination, voted to "erase existing discrimination against women" in all areas of church life, including sex stereotypes in church school materials, greater representation of women at all levels of church leadership and examination of the liturgy for sexist bias.

Pan Am and Caribbean

NEW YORK The variety of activities and contrast in cultures and life styles among eight Caribbean islands is described in a new guide called The Hilton-Pan Am Caribbean Pleasure Chest.

Available at travel agencies, the 24-page brochure presents a selection of 24 8-day-7-night vacations, each with different features included in the cost.

The differences between Barbados, Curacao, Jamaica, Caracas, Martinique, Puerto Rico and Trinidad are matched by the variety of activities available to vacationers, at the Hilton hotel in each country or island.

When the Caribbean sun begins to restore bodies battered by more northerly climes, the attractions of the islands come sharply into focus. A cricket game in Barbados may remain a mystery to Americans, but the Bajan accent of a resident explaining the concept is an experience.

Martinique has been called the French Riviera of the Caribbean and its cooking definitely reflects the French influence.

Dinner on the shore of Dunn's River in Jamaica can be arranged by the hotel, and where else but on this island may a visitor attend an English tea with a military band concert and fashion show as added attractions?

In Trinidad, duty free shopping, poolside calypso and an elevator that goes "down" to your room exemplify the range of choices offered in the Pleasure Chest brochure.

European Plan (no meals included) is available for travelers seeking complete freedom to sample local cuisine. Hilton's Modified American Guest Option Plan is available at all resorts, providing breakfast and dinner daily. If a meal is missed, the money is not lost; it is credited toward lunches, poolside cocktails, room service snacks or any other food and beverage charges in the hotel.

Combinations of stays on two islands can also be arranged. These visits are listed under Island Hoppers, in a separate section of the Pleasure Chest brochure.

Per person prices for 8-day-7-night stays, based on European plan, range from $98 at the Curacao Hilton, to $114 at the Caracas Hilton in Venezuela. Air fare is extra.

Pan Am serves the Pleasure Chest Islands from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington/Baltimore and Miami.

Hilton and Pan Am urge that travel agents be visited for copies of the brochure and help in making reservations.

Response to Area Lists

KINGSTON Information Office of Ulster County.

Responses to advertisements in travel sections of metropolitan New York magazines during the first five months of 1974 are encouraging and would indicate that Ulster County and the Mid-Hudson Valley can expect a moderately good resort business this summer and fall.

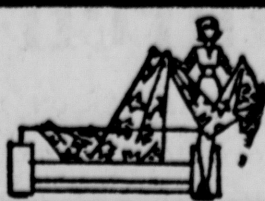

The report on prospective resort business was announced by Al Cawein, director of the Public Relations and Resort date.

The county ad in the travel section of Redbook magazine has already generated requests (without coupon). The coupon stickers which usually run into the thousands are expected to arrive any day. Redbook has 1.4 million circulation in North-eastern U.S.

The second county newspaper ad on May 12 has already generated nearly 700 requests for summer vacation information.

YARD 'N GARDEN

By Bill Meachem
Former Editor of Home Garden MagazineGETTING ROSES OFF TO A GOOD START

Our rose garden has had its ups and downs over the past fifteen years. The down years, though, were my fault, when I didn't get out early in the spring to work on the plants. Just as soon as the buds on the stems start to swell, and before they burst into leaf, is the time to prune and fertilize your roses.

Pruning roses has been one of those dark mysteries over the years, and it shouldn't be. Gardeners in the northern states don't have to worry about pruning; nature does it by killing the plant back each winter to several inches or a foot above the ground.

So, let's take our cue from nature. First, prune out all the dead branches. Then take out those that are weak and spindly that were almost killed off by freezing weather. What you have left are several thick stems that perhaps emerged last year. Cut these back to a foot or so above the ground so the last remaining bud faces out and not in toward the center. That's all there is to it.

There is another thing to look for when you have the pruning shears in hand. Check to see if there is any growth coming from below the bud union. This is the swelling you see on the main stem near the ground. Any shoots from below the union are coming from the wild rose rootstock and should be removed all the way down. If you leave these on, the wild rose will take over and you will be greatly disappointed in the flowers it produces.

Once-a-year fertilizing is sufficient for roses. This should be applied in early spring so that it will be available to the roots when the first surge of growth starts. I usually prune and feed on the same day.

There are special blends of fertilizer for roses, but any good general garden fertilizer with a 5-10-5 formula will work.

When roses start to grow it seems as if the shoots appear overnight. And within a week or so the new stems are several inches long. And just when they reach that length, invariably the aphids find them. They seem to appear faster than overnight.

Aphids are pesty and for best plant growth they should be controlled. Just spraying the affected stems is sufficient, and one of the pushbutton sprays, like Raid Rose and Flower spray, does the job.

The one disease that is also pesty is blackspot. This appears as black spots on the leaf and eventually the leaf turns yellow and dies. You can avoid blackspot by being careful when watering not to wet the foliage. Water close to the ground. This disease can start only when the foliage is wet.

With this minimum care I have roses from June until fall. Mary, my wife, cut the last flower on October 20 last fall.

Dear Bill:

My neighbor braids the foliage of daffodils after flowering. Is this the proper procedure?

Judy Fitzgerald
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Judy:

Your neighbor was well-meaning in that bulb foliage must stay on until it browns naturally to build a new bulb for next season. But tying or braiding the foliage reduces the food-building surface of the leaves and is not recommended. Just let the foliage stay on naturally until it turns brown.

On Staking
Tomatoes

ITHACA The home gardener who grows tomatoes sometimes is confronted with the problem of plants sprawled all over the garden with many fruits spoiled where they touch the soil.

The best way to avert such a predicament is to drive stakes into the ground to support the growing plants and keep the fruit off the ground.

Prof. Raymond Sheldrake Jr. of the Department of Vegetable Crops at the N.Y. State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, Cornell University, says almost any tomato variety can be trained vertically with stakes.

Growing tomatoes vertical does not necessarily mean that a home gardener should plant a climbing variety of tomato.

"I don't recommend the so-called climbing type because most such varieties are poor in shape and in fruit quality," Sheldrake stresses.

While the plant is still young, drive a stake (1 by 1 inch size or larger) into the ground about a foot deep, with five feet or more above ground.

Use one stake for each plant and set the plants 18 inches apart. Some varieties, such as New Yorker and Fireball, do not grow too tall and these can be anchored with short stakes, about 2 feet tall.

When the plant begins to grow and becomes 8 to 10 inches tall, suckers (side shoots) begin to come out of the stem at the point where each leaf is attached to the stem. Remove every side shoot as it appears until the plant reaches 16 to 18 inches in height. Then, let the plant bush out and tie the branches to the stake.

If you want the plant to go up six to eight feet tall, pinch off the suckers all the way up to the top and tie the central stem to the stake. It is no problem to get the plant this high, Sheldrake adds.

Another way to grow the plant is to allow one sucker to grow from near the base of the plant so that the plant will form a two-stemmed plant, and break off all the rest of the suckers from both stems as they develop. This is preferred to a single stem method.

A popular approach is to use a 6 by 6-inch mesh concrete reinforced wire, about five feet tall. Cut the wire and make a circle in a cylindrical shape about 18 inches in diameter. Place one "cylinder" over each plant so that the plant will grow up inside the cage.

"Growing tomatoes vertically takes up a lot less room and the method improves fruit quality and fruit ripens earlier," Sheldrake concludes.

Accent
Lights

More and more homeowners are using accent lighting to highlight walls and room accessories, says Judy Johnson, home improvement director for the manufacturer of Marlite paneling.

"When one considers the wide range of handsome woodgrained paneling being marketed today, it's no surprise that decorator-conscious homeowners are depending upon lighting to 'show off' the original beauty of paneling accessories and furniture," Ms. Johnson said.

If used creatively, accent lights can add depth to flat walls, character to an otherwise average room accessory, and emphasize a favorite furniture piece or art grouping.

"Because soft, indirect lighting helps accentuate wall paneling, select paneling that requires a minimum of maintenance and is durable," Ms. Johnson advises.

Many products, such as textured Marlite paneling, come in easy-to-install 16" x 8" planks that do not require any finishing. "A quick wipe with a damp cloth and the planks will stay as good as new," Ms. Johnson notes. The planks also are highly resistant to heat, stains or other signs of hard wear.

"Don't be hesitant to show off your handsome paneling and accessories. Accentuate the positive by putting accent lighting to work in your home!" Ms. Johnson said.

The Small Cape
Always Popular

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The small Cape never loses its popularity, especially when it contains provisions for economical future expansion. Today's feature, called "The Midville," is a basic four bedroom house, contained in an unbelievable 791 square feet of living space, a factor that assumes great importance in the matter of construction costs for the family requiring four bedrooms.

Initially, it offers a complete living unit of two bedrooms on the first level with space provided on the second floor for two additional bedrooms when the need arises.

One big economy feature is the unbroken rectangular shape of the basement wall, and the 18 inch cantilever thru the living room to provide additional floor space.

The exterior makes use of cedar shingles all around (natural or stained). The measurements of the house are 32 feet x 24 feet, with 791 square feet of living space.

Complete building plans of "The Midville" are available at the moderate cost of $15 for the first set and $12 for additional sets plus 50 cents to cover cost of postage and handling, by writing to the Associated Blueprint Co., 595 Plainfield St., Providence, R. I. 02909.

Booklets containing two bedroom ranch houses, Capes, raised ranches, Colonials, er is small, submerge it in a bucket until air bubbles stop. Seak the root ball of a container plant. Don't water it from above because the foliage will deflect some water; don't blast plants with jets of water.

The Weeder's Guide

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Some plants produce new plants from their own leaves, as demonstrated with the help of a "Living Leaf Kit" that includes material to start foliage plants, plus botanical information for school projects.

According to the kit's producer (John's Dewkist Nurseries at Appoka, Fla.), leaves from Bryophyllums, Sansevieria and Peperomias will produce plants from their leaf edges and surfaces. The kit contains three specimen leaves, plastic pots and trays, vermiculite and peat moss as the culture medium. Presprouted Sansevieria Hahnii leaves are included.

Vegetables are important sources of iron, vitamin A, vitamin C, riboflavin and carbohydrates.

Plants do not actually produce vitamin A but do produce provitamin A that is converted to vitamin A by the body. Good sources are dark green and deep yellow vegetables such as spinach, broccoli, chard, kale, turnip greens, carrots, winter squash, cantaloupes and pumpkins.

Vitamin B, according to horticulturist John A. Wett of Purdue University, is a complex of nutrients such as riboflavin (found in leafy vegetables), thiamine (found in dried peas and beans) and niacin (found in fresh peas and beans).

If you don't get enough niacin from your diet, and nervous system may be damaged. If you lack thiamine, the body cells may not get enough energy from food. Insufficient riboflavin can hurt eyes and skin.

Vitamin C sources include cantaloupes, broccoli, Brussels sprouts, raw cabbage, collards, sweet peppers, turnip greens and tomatoes. Vitamin C holds body cells together and strengthens blood vessel walls. Sunlight generates vitamin D which helps the body use calcium and phosphorus to build bones and teeth.

The fresher the vegetable the higher the nutrient content, which begins to diminish as soon as the vegetables are picked. By getting out into the sun to raise vegetables and flowers you'll be getting vitamin D just by working.

Purdue University's Agricultural Experiment Station has developed a new, orange-fleshed tomato rich in provitamin A and named Caro-Rich, touted for home garden use. It is an improvement on Caro-Red, released by Purdue in 1959. It reportedly has eight to nine times the provitamin A content of normal tomato varieties.

The unusual color will make it interesting in salads. Inquiries about seed should be directed to the Purdue University Agricultural Experiment Station, West Lafayette, Ind. 47907.

Energy Savings Possible With Home Air Conditioners

Homeowners can make a significant contribution to energy conservation in the operation of their home air conditioners this summer by setting their thermostats at the highest level of comfort instead of the 70 to 72 degree levels many of them maintained in past summers.

The Natural Bureau of Standards advises that each degree you raise the thermostat setting can save three percent in your home's energy consumption — and, of course, can reduce your electric bill.

Recent studies show that, with suitable clothing, temperatures in the 78-80 degree range may be acceptable to most dwellers in air-conditioned homes, NBS reports.

If in past summers you set your thermostat at 72 degrees, raising it to 80 degrees this summer may reduce energy consumption by 24 per cent. Even raising your thermostat from 74 degrees to 78 degrees can produce a 12 per cent energy saving — a substantial conservation step, the Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute reports.

The thermostat may even be raised a degree or two higher, particularly when outside temperatures reach the mid-and-high-nineties, if the inside humidity is kept at a reasonably low level, as a properly-sized and certified residential air conditioner should maintain it, the Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute says. If the unit is too large, it will cool the house too quickly and cut off before it has dehumidified the inside air.

For most accurate control, the thermostat should be located in an area where air circulation is good and where it won't pick up heat from appliances — lamps, TV sets, and similar heat-producing equipment. It should be mounted on an inside wall away from direct sunlight and from doors that are opened to the outside. Also, be sure that it is mounted level.

Your thermostat should be cleaned at least once a year by removing its protective cover and gently blowing accumulated dust off the mechanism, ARI says.

ARI, which conducts an industry-wide program of certification of central air conditioners, says that more than 95 per cent of units produced in the U.S. are listed by model number, capacity and energy input in its semi-annual directory of certified equipment, distributed to air-conditioning contractors.

Peppers and Egg Plants Are Very Close Relatives

Peppers and eggplant are both food vegetables for most home gardeners to include in their growing conditions, and give worthwhile yields for the kitchen table.

The most widely grown peppers are the sweet bell peppers which develop large green fruits that turn red when fully ripe. It's possible to pick the fruit at the green or red stage, but don't let them stay red too long as they soon deteriorate after ripening. Golden yellow bell pepper are also available.

Chili peppers are the hot kind, and Red Cayenne is one of the popular varieties. They are smaller than the bell peppers, turning from green to red, and forming long slender fruits.

Both peppers and eggplant grow busy and compact, occupying very little space for the yields they give. For this reason they are ideal subjects for growing in containers, or mini-gardens. A sunny location is necessary, and a light, rich soil. They need 65 to 80 days from transplanting to form fruit and they thrive during the hot humid conditions of American summers.

When harvesting, use scissors or pruning shears to separate the fruit from the plant, since the branches are brittle and may break if pulled. Pods of the hot peppers dry easily, and can be strung together to make decorations for fall and Christmas.

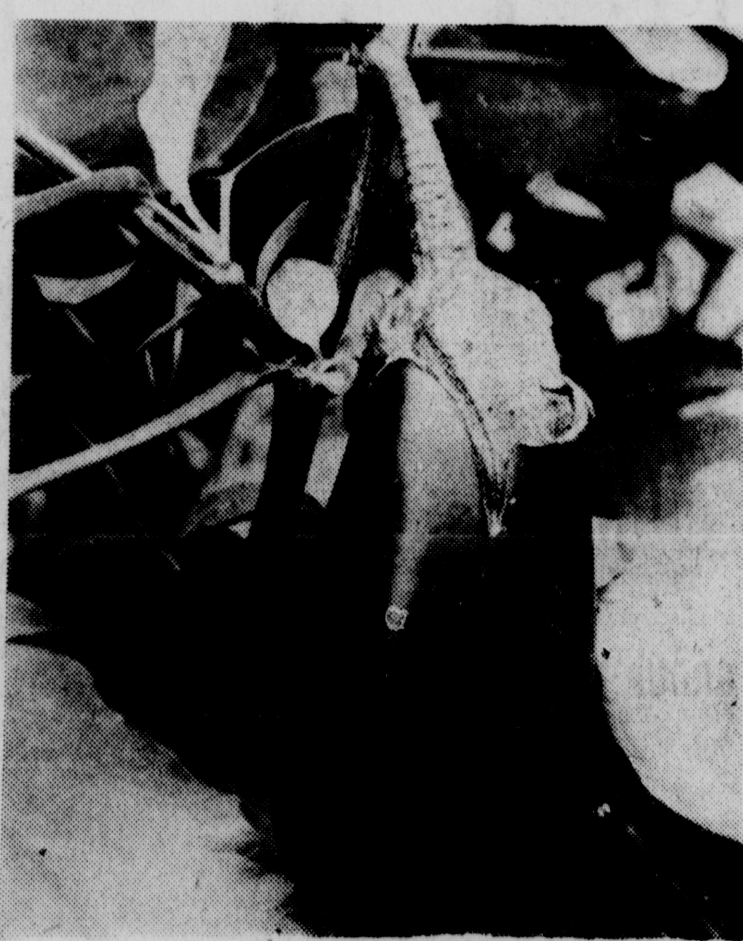

Eggplants mature into large pear-shaped purplish black fruits, creamy white on the inside. One fruit is often enough to serve four people, and there are several interesting ways to serve it. One is to chop into "sticks," then fry in a bread-crumbs batter until golden. Another is to slice into circles and cook in a casserole with chopped nuts, cheese and tomatoes.

Both peppers and eggplants are easily grown in containers, and they require no staking, since they form sturdy bushy plants that are highly ornamental. Plant outdoors after all danger of frost in a sunny location at least 1½ ft. apart in rows 2 ft. apart. Foot-high plants make the best transplant.

WELCOME CHANGE—Golden yellow peppers make a welcome change from the usual red kinds, and they taste just as good. In other photo, typical eggplant fruit is ready for picking.

New Catalog Of Paper $$

By MORT REED

With the publication of a new work, a new word will be added to the American language dictionary — Synographics. "Syn" from the Greek meaning "with" or "together," "graphie" also from the Greek meaning "writing" and the Latin "grapha," a bond or promissory note.

Synographics, therefore, means the bringing together of bonds and written things. A science separate and apart from numismatics and philately, as demonstrated by Gene Hessler's new book, "The Comprehensive Catalog of U.S. Paper Money." Published by Henry Regnery Company, 114 W. Illinois Street, Chicago, Ill., 60610.

The new word was coined by the Rev. Richard Doyle, chairman of the Department of Classical Languages at Fordham University in New York at the request of the author. It was presented before members of the numismatic community, journalists from the various hobby publications, dictionary editors and heads of English and classical language departments of various universities.

Until now, the science of paper money was categorized as a part of the study of numismatics and a branch of philately. But with the adoption of synographics, paper currency falls under an entirely new classification and collectors from here on will be known as "synographers."

Hessler's new book covers every issue of paper currency ever circulated in the United States, including fractional currency; errors and misprints; military certificates and enclosed postage stamps. It also includes a very comprehensive coverage of special currency issues from Alaska, Hawaii and the Philippines.

The author has carefully provided a rarity scale where rarity affects the value, plus the established market values on each note in Fine, Very Fine, Extra Fine and New Condition.

The book with its 400-plus black and white illustrations is very well written and should prove to be the leading guide for readers interested in paper obligations of the United States.

Thousands of requests for the Free Twenty Top Value Dollar List completely exhausted our supply in spite of the fact that single copies were sent to everyone requesting two or more.

The Treasury has made no decision on whether to reprint and issue a new $2 bill. According to Alan B. Wade, Public Affairs Special Assistant, "A two-dollar bill would cut government printing costs, assuming there was general acceptance of these bills, but there is no strong evidence now that it would be used in general circulation."

A spokesman for Com World has learned, however, that Federal Reserve governors have authorized a survey to see whether there is enough demand to warrant issuing $2 notes again. Now that the $2 bill has lost its buying power, it just may be discovered that we do need such a denomination.

The writer has it on good authority that the Bureau of Engraving and Printing has anticipated the new Treasury move and engravings for a $2 bill are indeed underway, just in case.

Israeli Stamps Honor Artists

AP Newsfeatures By SID KRONISH

The works of three noted Jewish artists appear on a new trio of stamps issued by Israel. Each stamp bears an illustration of the item. The tab, usually attached to Israeli adhesives, indicates the name of the painting or sculpture as well as its present location.

The lowest value stamp reproduces the "Woman in Blue" by Moise Kisling, Polish-born but a long time resident of Paris. The next value shows the sculpture "Mother and Child" by Chana Orloff, born in the Ukraine but who later worked in Jaffa and Paris. She died in Tel Aviv on her 80th birthday.

The highest value depicts "Girl in Blue" by Chaim Soutine, most famous of the three, who was born in Minsk but became a star of the School of Paris along with such friends as Modigliani and Chagall.

All three works now appear in different museums in Israel, according to the Israel Philatelic Agency in America. The new stamps are available at your local stamp dealer.

The Israel postal department also reported that the most popular of its recent issues has been the three stamps showing children's drawings. This set was issued in January 1973. Would you like to enter a first-day-cover guessing contest?

Well, the American First Day Cover Society is conducting such a contest in connection with the block of four Continental Congress stamps to be issued July 4 in Philadelphia.

Through the cooperation of the United States Postal Service, the person coming closest to naming the official figure for the number of first-day covers serviced will receive a special Presentation Album.

Collectors can enter the contest by writing their name, address and the estimate on a post card. Enter as often as you like, with one guess per card. Send entries to: FDC Guessing Contest, 12 School St., Plymouth, N.H. 03274. The cards must be postmarked no later than July 4.

A unique Israeli cover was offered at the recent auction, June 15, of the Philatelic Center, Lexington Ave.

The cover was prepared by a member of the Israeli Olympic Team upon departure from Lod Airport Aug. 21, 1972, en route to Munich. In Munich, the West German Olympic Souvenir sheet was added and also canceled. The cover was autographed by the entire Israeli Olympic team, including those who were later assassinated by Arab terrorists.

There is a sworn affidavit as to the uniqueness by the creator of the cover.

First-day cachet collectors can obtain four separate covers with a full-color illustration of a different dramatic incident leading up to the American Revolution and a memorable quote from one of our Founding Fathers plus the new stamp. They are being released by the International Stamp Collectors Society.

One cover depicts the British Revenue stamp that sparked the Revolution and a quote from Abigail Adams, wife of John Adams. Another pictures the Boston Tea Party with a quote by John Hancock. A third shows a portion of a print by Paul Revere portraying the Boston Massacre with a quote from Revere. The fourth reproduces the sinking of a British war ship by American colonials in 1772 with a quote from Thomas Paine.

The set of four is available for $3.95 from: July 4 Covers, International Stamp Collectors Society, P.O. Box 48806, Los Angeles Calif. 90048.

Collectors of British stamps will welcome a new catalog, "Great Britain King Edward VII to King George VI, Volume 2," by Gibbons. This is a specialized catalog of all postage paper issued during the four reigns of that period. It includes booklets, controls, cylinder numbers, perforation types and marginal markings.

There are 243 pages. It can be purchased at your local stamp dealer or directly from their U.S. office, Stanley Gibbons Ltd., P.O. Box 596, Hemstead, N.Y. 11511, for $10 postpaid.

If you are interested in collecting United Nations stamps, you may deal directly with the United Nations Postal Administration in New York.

emational play is to lay down the ace. This wins 83 per cent of the time since it only loses two tricks: if East holds K J x or K J x x.

It also loses two tricks today. But the really expert play, as used by experts against players not good enough to play low from king-small, is to lead low toward dummy with the intention to play the nine if West plays low and finessing against the king if the nine loses to the jack.

This play only succeeds 80 per cent of the time against a man good enough to duck with king-small, but it works 94 per cent of the time against ordinary bridge players.

Of course justice doesn't always triumph. The best mathematical play is a loser today. Almost all other plays work. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Click and Presto Human Interest Scene

By IRVING DESFOR

AP Newsfeatures

After returned from a quick 10-day trip to the Soviet Union, there was a persuasive reason for once again looking at portfolios of pictures of the Russian scene by the top photo journalist, Henri Cartier-Bresson. They had appeared in Popular Photography's May issue and Photo World's April issue. Both portfolios by the way, are selections from his new book, "About Russia," published by Viking Press, N.Y.

Now I'm more impressed than ever with Cartier-Bresson's instinctive ability to frame a human interest scene precisely and preserve it with an intuitive click! at the "decisive moment." His perceptive vision and accurately timed trigger of pictures caught on city streets and rural roads in university classrooms and industrial plants, in the bustle of a May Day parade and the public privacy of a sunbather standing beside a fortress wall.

Studying his pictures, I sought clues that might help improve my picture taking and that of other photo fans on trips to other countries or a new environment. We're not likely to become facsimile Cartier-Bressons but we may achieve a higher consistency of successful pictures if we follow his pattern. I recalled our meeting and a street-side interview years ago while strolling around Rockefeller Center.

His dress is that of anonymity — nothing to mark him as a tourist or a stranger to that area. His manner is self-effacing and inoffensive. Just an interested but casual bystander. His camera, too, is inconspicuous, a small rangefinder Leica, completely black, usually hidden under his coat or jacket. There is no chrome to reflect from the camera and no gadget bag to announce the presence of a photographer. Spare film and an extra lens, if likely to be needed, are carried in his pockets.

He prefers to wander around, outwardly casual, but keenly observant, watching for the right combination of subject activity, background, lighting and camera angle that add up to a complete picture. When the scene clicks, the raising of the camera, checking and shooting are minimal. If you were not looking for it, you might not notice it.

How does that compare with my picture-taking department? From the sublime to the ridiculous, I must admit. I must be a caricature of the "typical American tourist."

stagger around with a loaded gadget bag and have at least two gleaming cameras around my neck and, at times, the twisting straps are strangling me.

I do try to get pictures of people in natural action but it's a lot harder to ignore my presence. They must be so absorbed in what they're doing that they're oblivious to everything else anyway or else I use a telephoto lens and keep at a distance. I'm also prepared to follow up a first picture with a second shot after people relax, thinking the photo has already been taken. It's good strategy.

I use two cameras because I want color slides as well as black-and-white pictures of our experiences. And the cameras announce their gleaming chrome presence because it costs more to have them dressed in basic black. It's a cockeyed world when a camera in plain black is more expensive than one with ornamental chrome.

One of the greatest drawbacks to better picture taking by myself and other photo fans is our hurry-up travel trips. We're always on a one, two or three-week tour . . . to explore three or six or 10 different cities . . . with the bus or tour conductor on a tight schedule with no allowance for unexpected picture situations which may arise . . . nor for inclement weather.

I note with envy that Cartier-Bresson spent three months in the U.S.S.R. to get his pictures. You know, that fact is a great safety valve for the rest of us. It gives each of us a chance to say, "If I had three months in a country, I'd get great pictures too!"

But when I plan my next trip, it's going to be for the usual two or three weeks. I'm taking no chances on spending three months on a vacation trip only to discover my pictures still don't have the Henri Cartier-Bresson vision, timing and touch!

TEEN SCENE: The Start of the Sting Song Story

By LEI

Can anyone think of the first name of a performer behind several songs high on the pop charts right now — a performer who did much to promote the "black" sound in song, but died tragically at the height of musical achievement? A performer with the last name of Joplin?

His song has been on the hit list on this page for weeks, and last week it was number one. It was, according to some, the high point of "The Sting," and to most of us, it is just "The Theme From The Sting." The real name of it, is, of course, "The Entertainer." It was first published in 1902 by a man named Joplin. A black musician, songwriter and composer named Scott Joplin who revolutionized American music, and yet died at 48, still virtually unknown. The triumph of his story is that he accomplished as much as he did. The irony is that he never achieved what he was capable of. The triumph is that almost 60 years after his death, people still groove their heads out on his music. The tragedy is that they do not know that it is the music of Scott Joplin, or how much American music owes the man.

Scott Joplin was born in 1868 in the strange little town of Texarkana, which sits on the Texas-Arkansas border. His father was Giles Joplin, a violin player and former slave; his mother was Florence Givens Joplin, a banjo player. Music was a solid part of the Joplin family, and each of the children soon learned to play some instrument. Scott was first drawn to the guitar and bugle, but when he was seven he discovered the piano.

Within a year, he was discovering what could be done on the piano. Within four years he was discovering things nobody had discovered until then. He began—not yet in his teens—translating the rhythms of his heritage into music for the piano.

His talents came to the attention of a German music teacher who taught the talented boy everything he knew about classical music—the work of the great composers, and especially about his favorite musical form, the opera. Young Scott was not only enthralled, but inspired. It set the stage at once for his greatest achievements—and his eventual crushing disappointments.

Scott's teacher never pointed out to him that all those great symphonies, those stirring operas, had been composed by men with white skins. Giles Joplin was probably not as kind. In any case, shortly after his mother died, Scott Joplin left home after a row with his father over his learning a useful trade. It was 1882, and Scott was fourteen years old.

He started learning, and his school was the tawdry honky-tonk world of the still frontier Southwest, where piano players were much in demand in barrooms, bordellos, and traveling vaudeville shows. As he wandered from job to job, young Scott Joplin shared keyboards and beers and jokes with some of the best and most inventive musicians of the day. There was a heady new music being pounded out on those splintered old pianos, and it didn't even have a proper name yet, but in ten years it would be known as "ragtime." Within twenty years it would be a scandal equal to streaking or Alice Cooper today—"popular" but not "acceptable."

Then, as now, music ascended above barriers that still divided the rest of society. The musicians that Scott Joplin hung out with in the bawdy districts of five states, were both black and white, working together as naturally as the black and white keys on a piano. Unfortunately, that was only a very small part of society.

Even teenagers could remember when there was still slavery. A black man still could not eat in a white restaurant, ride public transportation, or even walk safely in many white neighborhoods. Only in the ill-famed parts of town was there equality. The thriving music coming out of these neighborhoods was given a mocking and derogatory name by polite society—it was "rag-time." Rag-time was one of the hits of the Chicago World's Fair, but only those who visited the red-light district that sprang up around the Fair heard it. Scott Joplin was there, by now a major light in the ragtime piano world.

In those days, before a song could become a hit, it had to be published. The recording industry was still in its infancy and the sheet music published determined the popular music of the day. Scott Joplin was, at this time writing music—some of it good, some of it mediocre pot-boilers—but none of it was getting published.

In 1869 he got his first two compositions published, but neither of them were similar to the music that later made him well-known. Not until a white performer, Benjamin Robertson Harney introduced ragtime in white society did it catch on. In 1897, a year later, a friend of Joplin's, Tom Turpin, became the first black to publish ragtime music. And in 1899, Scott Joplin had his first two ragtime songs published—"Original Rag" and "Maple Leaf Rag," the latter which was his most notable piece until "The Entertainer" became a movie score 75 years later.

RVHS HONORS—National Honor Society installation ceremonies at Rondout Valley High School recently had a very special significance. Not only were outstanding students tapped for the honor but Mrs. Gloria Starling, administrative assistant was made honorary member of the RVHS chapter.

Youth in the News Salutes

Year-end recognition and elections for posts to be assumed in the fall are a part of Youth in the News campus report this week.

Geoffrey Taylor, a member of the Kingston High School Class of '72 has been elected a trustee at Union College, Schenectady. While at Kingston High School he was a member of the National Honor Society as well as ski and tennis teams.

Taylor is completing his second year at Union where he is majoring in political science. He is a resident advisor and news editor of the college newspaper. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. William C. Taylor of 7 Michaelangelo Street, Latham.

His father, a former commissioner of Public Health for Ulster County is medical director of Samaritan Hospital, Troy.

Julie Lisbeth Paige, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Paige of 24 Savoy Street, Kingston was elected finance chairman of the Student Council.

Julie, a junior majoring in elementary education, is specializing in early childhood education and the teaching of reading. She is secretary of the Emerald Key Honor Society and a member of the Lord Newark Honor Society.

Alan F. DeForest, Class of '75 was promoted to first lieutenant and Thomas H. Cornish, Class of '77 was promoted to corporal.

DeForest is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harlow DeForest of 126 Arnold Drive, Kingston and Cornish is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison C. Cornish of 242 Broadway, Port Ewen.

Joseph J. Carbonaro, 7 Oak Road, Beacon, is the recipient of a five-year scholarship to Northeastern University in Boston, where he will study under the school's cooperative five-year power systems engineering program.

Carbonaro, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Carbonaro, is a member of the graduating class at Beacon High School.

William P. Kostenko of Doran Drive, Hopewell Junction, and Albert McElroy, of Route 208, Campbell Hall, won scholarships the utility awards annually to community college

Also, Alexander Golan of 1 Whitney Drive Woodstock, so assumed in the fall are a part of the dean's list. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Golan of 23 Elm Street, Ellenville, physical education and Deborah C. Logan, 9 White Lane, Woodstock, French.

Ward T. Hobert of Schuler Lane, Lake Katrine achieved a perfect average to be named to the dean's list at Lehigh University for the spring semester.

Two Kingston area residents have been named to the Spring Dean's List at Ithaca College for the School of Allied Health.

To earn Dean's List honors at Ithaca, a student must rank in the top ten per cent of the academic listing for his School or College Division.

The area resident are Sandra Malek of Shokan and Lois Rothkopf of Ellenville.

Summer Job Data Reviewed

School-age youths taking care and kindergarten workers, summer jobs should know about the protection of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) popularly known as the minimum wage law, Frank B. Mercurio, the U.S. Department of Labor's assistant regional director for employment standards said today.

According to Mercurio, the minimum wage differs for three different groups of workers, and summer employees are found in all three groups:

Nonagricultural employees covered by the Act prior to the 1966 amendments must receive a minimum of $2 an hour; these employees include workers in manufacturing, processing and distribution establishments, in large gasoline service stations, and in many retail and service businesses, and others.

Nonagricultural employees covered by amendments passed in 1966 and later must be paid at least $1.90 an hour; these include those workers in elementary schools and colleges, hospitals and nursing homes, laundries and dry cleaning establishments, day

There are certain exemptions to the minimum wage and overtime requirements. Some of these exemptions will be changing over the next few years. Among those in effect this summer, and of particular interest to school-age youths, are the following:

• Employees of retail and service establishments which gross less than $250,000 a year are exempt for both the minimum wage and overtime pay requirements. Included in the exempt category are motion picture theaters and bowling alleys which gross less than $250,000 annually.

• Food service and catering employees in retail or service establishments covered by the law must be paid a minimum wage, but overtime is required only after a 48-hour workweek.

• Hotel, motel and restaurant workers in covered establishments, including maids and custodial workers, are presently subject to a 48-hour overtime standard.

• Workers in certain seasonal amusement or recreation establishments are exempt from the minimum wage and overtime provisions. Employees of private summer camps are included in this category.

• Employees of motion picture theaters covered by the FLSA must be paid the minimum wage, but they are exempt from overtime payments. Employees of covered bowling alleys should be paid the minimum wage and overtime after 48-hour workweek.

Younger students looking for summer jobs should know that the child labor law prohibits certain work under specified ages. Generally, employees must be 16 years of age.

However, at any age youth may deliver newspapers; act or perform in motion picture, theatrical, radio or television productions; work for their parents on a home farm.

Also, 12- and 13-year olds may work outside of such school hours on any farm where their parents are employed or with written parental consent, and minors 14 years of age and older may be employed generally in agriculture outside of such school hours. However, if the agricultural work has been declared hazardous by the Secretary of Labor, employees must be 16 years old.

Youths who are 14 and 15 may be employed in most office and clerical jobs and may hold a variety of retail, food service and gasoline service jobs. Among them are cashing, selling, price marking and tagging; assembling orders; packing and shelving; bagging and carrying out of orders; kitchen and cleanup work; cleaning vegetables and fruits; wrapping, sealing, labeling, pricing and stocking goods; washing and polishing cars; operating gasoline pumps and performing other courtesy service.

No one under 16 may be employed in a non-agricultural occupation more than 40 hours in any one week when school is not in session. Nor may he or she work later than 9 p.m. from June 1 through Labor Day. During the school year, working hours outside of school are more limited.

Workers must be 18 to work in non-agricultural occupations declared hazardous by the Secretary of Labor.

Employers are required to obtain proof of age in accordance with the Secretary's regulations. Any person who violates the child labor provisions or any regulation thereof shall be subject to a civil penalty not to exceed $1,000 for each violation.

Special lower minimum wages are permitted for students in certain cases. An employer who wants to hire full-time students under this provision must apply for special certificates issued by the Secretary of Labor.

Further questions and requests for guidance should be referred to the nearest office of the Wage and Hour Division, listed in the telephone directory under the U.S. Department of Labor heading in the U.S. Government listings.

Cheers, Twirls Clinics

The 14th annual Baton Twirling and Cheerleading Clinic will be held this year July 15 through 18 at State University of New York at Delhi.

A big open NBTA Baton Twirling and TCA Cheerleading contest will be held July 19 with medals, ribbons and trophies to be awarded.

The clinic is conducted by Mary Evelyn Thurman and is sanctioned by the National Baton Twirling Association and TCA.

Registration is open to all ages from beginner to most advanced. A division especially designed for grade and junior high students will be offered again this year.

Further information may be obtained by contacting Dr. Charles Albert at Delhi College. The National Baton Twirling and Cheerleading Clinics are headquartered at Box 21, New Albany, Ind. 47150.

Woodstock Playhouse Scores a Coup with d'Amboise

Jacques d'Amboise, born in Massachusetts and reared in New York, became a permanent member of the New York City Ballet at fifteen and a principal dancer in 1953. He originated roles in many George Balanchine ballets and is internationally acclaimed for his APOLLO interpretation.

He has danced in a Broadway musical, in films, on television, at leading opera houses here and abroad, in international and regional festivals, and with many symphony orchestras. In addition, he directed several musicals and choreographed "Irish Fantasy" and "Tchaikovsky Suite" for the New York City Ballet. Audiences across the U.S. know him from his performances at Saratoga Performing Arts Center, the Merriweather Post Pavilion, Garden State Music Center, and the Aspen Music Festival.

In persuading so noted a dancer and such a world renowned ballet soloist to perform on its stage, the Woodstock Playhouse has scored a theatrical coup under brand new owner Harris Gordon. Jacques d'Amboise is expected to present his BALLET ENCOUNTER program before a sell-out audience tomorrow evening, Monday, July 1 at the art colony theatre. And the acclaim that has followed him from Leningrad to New York City should shake the rafters of the 37-year-old Playhouse as they have seldom reverberated over those many years.

In his 25th year as a dancer, d'Amboise has spent most of his lifetime in the theatre. He began to study ballet when he was eight and made his stage debut, with Ballet Society, at age eleven; when he was fifteen he was already a permanent member of the New York City Ballet, and was made a principal dancer in 1953. Today, as the senior premier, his association with his company is of a nature known mostly in foreign ballet traditions.

He will tell you straight out that he is a George Balanchine disciple and that, to him, Balanchine is the world's best choreographer.

He is known by his colleagues as one of the most disciplined performers in the theatre — one who works at an extraordinary pitch and over hours that would fell a bricklayer.

He is also credited with doing more than any other dancer to eliminate the poor opinion many people once had of male ballet dancers. After seeing him star so virilely and lucratively in such movies as Seven Brides for Seven Brothers, Carousel, and The Best Things in Life Are Free, parents everywhere began sending their boys to take ballet lessons instead of sending them off to military school.

As much as he impressed in films, he impresses even more alive, onstage. He appears bigger than life — because of his bigness, exuberance, wide, infectious smile that is almost a grin, virile handsomeness and glorious interpretation of his roles.

When he isn't dancing, he loves to teach; began a boys' class at the School of American Ballet, with his own two boys in it. Also the father of two girls, he is a sportsman in his leisure; is proud of his prowess as a fisherman.

A ballet danseur who looks more like a lumberjack off-stage when he wanders the wintry streets of New York in a knitted stocking cap and a thick jacket, he is the best "Apollo" of his day onstage — a man who sustains a sense of wonder in the magical world of ballet.

And he will prove it again tomorrow night at the Woodstock Playhouse. If the performance is not already sold out at this writing, TEMPO readers still might be lucky enough to secure tickets by calling the box office at 679-2015. Season ticket subscriptions do not cover this very special solo performance. (By TOBIE GEERTSEMA)

The Glorious Fourth Has Always Been Gala But Very Few People 'Were Respectable' At First Celebration

The first July 4 celebrations set a pattern that has made the Fourth glorious ever since.

Parades, fireworks, speeches, band music, and general jubilation marked the early observances.

On July 8, 1776, a large crowd of Philadelphians gathered in Independence Square to listen to John Nixon read the Declaration of Independence, adopted four days before. Nixon stood on a platform that the American Philosophical Society had erected a few years earlier to observe the transit of Venus.

Charles Biddle, of the famous Philadelphia Biddles, said of the first Fourth: "There were few respectable persons present."

John Adams, however, was more enthusiastic. He wrote: "Three cheers rended the welkin. The battalions paraded on the Common and gave us the feu de joie (salute), notwithstanding the scarcity of powder. The bells rang all day and almost all night."

Next year, two days before July 4, it occurred to the Continental Congress that something should be done about the first anniversary of the Declaration. Arrangements were quickly made to adjourn Congress for the day, and hold a special dinner in Philadelphia.

In a letter to his daughter, John Adams described the festivities: Bells rang all day, there were bonfires in the streets, and

A captured Hessian band furnished the music for the special dinner, served at 3 p.m. in a city tavern. Between elaborate toasts, a company of soldiers paraded.

Taking a stroll that evening, Adams "was surprised to find the whole city lighting up candles at the windows. I walked most of the evening and I think it was the most splendid illumination I ever saw; a few surly houses were dark but the lights were very universal."

The dark houses presumably belonged to royalists. Later in the evening, some of the unlighted windows were broken by patriots.

In 1788, Philadelphia again celebrated the Fourth and also the recent ratification of the Constitution with a three-hour parade. A carriage in the shape of an eagle carried the Constitution, which was framed and fixed on a staff crowned with a liberty cap. The words "The People" were written in gold letters on the staff.

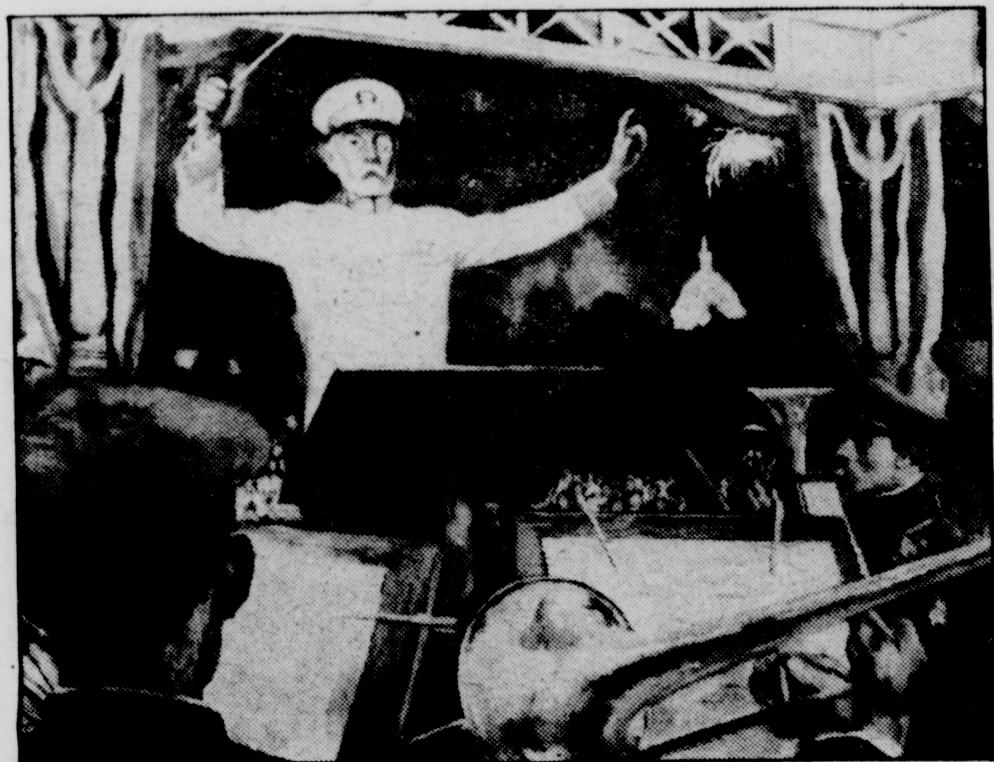

During the next 25 years, Independence Day was observed as a primarily partisan celebration. The party in power regularly excluded its opponents from the festivities. In 1800, two Philadelphia schoolmasters, staunch Federalists, stalked out of a Fourth of July exercise when a pupil insisted on reading the Declaration of Independence. That seditious document was too closely associated with Thomas Jefferson, a Republican (Democrat).

Many citizens were reluctant to take part in Fourth of July ceremonies dominated by what one newspaper called "office seekers and demagogues." It urged the general public to turn out and break the politicians' monopoly on July 4.

The partisan spirit had subsided by 1826. The 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence was widely celebrated as a community affair with parades and picnics. A remarkable but sad coincidence on July 4, 1826, further helped knit together the young nation. On that day, both John Adams and Thomas Jefferson died.

The Statue of Liberty (reproduced here from an original painting by artist John Atherton) is the symbol of a nation that declared its independence in 1776; has been celebrating with battalions parading and bells ringing ever since.

Band music has been a part of July 4 celebrations since the very earliest observances. Over the years, since a captured Hessian band furnished the music for a special dinner held on the first anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, no band has been more closely associated with the Fourth than that of John Philip Sousa, here in a painting by artist Ben Stahl. (Note fireworks in background)

The birthday of the U.S., the Fourth of July, did not become a legal public holiday until 1941. But each generation has produced someone to remind us that Independence Day should be celebrated with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, bonfires, and illuminations. One of the most eloquent of these spokesmen, who was never at a loss for words, was George M. Cohan, painted here by John Gannam.

For one big night of folksy living room humor, Red Skelton will be on stage at the Saratoga Fair as the featured star in the 8 p.m. show at the famed old Saratoga race course on Wednesday, July 3. He'll headline the free grandstand show at the Fair on Senior Citizens Day, July 3, with Canadian singer Mary Lou Collins.

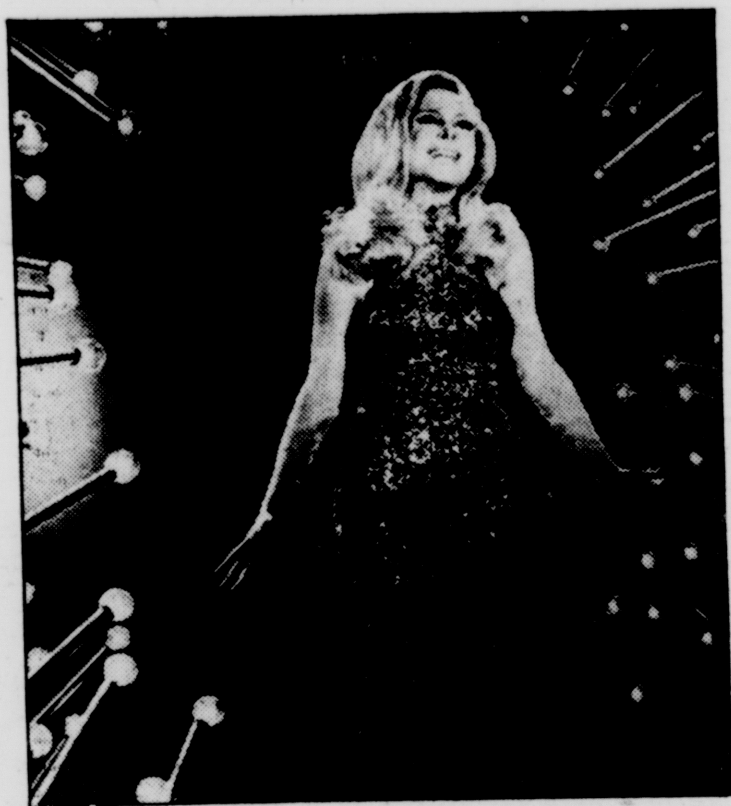

Country music star Lynn Anderson will be entertaining along with Bob Hope at the Saratoga Fair on Independence Day. The free Hope-Anderson grandstand show on July 4 at the Saratoga Race Course begins at 8 p.m. Her hit "Rose Garden" was a million seller and topped both the Pop and Country and Western charts.

Diminutive songstress Vikki Carr will appear at the Saratoga Fair on "Spirit of America Day" with the grandstand show at the Race Course beginning at 8 p.m. on Sunday, July 7. On the bill of fare with her that evening will be The Little Angels, the world-famous national folk ballet of Korea.

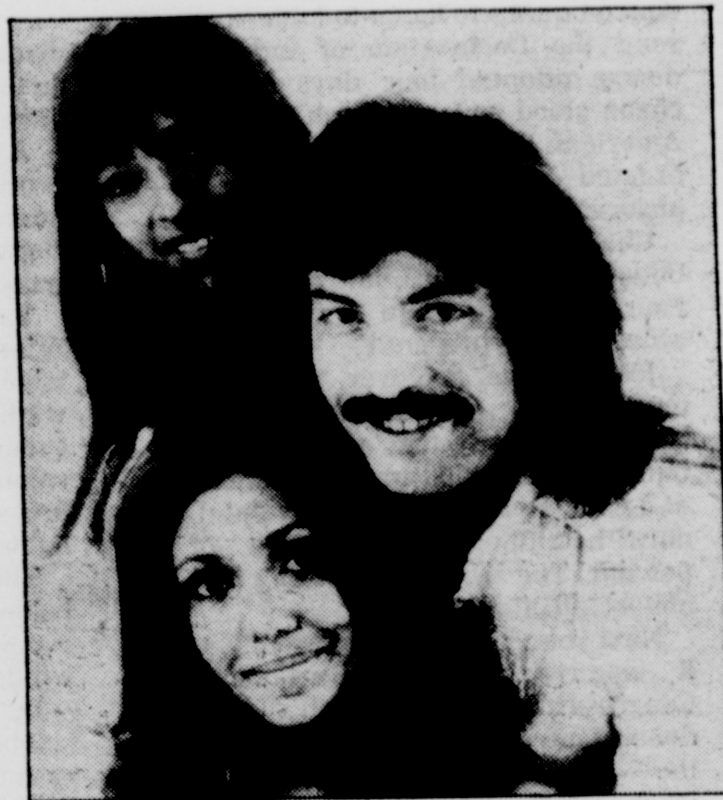

Independence Day and Bob Hope go together like firecrackers and burnt fingers. And Independence Day is when the globe-trotting American ambassador of goodwill will be headlining the free grandstand entertainment along with singing star, Lynn Anderson, at the Saratoga Fair on July 4.

Barbara Eden, actress-singer and star of the TV series, "I Dream of Jeannie," will replace The Smothers Brothers as the grandstand attraction at the Saratoga Fair on July 6. Also appearing with her on the show that night will be The DeFranco Family and The Little Angels.

The Best Is Yet to Come at Saratoga Fair

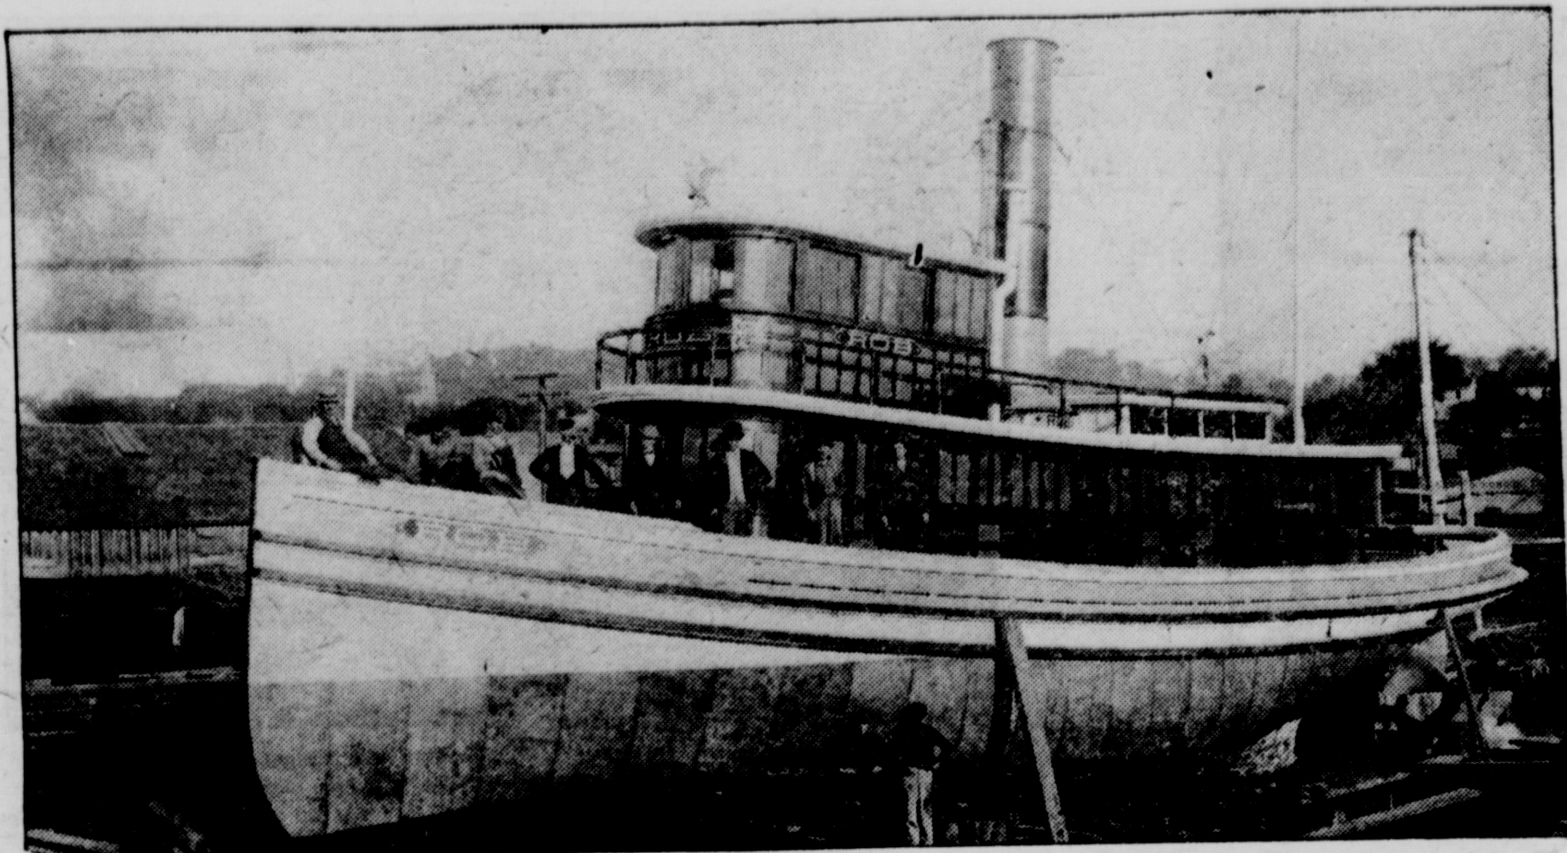

The records keep spinning and millions keep hearing Dawn featuring Tony Orlando. But few of those millions ever have the opportunity to see them in person. That opportunity will be offered when they appear at the Saratoga Fair in the free grandstand show at 8 p.m. Tuesday, July 2.

Spirited dancers, spirited drivers and spirited horses provide a unique "Spirit of America" element for the Saratoga Fair on Tuesday, July 2 at 2 p.m. in a race that could be a damsel in distress scene right out of a wild west movie. Six thoroughbred beauties from the New York City Ballet Company will join six trotters and their veteran drivers in competition to see who can get their fair maiden first across the finish line.

The only remaining mounted cavalry unit in the U.S. Army will recreate a portion of the nation's western frontier heritage at the Saratoga Fair, July 2-7 when it makes a daily charge through the fairgrounds enroute to a performance in the rodeo arena. The mounted color guard and drill team from Fort Carson, Colo. is outfitted in authentic period Cavalry uniforms of black slouch hat and gold striped blue uniform.

Old photograph of the "Rob" was probably taken a short time prior to her launching in 1902 from the old John Baisden shipyard at Sleightsburgh. The tugboat was a familiar sight along Rondout Creek for nearly 40 years.

The 'Rob' — Best Known of All Rondout Harbor Tugs

By CAPT. WM. O. BENSON

Of all the 100 or more tugboats that at one time or another were owned by the Cornell Steamboat Company, probably the best known locally was the "Rob." Her fame was due primarily to the fact that for almost her entire Cornell career she was used as a Rondout harbor tug and was seen by more local residents than any other.

The "Rob" was built in the year 1902 by the John Baisden boatyard located at the foot of Everson's Lane at Sleightsburgh. She was similar but not identical to the Cornell tugboats "Frank" and "Harry", all named for three of the seven sons of S. D. Coykendall, president of the Cornell Steamboat Company.

When the "Rob" was launched a number of people were in attendance and one of those present observed that she set in the water like a duck. On her trial trip, it was said she made a jaunty appearance with the white plume of steam from her high pressure engine.

The Rondout harbor tugs, of which the "Rob" was to be one, in that long ago day were painted somewhat differently from the work horses of the river. All of Cornell's tugboats carried black smokestacks with yellow bases and cabins painted burgundy red with chrome yellow panels. The Rondout harbor tugs, however, had white hulls instead of black and buff colored main deck rails. This difference and the gaily colored awnings they used to carry during the summer months gave them a more yacht-like appearance.

From the very day she was launched, the "Rob" was licensed to carry passengers. This was for several reasons. One was that she was to be used to assist the ferry "Transport" between Rondout and Rhinecliff and at times, during the winter ice or heavy spring and autumn fogs, she carried foot passengers across the river in place of the ferryboat. Also, each June she would go to the old inter-collegiate rowing regatta at Poughkeepsie and carry guests of the company. In addition, from time to time important political figures of the day would be visiting Kingston and the "Rob" would be used to either meet them at Rhinecliff or to take them back across the river to catch the better trains on the main line of the New York Central — instead of using the regular ferry.

Whenever the "Rob" was on one of her missions of ferrying people of importance across the river, the engineer would always have her engine wide open. Then, how that plume of white steam would go puffing skyward out of the exhaust pipe behind her smokestack! People along the shores would always know when the "Rob" had aboard someone of importance and she would always be saluted by other tugs and boats in the creek. She had a three chime whistle, which when the whistle cord was pulled down hard could be heard for a great distance.

The "Rob's" main purpose, however, was as a tugboat. She was used to shift scows and barges along the creek and at the local shipyards, and to tow coal boats from the coal trestle that used to be located on Dock Street under the present highway bridge. She was also used to pick up brick scows from the many brickyards that used to be located on the river between Kingston and Glasco and put them at Kingston Point to be picked up by the down river tows on their way to New York.

Late in the year around the first of December, one could always tell winter was on its way and ice would be forming soon by observing the "Rob", for at this time her ice shoe was always put in place. The ice shoe was a piece of steel formed to the shape of her hull at the bow and hung over and around the bow stem. It extended about two feet below the water line and about a foot above it and was designed to protect the bow while working in the ice. It was always very visible when first installed since it was painted with red lead. In the spring it would be removed.

In the summertime prior to 1930, the "Rob" looked like a pleasure yacht with an awning all around her main deck. Sometimes the awnings would be red and white and other summers they would be green and white. Those were the lush years for the Cornell Steamboat Company and where the boats were concerned money meant nothing.

When the "Rob" was first built, there was enough business around the creek to employ four tugboats as Rondout harbor tugs. Her three companions were the "John D. Schoonmaker," "Dr. David Kennedy" and the "Wm. S. Earl" and, at times, also the "Harry." With the passage of time, business fell off and the tugs in this service dwindled to the "Rob" and the "Wm. S. Earl." In the early 1930's, the "Rob" handled it all and finally there were no tugs at all used solely on the Rondout.

As the Great Depression of the 1930's settled over the land, towing around Rondout got less and less. On March 12, 1936, the ice at Eddyville let go and came down the creek with a rush, sweeping everything in its path out towards the river.

The "Rob" was struck as she lay at the Rondout ferry slip and was sunk. She was raised, repaired and then used as a helper tug on the river tows.

In 1941, while towing some scows out of Rondout Creek, her safety valve on the boiler blew out. Before being repaired, the "Rob" was hauled out on the dry dock at Hillebrand's shipyard at Connelly. A few bad spots were found in her hull and it was decided to sell her for junk. Her engine and boiler were taken out and a man from New Jersey bought the hull.

In December 1941, the tug "J.G. Rose" towed her away from her old haunts for the last time and put her in the down tow for New York. When she arrived in New York, the old "Rob" was taken to Staten Island and rebuilt into a diesel tug to tow oil barges. Today her old hull lies abandoned on the Connecticut River where she was sunk about 1960.

The "Rob" was a participant in a number of minor maritime historical events. In March 1912, she assisted the giant steel tug "Cornell" when the latter tug broke up an ice jam in the upper river that threatened to flood the waterfront of Albany. On more than one occasion, she broke up the ice in Rondout Creek in the spring to prevent damage from ice gorges.

During World War I, it was the "Rob" that towed the "Esopus" and the "Catskill" — the ocean freighters built at Island Dock — out of the creek to the river and gave them to other tugs to take to New York.

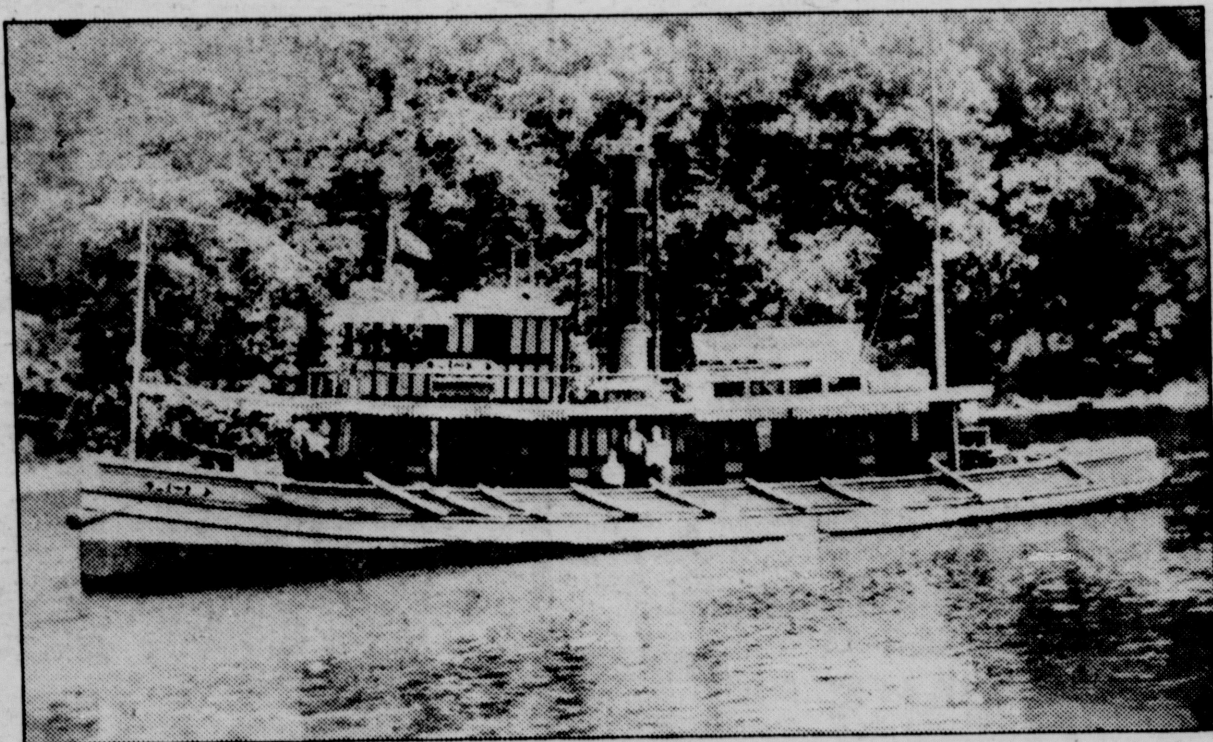

In 1920, the "Rob" towed the

"Mary Powell" from the Sunflower Dock to Connelly where the old "Queen of the Hudson" was broken up.

In the spring of 1930, she towed the Day Liner "Albany" out of the creek for the last time.

During freshet conditions in Rondout Creek, the "Rob" would be called upon to help the steamers of the Central Hudson Line — like the "Benjamin B. Odell" and the "Homer Ramsdell" — to turn around at their berth off Ferry Street. On more than one occasion she took doctors to the Rondout and Esopus Meadows lighthouses on errands of mercy.

The maritime jack of all trades that was the "Rob" had two captains who served on her for most of her career — George "Bun" Gage of Kingston and later John "Jack" Lynn of Port Ewen. For years and years she had the same crew for season after season. In addition to the captain, they were Nelson Lezette of Kingston as engineer, Ezra Hallenbeck of Kingston as fireman, Henry Eldridge of Kingston as deckhand, and Ellery Smith of Castleton as cook. They and their tugboat were a part of the Kingston scene during a colorful era that now is all but forgotten.

The "Rob" on Rondout Creek on a bright summer's day. One of the few tugboats licensed to carry passengers, she sometimes substituted for the Rhinecliff ferry in carrying passengers; regularly carried guests to the old intercollegiate rowing regatta at Poughkeepsie.

Harris Burdette, acclaimed as one of the finest young classic pianists in the U.S., will be heard in concert at the Woodstock Playhouse on the evening of Friday, July 5; will return for an encore performance the night of Thursday, July 11.

Chariot-race scene, with Francis X. Bushman and Ramon Novarro at the controls, from the huge, expensive, romantic, 1926 spectacle, "Ben Hur," to be unreel at the Woodstock Playhouse on Sunday, July 11.

This Week-Long Festival of the Arts Includes Ballet, Silent Films, Concerts

Summer Pops

Summer Pops concerts, often performed outdoors, usually mean the buzz of mosquitoes competing with "The Flight of the Bumblebee." No swatting need disturb music lovers, however, when concerts move indoors — and that's when the Hudson Valley Philharmonic 52 Piece Summer Pops Orchestra will do next Saturday, July 6, when it performs at the Woodstock Playhouse. The 8:30 p.m. concert will see conductor Edward Simons directing the musicians through music from such recent popular stage hits as "Fiddler on the Roof" and "Hair." Also on the program: music by Bach, Schubert, Bernstein and Enesco, and two more popular composers, Gershwin and Anderson.

Fresh from its highly successful, pre-season gala performance of the Turnau Opera Players, the Woodstock Playhouse has scheduled an ambitious July week — a Festival of the Arts — featuring ballet, silent film classics, a concert piano recital, and a philharmonic performance (see box on this page).

The Festival Week begins Monday, July 1 with Jacques d'Amboise (see full page spread elsewhere in this issue), described by New York Times critic Clive Barnes as having "few rivals in the world touch him" in the performance of ballet. Dancer d'Amboise has been a star performer with the New York City Ballet and has won wide acclaim from Leningrad to San Francisco.

Bown Adams, celebrated master of classic cinema presentations, brings his unique performance to the Playhouse on July 3 and 4 when he will present "The Birth of a Nation," the 1915 silent film classic from one of the few remaining complete prints of the 12 reels, with original D.W. Griffith titles and scored in stereophonic sound with original score, sounds and music of the Civil War.

On Sunday, July 11, Adams will present the 1927 classic, "Ben Hur," the most expensive silent film ever produced.

It was also extremely costly in terms of human and animal life lost in the course of production: the chariot race caused dozens of horses to be killed and hundreds of Italian extras were drowned during the difficult sea battle.

Both d'Amboise and Adams are celebrated for their "living theater" presentations;

they create dialogues with the audience during performances to heighten enjoyment and understanding of their respective artistic media.

The Festival Week continues on Friday, July 5 with a concert performance by Harris Burdette, one of America's finest young classic pianists. Burdette will perform an encore performance with a recital on Thursday, July 11.

The Festival Week marks the first time ballet, classic films and classical performances of great music have been presented in these formats in the history of the Woodstock Playhouse, which this year, under the direction of new owner Harris Gordon, is seeking to reach all tastes of the performing arts in this area, and in the vicinity.

Soldiers ride through town in scene from "The Birth of a Nation," the D.W. Griffith directed film centering on the American Civil War. Made in 1915, it'll get a 1974 showing at the Woodstock Playhouse on July 3 and 4.

Hand Me Down Things

By TOBIE GEERTSEMA

JUST THINKING OUT LOUD:

We can do without people who ask us why we don't watch our weight. We watch it all the time. Just last week we watched it go up eight pounds.

We also take umbrage at people who refer to our favorite balladeer, Frank Sinatra, as a saloon singer. If Sinatra is a saloon singer, the Taj-Mahal is a tenement.

Some kids today only know two letters of the alphabet — TV.

Whatever happened to ruggedly handsome, masculine-looking movie actors? Today's film idols are all the mashed-nose, beady-eyed kind of guy you hope doesn't live next door. An extremely handsome face is nothing more than a Hollywood handicap today.

WE ASKED THE 8-YEAR-OLD up the block (we call her "Lady Macbeth" because she's always emoting) what she thought being rich meant. And she said it meant having a Cadillac bike. What with most kids today riding around on 10-speed imported Peugeots that sell for close to $200, we think maybe we agree with her.

AND WHILE WE'RE ON THE SUBJECT of the younger generation, the current joke being bantered around among the 10-to-12-year-olds in our neighborhood goes like this: What happens when you don't pay your exorcist? You get re-possessed!

NOBODY ASKED US — BUT:

One team we'd like to see working together would be the team of Flip Wilson and Mae West. We think Mae and Geraldine Jones would make a great combination.

OVERHEARD IN THE LINE OF DUTY DEPARTMENT:

At a local bistro when an area MD, who's a talented amateur drum player, sat in with the band for a jam session: "There's one doctor who makes cabaret calls."

At a Woodstock gas station: "Even if we can fuel all the people all the time now that the shortage is over, we could still use more Exxon and less Nixon."

In a Hyde Park diner as two gentlemen discussed the high cost of living: "I'm no long an 'angry young man.' I've matured. Now I'm a 'mad middle-aged man.'"

FOR TRIVIA BUFFS:

Ever notice how chubby Marlene Dietrich looks in that famous scene from "The Blue Angel" that's been shown and reshowed over the years? Well, the svelte Marlene of 1974 weighed 185 pounds when she shot that "Angel" scene and the women surrounding her were all fat ladies from the circus, to make her look smaller.

WE STUMBLED UPON some 6th Century England beauty tips recently and, considering the soaring price of cosmetics today, they're worth considering. Seems women back then employed readily available materials to enhance their beauty; used rose petals as a massage for rosy cheeks — or red wine when roses were out of season. Powdered chalk was used to tone down facial color and a long piece of charcoal was skillfully and carefully used to darken the eyelids. We don't know about you — but we're off to the wine cellar, the flower garden and the hibachi... and we'll let you know if it works on our "Knight of the Round Table."

Abraxas Residents Theatre Opens Hyde Park Playhouse

The picture for summer stock this year will be undoubtedly brightened by a simple and exciting idea being launched at the venerable Hyde Park Playhouse. A group of young professionals led by Dan Dullea and Robert Sommer are presenting a ten week season of comedy, music, drama and mystery from now through Aug. 31. The five productions to be presented are new to the area as are many of the performers who will be seen.

The Abraxas Resident Theatre believes their audiences will enjoy seeing a company of professional actors performing various roles during the course of a season.

In the past seasons the Playhouse has offered stars from Broadway and television and most recently, community theatre.

The Abraxas people feel area play-goers will enjoy watching a resident company go through their paces and become familiar with the talent of the performers they will be seeing in each production of the season.

The Hyde Park Playhouse will be opening four nights a week, Thursday through Sunday, with curtain time at 8 p.m. Tickets for individual performances are $3.50 (Thurs. & Sun.) and $4 (Fri. & Sat.). At this time special concerts, film festivals and children's matinees are being prepared and will be announced shortly. Tickets and information can be obtained at the Box Office or by calling 229-9117. Interested groups are invited to ask about special rates.

Now through July 7, Abraxas is presenting N. Richard Nash's romantic family comedy, THE RAINMAKER. The star of the show ("Starbuck") will be played by Michael Arcesci, most recently seen at La Mama Experimental Theatre in New York City, in Allen Causey's JULIA CAESAR, as a character named Polowski. Michael, a student of Sanford Meisner, spent last summer at the Utah Shakespeare Festival. "Starbuck's" counterpart "Lizzie" is played by Mary Lou Ver Wyes, who studied with Sanford Meisner at the Neighborhood Playhouse, in New York City.

The next show will be *ROOM SERVICE (July 11 through 21), the 1937 comedy that the madcap Marx Brothers brought to the screen. The third show is a musical, STOP THE WORLD, I WANT TO GET OFF, which was written by Leslie Bricusse and Anthony Newley, its original star, (July 25 through Aug. 4). After "STOP," comes the area premier of ONE FLEW OVER THE CUCKOO'S NEST. Anyone who was moved by Ken Kesey's novel will want to see Dale Wasserman's stage adaptation of it (Aug. 8 through 18). The season ends on a rock bound island of intrigue that only Agatha Christie could create, with *TEN LITTLE INDIANS (Aug. 22 through 31).

The Abraxas company hopes to provide the kind of summer entertainment area audiences will enjoy and the company will be soliciting suggestions for next season's schedule at their performances. Season tickets are available for $18 (Fri. & Sat.) and for $16 (Thurs. & Sun.) at the Box Office. If you would like to be a patron this summer, call or visit the Hyde Park Playhouse (just opposite the north exit of Vanderbilt Manion, Rte. 9) This is an ambitious and exciting summer and all are welcome to join.

The First Gilbert & Sullivan Quartette will open the Cubiculo at Byrdcliffe series this 4th of July weekend at the Byrdcliffe Theatre in Woodstock, with a delightful array of scenes from Gilbert & Sullivan comic operas. Performances are at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, July 5 and 6.

Evening of Gilbert & Sullivan Set at Byrdcliffe's Cubiculo

A delightful evening of beautiful melodies, high comedy, and the ageless satire of Gilbert & Sullivan's comic operas await first night audiences at the Byrdcliffe Theatre in Woodstock, this coming 4th of July weekend. The First Gilbert & Sullivan Quartette will kick off the 1974 summer Cubiculo at Byrdcliffe series on Friday and Saturday evening, July 5 and 6, at 8 p.m., featured at the historic little opera house located in the artists colony on upper Byrdcliffe Road.

This will be the second successive summer that the intimate Byrdcliffe Theatre will host such a series. Again this season, the program will be sponsored by the National Shakespeare Company as an extension of its Cubiculo experimental arts center in New York City, and it promises a potpourri of theatre and opera for a number of weekends throughout the summer.

Originally brought together in the American Savoyards, members of the First Gilbert & Sullivan Quartette have become individually successful as singing actors in major performing companies throughout the United States. The Quartette has performed its repertoire for the past year in and around the New York metropolitan area, and in colleges and community concerts throughout the northeast U.S.

With elaborate costumes, diverse make-up and lively staging, the unique talents of Sandra Darling, Nell Evans, John Carle and James Wilson make the magic that turns four actors into nineteen Gilbert & Sullivan characters for a truly entertaining theatrical event. The Quartette performs scenes from THE GONDOLIERS, THE PIRATES OF PENZANCE, H.M.S. PINAFORE, THE MIKADO, and other G & S favorites.

New York City Opera soprano Sandra Darling, widely praised for her crystalline voice and vivacious stage personality, has been leading lady with various G & S companies. Principal mezzo with the American Savoyards and the American National Opera Company, Nell Evans is a protege of Gian-Carlo Menotti. John Carle has previously sung all the Gilbert and Sullivan "patter roles" with The American Savoyards; has been acclaimed for his musical wit and style with a number of distinguished musical and opera companies. Tenor James Wilson has sung leading roles with the New York City Center Gilbert & Sullivan Company and the American Savoyards.

Tickets to this Cubiculo at Byrdcliffe presentation are $2.50, and may be obtained at the door, or by calling 679-2100 mornings for reservations.

Christmas in July

"The Nutcracker," a scene from which is danced here by Patricia McBride and Edward Villella, has become a favorite of audiences at Saratoga Performing Arts Center over the years. And when the New York City Ballet brings its special brand of entertainment to SPAC for the month of July, "The Nutcracker" will be presented during the first week from Wednesday, July 3 through Saturday, July 6. Performances are slated 8 p.m. July 3; 2:30 and 8 p.m. July 4; 2 and 8 p.m. July 5; and 2 and 8 p.m. July 6; will be a Christmas present-in-July for all ages with its giant Yule tree, mice vs. children battle, and snowflaked land of make-believe.

Jacob's Pillow

Lisa Bradley, former leading dancer with the Joffrey Ballet, and her husband, Michael Uthoff, Artistic Director of the Hartford Ballet, will replace Violette Verdy for the opening performances at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival on July 2, 3 and 4. Miss Verdy was forced to cancel her engagement due to acute tendonitis.

Before joining the Hartford Ballet as Assistant to the Artistic Director, Lisa Bradley toured throughout the United States, Canada, Western and Eastern Europe, the Middle and Far East. She was a principal dancer with the New York City Opera, and the First Chamber Dance Company of New York. During her association with the Joffrey re Ballet she had ballets created for her by Alvin Ailey, Gerald Arpino, Robert Joffrey, Louis Jonson and Donald Saddler.

Dancer-choreographer Michael Uthoff has also had an international career. Now serving as Artistic Director of the Hartford Ballet, he has expanded the company's repertoire with works by many modern choreographers. Miss Bradley and Uthoff will perform two of Uthoff's newest pieces — "Dusk" and "Wind-song."

Performing with Lisa Bradley and Michael Uthoff are Ritha Devi, the graceful Indian Dancer, and Garth Fagan's Bottom of the Bucket But . . . Dance Company, a young multi-racial group of endless energy and talent. It promises to be an exciting three nights with three separate styles of dance from the classical ballet of Bradley and Uthoff, the rhythmical ethnic style of Garth Fagan to the delicacy of Devi's dances of India.

Tickets are on sale at Ticketron at Sears in Kingston, and the Jacob's Pillow Box Office. The Pillow is in the heart of the nearby Berkshires, minutes from the Massachusetts Turnpike, Lee, Pittsfield, exit. For information and reservations call (413) 243-0745.

Stalking The Wild Mushroom

Art appetizer in this tasty mushroom hors d'oeuvre served up with curry sauce — the Curry being artist Bud Curry, master of the watercolor mushroom. His work, including this "Coprinus Picaceus," is currently on view at The Gallery, 5 Academy Street, New Paltz.

"Amanita Muscaria" is the title of this Bud Curry watercolor mushroom work, one of 60 (all of which depict mushrooms) in the current exhibit at The Gallery. Artist Curry teaches art at Wappingers Falls High School. The show will run for two more weeks during Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. hours at The Gallery. It's well worth seeing for Curry proves that the endless fascination of the mushroom is open to countless interpretations and studies.

These midsummer days are made to order for the mushroom paintings (including this "Boletus Leteus") growing from Bud Curry's canvases at The Gallery. Appropriately enough, the one-man exhibit of the master of the watercolor mushroom is being co-sponsored by The Runcible Spoon, the "everything for the preparation and service of food" shop in Paltz that's master of many mushroom delicacies, and The Gallery, master of the mushroom gala that opened the show with a special celebration last weekend. Gala Special Event at Maverick Today

The doors of the Maverick Concert Hall in Woodstock (top center) swing open today on three superlative performers (l-r) violinist William Kroll, pianist Grant Johannesen, and cellist Zara Nelsova. Going into its 59th season today, Sunday, June 30, Maverick Concerts is offering a gala special event in which these three distinguished and popular artists return to the Hall to perform together in a joint recital. Two of the major staples of the piano trio literature will be featured: the ARCHDUKE Trio No. 7 in B-flat

Major, Op. 97 of Beethoven, and the Trio in A Minor, Op. 50 of Tschaiakowsky. While pianist Johannesen was heard at the Maverick in solo recital last summer, this afternoon's recital at 3 p.m. will mark the return of Kroll and Nelsova after a two-year absence. Both play Stradivarius instruments: Kroll's violin is the famous "Ernst" Stradivarius, dated 1709, and Nelsova's cello is the "Marquis de Corboron," dated 1726. Tickets will be available at the door. An Oscar Winner Returns to SPAC

John Houseman, the protean renaissance man of the theatre, who founded and is artistic director of the City Center Acting Company, won the best supporting actor Oscar at this year's Academy Awards for his portrayal of a Harvard Law School professor in the current movie, "Paper Chase." The veteran producer's first performance before a camera had already won him a Golden Globe Award when he was cited by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association as the Best Supporting Actor in a motion picture.

This summer, Houseman will bring the City Center Acting Company back to the Saratoga Festival for its third season. The troupe will perform "Love's Labour's Lost", "The Beggar's Opera", "Play" and "The Orchestra" on one bill, and "Edward II" during their four-week tenure. A special student matinee of "The Taming of the Shrew" will also be offered.

In addition to his duties as head of the Juilliard School's Drama Division, Houseman found time to direct Henry Fonda in a new play, "Clarence Darrow", which opened in New York City in March at the Helen Hayes Theatre. This venture earlier necessitated director Houseman flying out to Los Angeles, Louisville, and Chicago to keep an eye on the David W. Rintels play, which details the life of the great midwestern defense and civil liberties attorney. In addition to garnering fine notices, the Houseman-staged work is also a box office bonanza and a top grossing attraction.

Houseman's City Center Acting Company will first perform William Shakespeare's "LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST" at Saratoga. Directed by Gerald Freedman, it will be staged July 8, 10, 11 and 12 at 8 p.m., and July 13 at 5 and 8 p.m.

A special subscription brochure is available offering the entire four-play Saratoga season for as little as $16. If you wish to receive a copy, write: CCAC Subscription Brochure, Saratoga Festival, Saratoga Springs, New York 12866.

Marching units ten divisions strong will kick off the annual Fourth of July Celebration in Saugerties with a mammoth parade beginning at 10 a.m. Before the parade, Papa Bear will entertain; after the march Miss Ulster County (Debbie Buchan) will present parade awards, and a drum corps exhibition will be held at 12:15 on Cantine Field. (Bob Ricketson photo)

Free entertainment will abound at the Saugerties 4th Celebration from high wire acts and performing dogs to music and square dancing and a Kung Fu demonstration at 5:15 by Wo Look (R) and his class, including Ernie O'Dell (L) who show how to block against a flying kick here.

Great Day USA For Fourth

U.S. Military Academy Parachute Team will do their thing high over Cantine Field at 4 p.m. The big, free celebration in Saugerties is open to all; runs day-long from early morning to late at night when the parades, watermelon eating contests, softball games and music continuous entertainment end with a spectacular fire works display at 9:30 p.m.

Fourth a Blast At High Falls

Independence Day in High Falls will not only reflect the good old American spirit of 1974, but it'll be an absolute blast!

In addition to an old fashioned picnic, there'll be a finale of fireworks to close out the evening's events in a spectacular both unique and unusual.

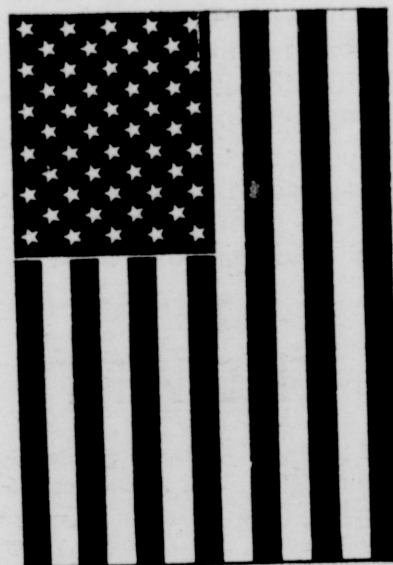

Think back upon aerial displays you've seen at previous July 4th celebrations. Explosions that light the sky above, and water falls displays that light up as a the water falls. But at High Falls this week, the pyrotechnics overhead will reflect in the falls at High Falls themselves and in the waters of beautiful Rondout Creek.

The fireworks will be shot from a field by the falls, and will be shot down-creek to take full advantage of the pastoral site.

Festivities for this, the 7th Annual Independence Day Celebration in High Falls, will begin at 6 p.m. in a field by the falls with a do-it-yourself picnic. The outdoor eating fest will be followed by fireworks as darkness descends.

Needless to say, the public is cordially invited to historic High Falls, where cement was discovered some 200 years ago and now the headquarters of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Society Museum with its many canawler artifacts, for this celebration of the historic birthday of this nation.

RCA Rodeo returns to the Cobleskill Fairgrounds for the Olde Tyme July 4th Celebration with riding and roping and other events slated the night of July 3 and the afternoon and evening of July 4.

An Olde Tyme July 4th

"Back by popular demand" to the Cobleskill Agricultural Society comes the RCA Rodeo, scheduled at the Cobleskill fairgrounds Wednesday evening July 3rd and Thursday afternoon and evening July 4th.

The two day rodeo program will initiate the five day Olde Tyme July 4th celebration set for the fairgrounds July 3rd-7th.

Producers of the rodeo will be the All American Rodeo Company which is also producing the rodeo at the new Saratoga Fair and each summer presents the Painted Post Rodeo on Friday evenings.

Events scheduled will include calf roping, saddle bronc riding, bareback riding, steer wrestling, barrel racing and rodeo's most dangerous event, brahma bull riding.

Featured with the rodeo will be the rodeo clowns, always a crowd pleaser.

Appearing with the Cobleskill rodeo will be "Old Man Barrett" and his bucking ford act. The Barrett family and their comedy car was a featured act at the 1973 Danbury Fair, Connecticut.

The Olde Tyme July 4th Celebration at the fairgrounds is being presented by the fair society and this year will again feature free grandstand for all 5 days. Wonderland World shows of Canandaigua will provide the midway.

Concession space is available for the program and can be obtained by contacting the fair office.

THE ARTS IN BRIEF

An exhibit entitled "Miniatures and Small Paintings" (works up to 12 inches) is currently running through July 3 at the Woodstock Artists Association on Woodstock's village green. Artist Ed Chavez of the art colony serves as juror. The gallery is open weekdays 1-5 p.m. except Thursday. Weekend hours are 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday, and 1-6 p.m. Sunday.

The Cleveland Gallery, 10 Garden Street, Poughkeepsie, is now showing the art work of artist Robert Paschal. The show is slated to run through July 13; features paintings, drawings and sculpture by Paschal.

An unusually fine antique show is taking place every Sunday on the Main Mall in Poughkeepsie from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. The weekly shows are held in conjunction with the Chamber of Commerce; are coordinated by Sylvia Garson, who has had wide experience in organizing fairs and other similar events. Exhibits each Sunday are limited to 35 from such areas as Ulster, Orange and Westchester Counties and New York City. Shows are always open to the public at no admission charge. Those interested in reserving booths

Twenty watercolor canvases by New Windsor artist Al Travella are on display in Curtin Memorial Library, Mount Saint Mary College, Newburgh. The varied exhibit features landscapes, portraits, sea scenes and unusual sports competition water colors.

The current attraction (now through July 7) at Cecilwood Theatre, Main Street, Fishkill, is THAT CHAMPIONSHIP SEASON by Jason Miller. Winner of the Pulitzer Prize and the Toni and New York Drama Critics Awards, the play revolves around the story of a reunion of a championship high school basketball team. Starring in the Cecilwood production is James Pritchett, who plays Dr. Matt Powers on NBC-TV's "The Doctors."

Any number of musical offerings are available in the area in the week ahead. This evening, Sunday, June 30 at 7 p.m., the Storm King Chamber Series continues at Storm King School, Cornwall, with a program of Rachmaninoff, Mozart and Dvorak, featuring such Hudson Valley Philharmonic musicians as Edward Simons on violin, Robert Guralnik at the piano, and others.

The Philharmonic's showmobile continues its Festival '74 with entertainment by various Dutchess art groups including folk singers, rock, ballet, and barbershop singers on July 4 at 1 p.m. in Pawling, and on July 6 at Wilcox Park. Lou Pells and his Oompah Band will be at Wilcox Park in Milan for a performance July 4 at 1 p.m.

The Philharmonic's Summer Pops programs of light classics and show tune medleys, with Edward Simons conducting, get underway at the Woodstock Playhouse July 6 at 8:30 p.m.; continue July 7 at Sullivan Community College, Loch Sheldrake.

Mid-Hudson Ballet Company held its annual dinner recently at Bruno's Restaurant in Hyde Park, with the highlight of the evening being the announcement of the dancer selected to receive the annual "Mid-Hudson Ballet Award." It was presented to Miss Eileen Bellizzi, 12 Mt. Carmel Place, Poughkeepsie, as the dancer who did the most during the past season for the company. Also honored were scholarship grant recipients Sharon McDermott, Eileen Bellizzi, Karen Cassetta, and Larry Yando.

Eva Marie Saint Berkshire Star

"Desire Under the Elms", the first presentation of the Berkshire Theatre Festival, now through July 13, is notable for the many coincidences which have occurred since casting began.

To begin with, 1974 marks the play's Golden Anniversary. It was originally presented 50 years ago in 1924, by the Provincetown Players.

The second coincidence also concerns time. While Eva Marie Saint and Jeffrey Hayden, the leading lady and director, are staying in Stockbridge, Mass., they are making their home in a house built the same year "Desire" takes place — 1850.

James Broderick, playing the crotchety farmer in the play, is coincidentally, no stranger to the Stockbridge area. He played Ray Brock in the film "Alice's Restaurant" when the restaurant was situated right off Main Street in Stockbridge.

In addition, most of the cast of this powerful O'Neill play, has worked together at some point in their careers. Miss Saint and Broderick were directed by Jeffrey Hayden in "Winesburg, Ohio," in Chicago. Actor Robert Easton, known for his expertise in dialects, coached Miss Saint in this subject, and also taught John Ritter and John McKinney, to be seen as his brothers in the play, at the University of Southern California.

The final coincidence was noted on the first day of rehearsal. "Desire Under the Elms" takes place on a rocky New England farm which is surrounded by a stone wall. Curiously, rehearsals are being held at a place called "Boulder Farm."

The show, of course, will be presented at the Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge, now through July 13. For ticket information, call 413-298-5536.

In Sculpture Garden

Outside in the sculpture gardens of The Storm King Art Center at nearby Mountainville are close to 200 outdoor sculptures comprising the current "Sculpture in the Fields" show. And in all that array of work by such leading contemporary sculptors of today as Willem DeKooning, Alexander Calder and David Smith, the work of a local sculptor stands out for its visual impact, symmetry, and individualist style. Among the striking works by Tillson sculptor Hans Van De Bovenkamp on view for this summer of 1974 at Storm King is more than 16 feet tall aluminum work, created only last year and entitled "THREE-ENTS."

Hudson Highlands Played Important Part in Struggle For Independence

The flag of the Revolutionary War — with its 13 stars and 13 stripes — is a reminder that American colonists living along the banks of the Hudson were called upon to defend their country against the British almost 200 years ago.

Independence Day celebrations will be held this week up and down the Hudson River Valley, and the Bicentennial of the American Revolution will begin in less than two years. Our Hudson Highlands played an important part in the struggle for independence 1775-1783, and the July 4th festivities should spark our curiosity about what occurred in our own neighborhood almost 200 years ago.

Constitution Island, near West Point, contains the last remaining unspoiled Revolutionary War ruins. The original fortifications here were the first of many constructed in the Highlands during the War, and were used in the space of the entire eight years of the War.

In 1775 the American colonists living along the banks of the Hudson were called upon to defend their country against the British. For two years the local people were totally responsible for providing money and for building the defenses. Then from 1778 to 1783 fortifications were built again and enlarged to replace local efforts destroyed by the British. In addition to the defenses at West Point and Constitution Island, redoubts were constructed in Highland Falls and Garrison. Great iron chains were stretched across from West Point to Constitution Island and another from Ft. Montgomery to the east bank of the Hudson were made in local iron works.

"The Fort That Never Was", Colonel Merle Schefield's historically accurate book about Fort Constitution's role in the 8 years of struggle, points out interesting discrepancies in early plans never completed. And in addition to historical facts, included are original defense plans and documents by such colorful figures as Washington, Kosciuszko, Romans, Villefranche and L'Enfant never before published. Books are available from the Constitution Island Association, telephone 446-8676 any week day 10 to 11:30 a.m. or write to Box 41, West Point, New York 10996, or at the Warner House on Constitutional Island.

Paul Tucker's Art

Currently on view at The Artists' Cooperative Gallery, 2 Lower Byrdcliffe Road on Parnassus Square in Woodstock, is an exhibit of the paintings of Woodstock artist Paul Tucker. The show will run through July 5, with the gallery open daily from 1 to 6 p.m. except Mondays.

Twenty-four-year-old Paul Tucker studied with Eugene Wallach and Katherine Amico in New York City, with Robert Angeloch at the Art Students League in Woodstock, and with Bruce Dorfman at his Workshop Studio in the art colony.

He has had a previous one-man show at Poughkeep-sie's Marist College; has exhibited in group shows at Wallcott-Field Gallery in New York City and at The Workshop Studio and the Woodstock Artist Association.

On his personal approach to his paintings, Tucker says, "I began painting landscapes, then focused strictly on form and color; the work became more subjective, leaving all subject matter behind. My paintings are organic in nature."

The Artists' Cooperative is a new gallery in Woodstock, located in an old barn on Parnassus Square. It is unique in this area in that it is managed entirely by the member artists themselves.

Everybody's Off and Running!

Track and field events have become very popular. Six years ago, 250 young athletes might have taken part in a Junior Olympics meet. Today, the same meet might draw as many as 2,000 competitors.

For this reason, there is great interest in the fact the the Russians are coming!

They are coming to compete in the 12th USA-USSR Outdoor Track and Field Meet to be held in Durham, North Carolina on July 5 and 6. Over 75 star athletes from each country will compete.

In past meets, the USA men have outscored the USSR 8-3. The USSR women have outscored the USA women 10 to 1.

Tony Waldrop Leads the Pack!

Tony Waldrop is the biggest story in track today. The 21-year-old record smasher has broken the four-minute barrier more than eight times in a row. No other runner has ever done this more than two times in a row. Running a mile in less than four minutes is great, especially on an indoor track that requires 11 laps instead of the four required by outdoor tracks. Tony has set the indoor record at 3:55.0.

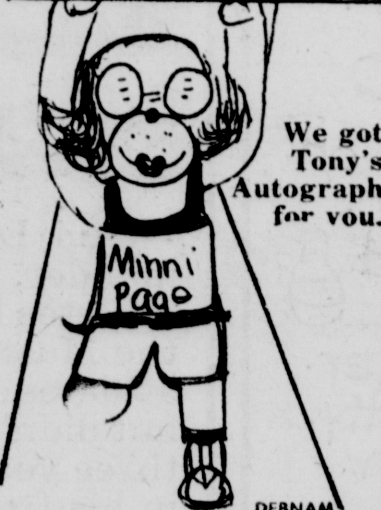

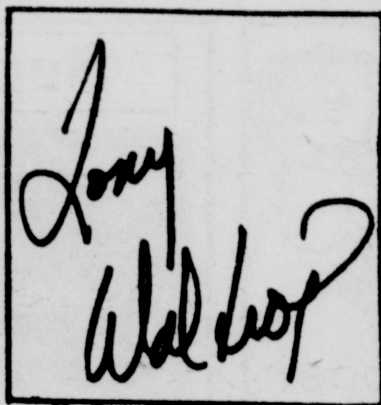

Someday, Tony, an outstanding student who has just graduated from the University of North Carolina, would like to be a lawyer or a coach. He says he has no interest in running for money or running in the Olympics.

"If you enjoy running and get pleasure out of it, do it; if not, don't," the shy super star told the Mini Page.

Why Do They Run?

A father and son run!

Why is everybody off and running? The physical fitness bit is one thing. Running is a healthy thing to do. It builds heart muscles and tones up your body and makes it feel good. Many parents run to keep in shape and their children run with them.

Television has introduced young viewers to track and field meets. The children like the fact that there are many events from which to pick. They also like the idea that they don't need special uniforms. Many champs run in their bare feet.

Younger children especially like the relays, the 100-yard dash, the mile run, the long jump and the high jump.

"Find something you like to do and do it," advises a track coach. You might not even be an Olympic champ, but you'll have fun and keep fit.

Super Sport: Bud Deacon

Bud Deacon, a 63-year-old retired Navy commander, has been called one of the best all-round athletes in the world. He holds 29 world records in the Master's Track and Field competition open to athletes 40 years and older. He competed in college, but didn't start running again competitively until three years ago. He has a private practice ground in his front yard in Honolulu.

Super Sport: Valery Borzov

Valery Borzov is a Russian who won two gold medals in the 1972 Olympics. He won the 100 meter dash in 10.4 seconds. He won the 200 meter dash in 20.0 seconds. In track, it's unusual for a person to win both the 100 and 200 meter races.

The Russian national field and track team travels and trains together a lot more than does the American team.

We will not know who will be on the Russian team until they actually arrive in this country, but Valery Borzov might be one of the members.

The Training Bit

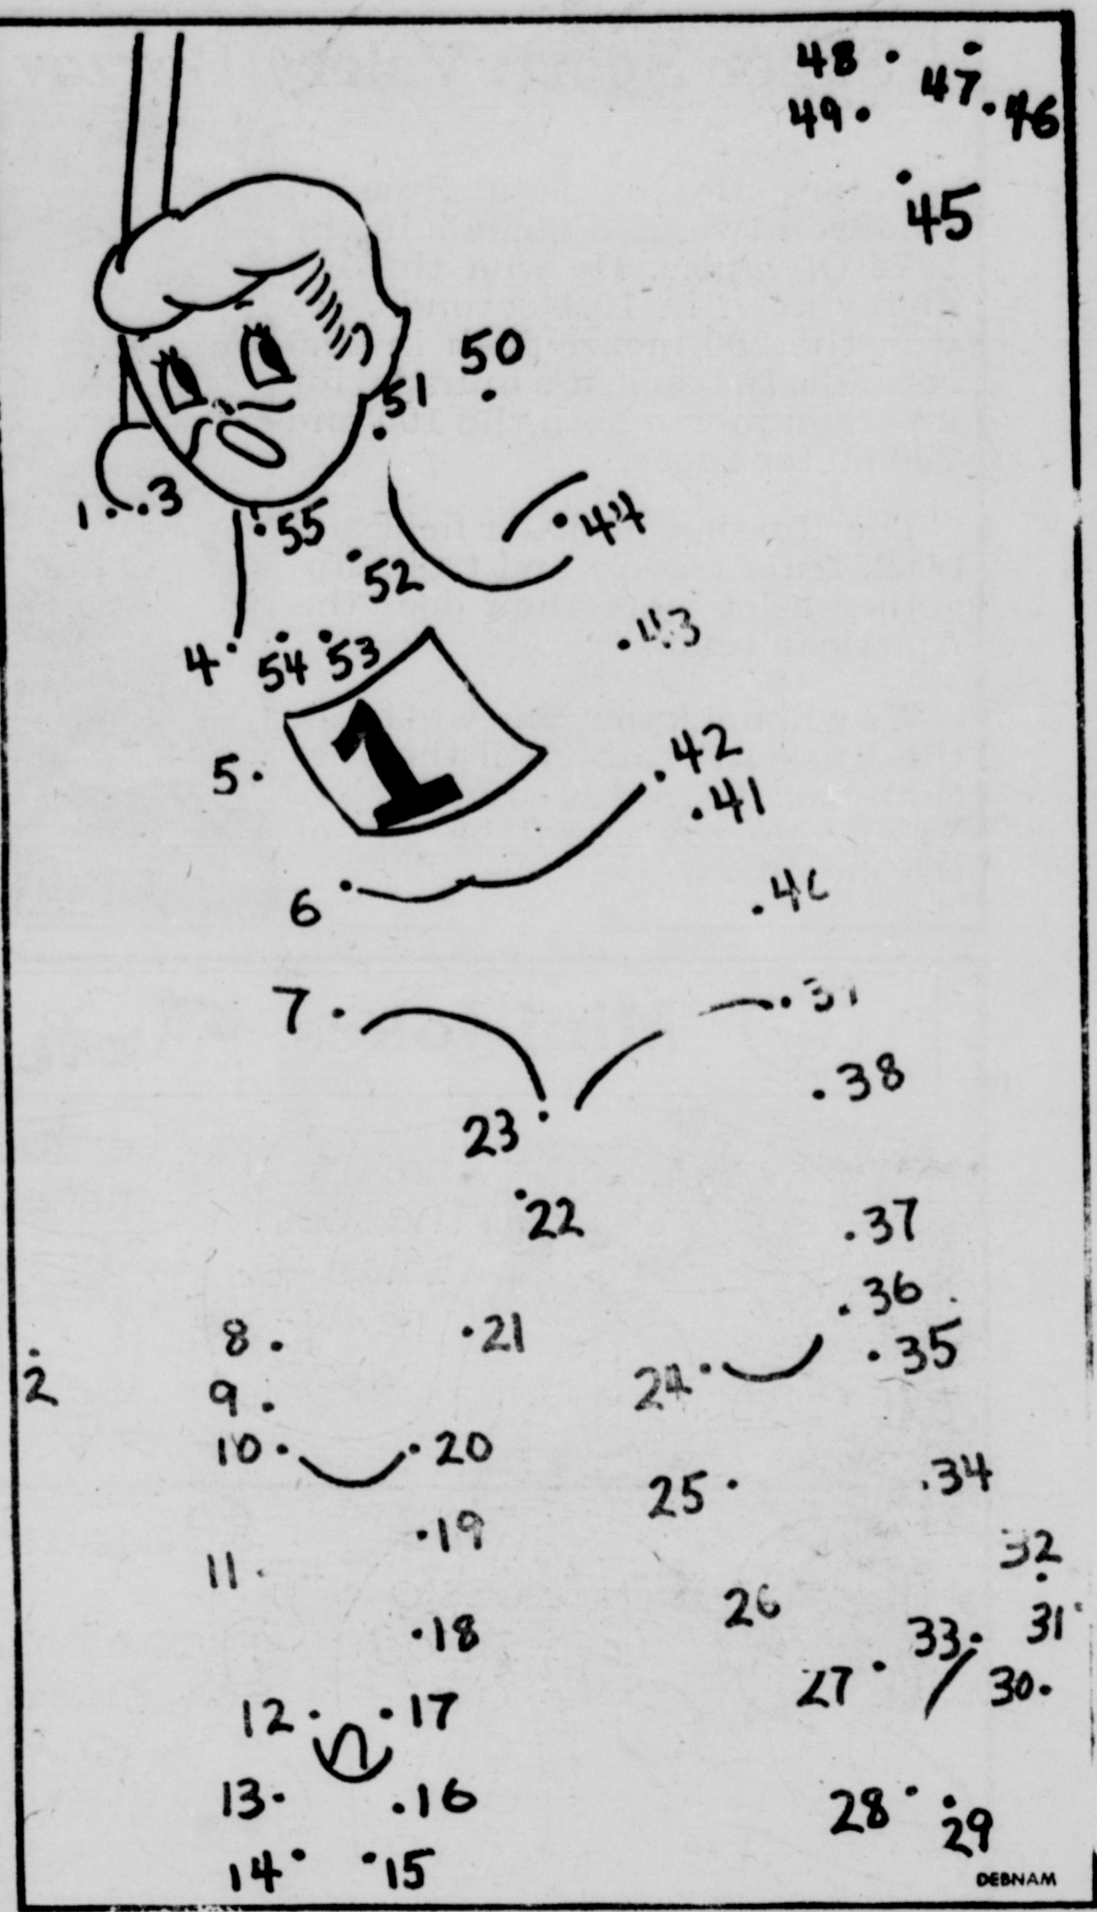

Mark and Julie Shea on the track at North Carolina State University

How would you like to run for an hour every day, rain or shine and even on Christmas? And, after you got off the track, how would you like to swim a mile? This is the training schedule for Mark Shea, age 10, and his sister Julie, 14. Their father is a physical education coach. He carefully supervises their training.

The secret of keeping this schedule is that both children love it. They meet friends at the track and at meets and have a good time running and winning.

"I hope to compete and win in the 1976 Olympics in Montreal," says Julie, who started running at 8. She had held several Junior Olympic records. Brother Mark holds several state records and the world record for 10-year-old boys in the six mile run.

Heritage Savings Bank

Preserving the past, Providing for the future

Uptown Kingston, Town of Ulster, Ramapo
Chartered 1874

First Quarters of Heritage Savings Bank
Rented space in the old Romeyn Building, adjoining the Courthouse on the north, was the Bank's first home.

Growth Dictates a Change of Address
By 1885, the Bank had outgrown the Romeyn Building. More space was acquired in the Argus Building, on the south side of the Courthouse on land now used as the entrance to the County Parking Lot.

Heritage Savings Bank -- From Past to Present

By Harry Rigby, Jr., City of Kingston Historian

Two knowledgeable and influential men of affairs were talking about the tribulations of our Nation. They spoke of the deepening of economic depression. Of corruption surrounding the President and how two of his Cabinet officers had resigned, one to escape a Congressional vote of censure and the other to avoid impeachment. Even the President's secretary had been involved in a conspiracy with ruthless commercial interests. Since the President was accused of "packing" the Supreme Court, Congress was investigating possible impeachment of the President.

The two men, who were bound for Albany on the new Hudson River Railroad, were citizens of Kingston named Augustus Schoonmaker and Luke Noone. Schoonmaker was a distinguished member of the State Bar while Noone had gained wealth and respect by quarrying and selling Ulster County stone. The time was early in 1874.

They turned to the brighter picture of Ulster County and the new city of Kingston since its creation a short two years prior. They spoke of the rapidly growing cement and brick industries, which, however, had not yet lessened the pressure upon bluestone quarrymen hard-pressed to supply a market up and down the Atlantic coast. The industries of agriculture and ice-cutting on the Hudson kept change in the pockets of Ulster County residents nearly year round. They agreed that the imposing new Alms House and the handsome City Hall nearing completion were solid evidence of more prosperity than in the nation at large.

They still glowed with optimism when they met Henry C. Connelly at the Delevan House in Albany. Connelly was a merchant and cement manufacturer and was serving as State Senator for their district. Schoonmaker, in the course of conversation said: "Senator, why cannot we have another savings bank in Kingston?"

The Senator replied: "There is room for one. Judge, you draw up the bill and I will see that it becomes a law."

True to his word, The Kingston Savings Bank was chartered on April 23rd, 1874 as Chapter 237, Laws of 1874.

The organizational meeting was held at the Courthouse on June 4th, 1874. The first Board of Trustees included Dr. Robert Loughran, Augustus T. Newton, Henry C. Connelly, James Van Leuven, James Myer, Jr., William H. Romeyn, Lucius Lawson, Luke Noone, Isaac Bernstein, John R. Freer, Charles T. Clearwater, Dr. Frederick Ingalls, William H. Fredenburgh, Benjamin Turner, Jacob Freileweh, and Augustus Schoonmaker, Jr.

Connelly was elected president, a post he held until his death 25 years later. He was then succeeded by Luke Noone. In spite of better conditions in Kingston, it took intestinal fortitude to launch a bank during the national uncertainty in the United States of 1874. But they had faith and confidence in their city and country. And history has justified their action to foresee a community need and assume the risk to fulfill it.

The fledgling bank secured quarters in the Romeyn Building at 293 Wall Street, at a rental of $300.00 per year. Dr. Ingalls loaned them a stove for heat during the coming winter. The Trustees agreed to loan the bank $50.00 each to cover operating expenses, if needed. A Treasurer, the only paid employee, was hired at a salary of $600.00 a year.

With all necessities thus provided, Kingston Savings Bank opened for business on June 29th, 1874.

Public response was immediately favorable. A statement just a very few years later showed deposits of over $93,000.00. Interest rates rose from 2.5% to 5% as economic conditions bettered nationally.

In 1885, the bank moved to the Argus Building, adjoining the Courthouse on the south side.

By the turn of this century, the Bank boasted assets of over $1,000,000.00, and they once again needed additional space. They purchased land a few feet further south, the site of the present building, and commenced construction on the most imposing and beautiful banking house in the City. Judge James A. Betts, the first president not one of the original founders, was elected in 1905 and served with distinction for a decade.

Judge Betts was succeeded by Myron Teller, who served as president until 1922 and was followed, in turn, by George Burgevin. In 1933, Virgil B. Van Wagenen became president and in 1938 was succeeded by Holt N. Winfield.

During this period, bank assets crossed the $7,000,000.00 mark in 1925 and $19,000,000.00 in 1950. The post-war growth in business volume in the City of Kingston and the rapid development of the outlying areas foretold a greater need for general banking services and for home mortgages. The Bank's Trustees wisely decided to build in space, convenience and facilities for that future. Interior remodeling was undertaken in 1925 and in 1954 an addition to the building was constructed.

By 1960, assets had increased to $32,000,000.00 and the large increases in patronage that generated those assets had made the basic 1900 building just too small to accommodate bank operations. Reluctantly, the Trustees realized that they had to forego the distinctive architecture of the old building, set back from Wall Street in pleasant greenery, and utilized every square foot within new walls and a roof. Thus, the present very modern and functional building came into being. By 1971, with assets of $89,000,000.00, a large addition was added on the parking area. With current assets of over $130,000,000.00, making the Bank the largest banking institution headquartered in Kingston, savings or commercial, it has come a long way in its first century.

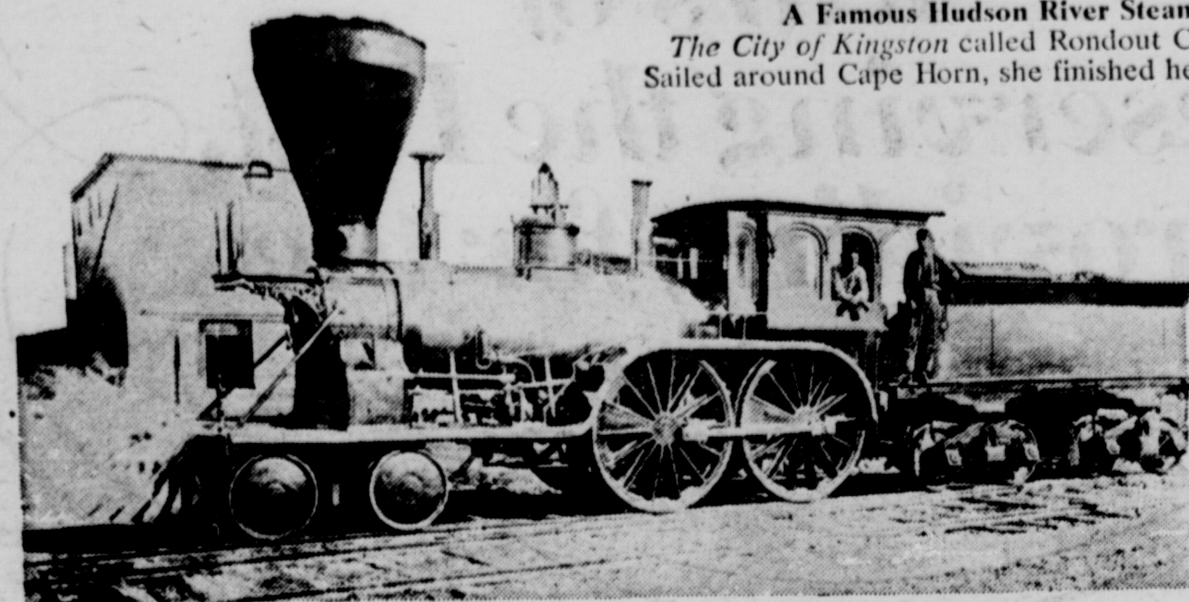

In 1960, Lloyd R. LeFever became President, and upon retiring at the end of 1973 as Chairman of the Board, he had served for 44 years as a Trustee, Attorney, President, and Chairman of the Board of the Bank.

Clifford A. Henze became President in 1969. He became Chairman of the Board this year and was succeeded by Joseph F. Brady.

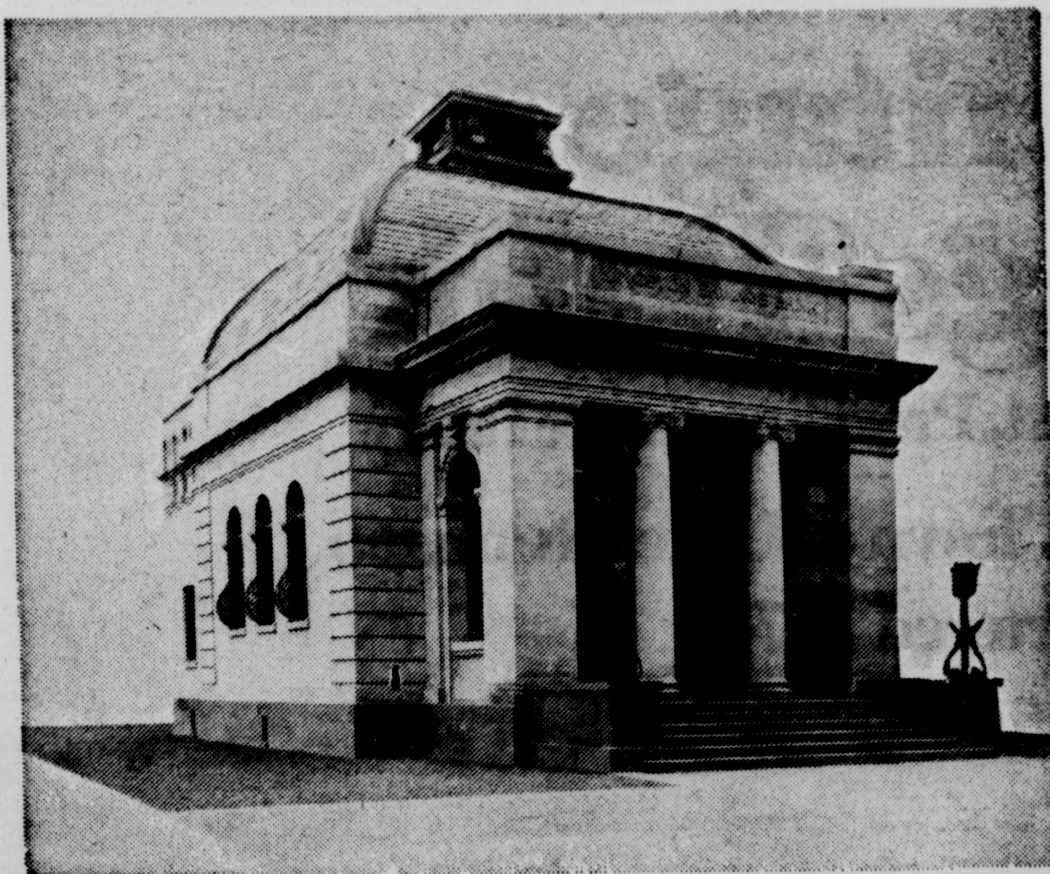

A distinguished roster of dedicated, civic-minded men and women, from Chairman of the Board to tellers, clerks and accountants over the years, have been responsible for making the Bank what it is today and what it will be tomorrow. It was the fastest growing savings bank in New York State in 1973, by percentage growth of deposits, and is proudly bearing the accolade of "#1 in New York State."

Among other "firsts," the Bank was the first savings bank in Ulster County authorized to open a branch office, the Bonanza Office in the Town of Ulster in 1967, and the first to open a branch in another Hudson Valley county, the Ramapo Office at Spring Valley in Rockland County, 1972.

Foreseeing further expansion in its services, the Kingston Savings Bank changed its name to the Heritage Savings Bank in 1972. Since then, approval has been granted for a third office at Fishkill. Last month, the Trustees of the Beacon Savings Bank and the Heritage Savings Bank announced their intention to merge under the name of the Heritage Savings Bank and are now awaiting the approval of the State regulatory authorities.

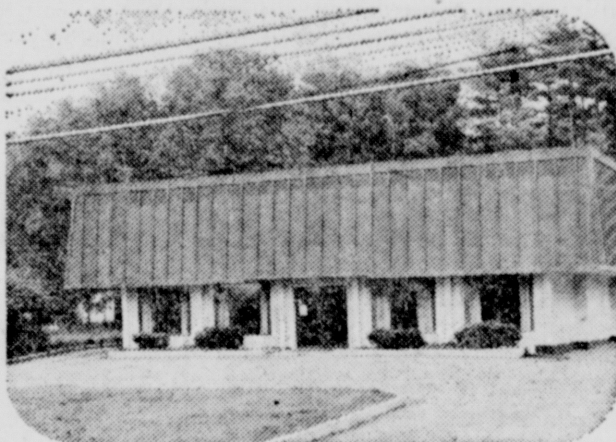

The people of the Heritage Savings Bank are proud and certain concerning the future of that community. You will see them, from top to bottom, contributing their time and talents to community betterment. They have adopted the motto "Preserving the Past, Providing for the Future." They have given many examples of their belief in that philosophy.

The Heritage Savings Bank started with a small rented office selling only confidence, security, and awareness of community needs and a new and cordial type of service. It has finished its first century on a much larger stage.

...And still growing.

Heritage Savings Bank was formed in 1874 by a group of concerned and dedicated men — men whose primary objective was to make available the finest banking service and facilities anywhere. They were courageous and confident men. Courageous because 1874 — not unlike the present day — was a time of political unrest and the country was still shaking off the effects of a depression. Confident because although on the surface 1874 appeared to be anything but a good year to start a bank, these men had faith that the country would overcome its ills to bounce back and prosper again. Their confidence was rewarded. Today, Heritage Savings Bank is governed by the same type of sincere, confident, concerned, dedicated and interested people. People pledged to the continuing growth of the bank and its services.

Not just to get bigger. But to better serve de-positors and communities. We look with pride on our first 100 years, look ahead with great anticipation to the next century and thank everyone who has helped along the way to make Heritage New York's Number One Savings Bank.

Prince Valiant IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: ON THE MORROW THEY BEGIN THEIR HOMEWARD JOURNEY, SO TODAY THEY CELEBRATE THEIR RELEASE FROM THE BOREDOM OF WINTER QUARTERS. THE SMOKY MEAD HALL ECHOES WITH JOYOUS SHOUTS AS CUPS ARE FILLED AGAIN AND AGAIN.

COURTESY DEMANDS THAT ARN ACKNOWLEDGE EACH TOAST, TOO MANY IN FACT, AND HE BECOMES SLEEPY.

NOW THE MOOD CHANGES. THEY BEGIN TO BOAST OF THEIR PROWESS, HOLDING ALOFT THEIR WEAPONS AND TELLING OF HEROIC DEEDS. SOON THEY HAVE WORKED THEMSELVES INTO A FRENZY, THE BATTLE LUST IS UPON THEM.

THEN JARNSAXA, THEIR CAPTAIN, ARISES: "LET US NOW PROVE WE MAKE NO IDLE BOASTS! OLAF REGAN AND HIS MEN ARE WINTERING THREE LEAGUES TO THE EAST. WE WILL MARCH AGAINST THEM AND PROVE OUR MIGHT, SHIELD TO SHIELD!"

ARN IS READY TO GO..... NOT ON THE RAID, BUT TO BED. HOWEVER HE IS SWEEPED ALONG WITH THE BERSERKERS.

THE DAY IS ALMOST SPENT AS THEY SET OUT ON THEIR FORAY, AND THE CASK OF MEAD IS TAKEN ALONG IN CASE THEIR SPIRITS LAG ON THE ROUGH JOURNEY ALONG THE ROCKY COAST.
